Preserving Season Again With Us

Realizing that the demand for our Crystal Sugar during the preserving season this year, would be heavier than former years, we accordingly made our preparation early, to avoid any unnecessary delay in filling all orders promptly.

We are now refining a special grade of Crystal Sugar. "We refer to our Berry Sugar." It is the standard of excellence and purity, and will prove of double value at preserving time by reason of its wonderful cooking qualities.

OUR BERRY SUGAR

is sold at the same price as our standard granulated. Better start in now to exploit this superfine product so that when the heavier consuming season comes, your trade will flow easily along the lines of least resistance

REMEMBER, we make a specialty of prompt shipments of the following grades of Crystal Sugars:

Standard Granulated, in barrels, sacks and 20-lb. gunnies; Berry Granulated (especially recommended for preserving), in barrels, sacks and 20-lb. gunnies; Yellows, in barrels and sacks; Icing, in barrels, boxes and pails; Powdered, in barrels, boxes and pails; Cut Loaf, in barrels and boxes.

THIS SOAP

has a reputation for absolute purity and superior quality that makes it easy to sell. Little known brands take time and talk to make a sale, and the busy merchant has no time for either. He prefers the Soap that people buy without urging---and so he sticks to SURPRISE.

A Message from Overseas

¶ There is no better factory in the world adapted solely to the production of Macaroni and similar pastes than that of Felix Codou in Marseilles, France. Every modern appliance is there—it is scrupulously clean—the original has been enlarged several times to meet the steadily increasing demand from particular people.

Codou's

¶ Vermicelli, Spaghetti, Fancy Letters and Figures, as well as Macaroni, are the specialties produced—each one has a national reputation for high quality.

Taganrog Russian Wheat is used exclusively—the wheat that yields the BEST results—the wheat that is peculiarly adapted to the desired purpose. "Codou's" —that is the name to think of when the best is wanted.

Not an Enterprise for the "Quitter"

¶ "If there is one enterprise on earth," says John Wanamaker, "that a 'quitter' should leave severely alone, it is advertising. To make a success of advertising one must be prepared to stick like a barnacle on a boat's bottom.

¶ "He must know before he begins it that he must spend money—lots of it.

¶ "Somebody must tell him that he cannot hope to reap results commensurate with his expenditure early in the game.

¶ "Advertising does not jerk; it pulls. It begins very gently at first, but the pull is steady. It increases day by day and year by year, until it exerts an irresistible power."

Enterprise Accuracy and Enterprise Quality are in These Coffee Mills

It is best to consider well, in buying a coffee mill for your store, whether there is character under the brilliant finish—whether the machine will do the work perfectly and continue to do it. That is what are made to do. Enterprise Mills are made under our own patents. Expert mechanics make every part. The grinding system gives absolutely uniform, perfect results. There is no crushing of the coffee, but an even grind to the fineness you want—every time.

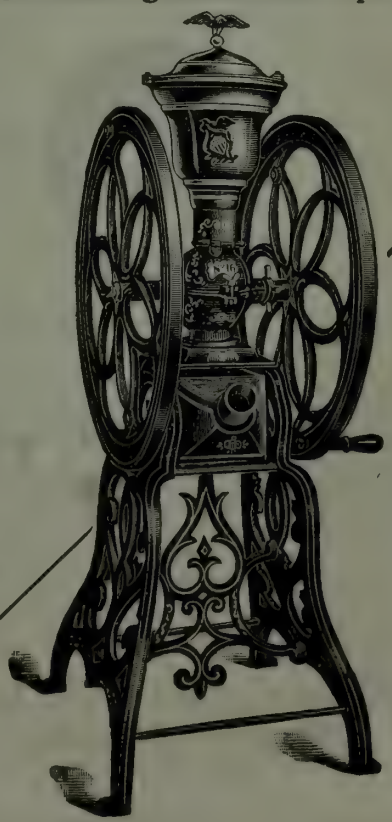
All parts interchangeable. And under our system of manufacture, there cannot be the deviation of the thousandth part of an inch. Replace a part next year—ten years from now—and it fits exactly. Strong, staunch grinders guaranteed equal to steel do the work evenly and perfectly. New grinders can be put in your machine at low cost. The easiest running machines made. Better to be sure of good quality—service—first of all. The name Enterprise is your guarantee of both. Let us send you catalogue showing you the line of Enterprise machines—many styles in hand and electric power.



There is a maximum service in ENTERPRISE Meat and Food Choppers. The one right cutting principle—four-bladed steel knife revolving against the inner surface of a perforated steel plate. Cuts like shears.

SODA-CRYSTALS (WASHING SODA)

Foreign Soda Crystals—and some of English manufacture—are being extensively offered for sale in this country which are grossly adulterated with Glauber-Salts (Sulphate of Soda), a cheap product which is not only entirely useless for washing purposes, but is even likely to injure the fabrics with which it comes in contact. The Adulterated Soda-Crystals, although nominally lower in price than BRUNNER, MOND'S PURE SODA CRYSTALS, are in reality much dearer owing to the large quantity of useless and injurious matter which they contain.

THE TEST OF SERVICE

Few electric coffee mills develop trouble in the first year of their service. To the new owner, enthusiastic over the beauty and convenience of his new mill, what is out of sight is more than likely to be out of mind.

But to the level head buyer the value of foresight in what is out of sight needs no explaining. He knows that on these parts depend the life and service of his mill. Many a COLES mill is to-day, after three or four years service, giving just as good satisfaction as when it came fresh from the factory. Is this kind of service worth anything to you?

THE PEDDLER IS STILL ABROAD

He is destroying your Tea Trade to-day even more so than four or five years ago. Put him out of business by selling the only tea that will do it—for the peddler cannot buy "Salada."

"SALADA"

BUILD UP THE TEA TRADE.

In last week's issue announcement was made of the formation of a tea company to operate tea routes in various parts of Ontario. This is taken to infer that there will be a large tea-peddling company in opposition to the retail trade.

The natural outcome of such a situation will mean less trade to the dealer unless he can counteract its influence by making sure he holds his present tea business and gradually adds more.

—From "The Canadian Grocer," June 28, 1912.

The Peddler, hawker and transient trader can be found to-day in increasing numbers in almost any community. They sell tea, coffee, curtains, clothing, caps, carpets—in fact, almost all lines carried in the average general store. Retail merchants should, therefore, make every effort to see that a portion of that profit finds its way back.

Spring Represented in Window Display

An Ingersoll Window Trimmer Taking Advantage of the Seasons—Has Committee of Town's Business Men Call to Tender Congratulations—How the Display was Arranged—Responsible for Many Sales.

By Bruce McDougall.

Editorial Note.—During the past few months The Grocer has harped a good deal on seasonable displays, their character and advantages. It is very gratifying to note that several of these displays are being used by Canadian dealers to good advantage, and we are pleased to receive the many photographs and descriptions of windows, and opinions on the value of displays that are being sent in by readers. The accompanying window is one of the most original sent in for some time, and it is only to be regretted that a better photograph was not obtained. The writer of the article, Bruce McDougall, is clerking in his father's store at Ingersoll, Ont. He dressed the window himself, and from what he says, it will be seen it created a good deal of business, besides being a splendid publicity advertisement for the store. The Grocer will welcome similar contributions by other clerks and dealers as well. They all assist in making the work in the store more practical and valuable.

The photograph I have sent you is of a window display I arranged about a month ago to represent spring. Prominent among the articles shown will be noticed greens, plants and flowers coming out in bloom, as well as a complete line of meats, smoked, cooked and canned.

In the past we have had good results from advertising window dressing, but I think from this display more results have been secured than from any other manner in which we have advertised. A committee of some of the most prominent men in Ingersoll called while the display was in to congratulate us on its originality, but apart from that, it sold a considerable quantity of goods.

The Breath of Spring.

In the background may be seen evergreen shrubs, and the Spring idea is carried out by using grass on the floor and the addition of birds, including a crane, hawk and owl. In the centre is a small pond of water with ducks swimming about. On the table are the seasonable goods heralded in by the coming of Spring. Butter is piled in zig-zag style on either side. In the centre is a wire basket of eggs, flanked by bacon, ham and pineapples, while dressed chickens and smoked meats hang in the background from the window top. On the right and left are canned meats, and in the front-centre pickles and lard.

From a close inspection of the display one will see large numbers of tulips strewn throughout the grass. On a ledge ouside the window were placed geraniums and garden vegetable plants.

Users of Show Cards.

Our store believes that show cards are advantageous to selling, as will be observed from the two that appear in the photograph. We believe strongly in seasonable displays, and it is our endeavor to show at all times goods which the window can assist us in selling rapidly. At the time of writing, for instance, we have what we think to be a pretty good showing of a package cereal food.

A Business Producer.

There can be no question of the advantages derived from these displays. We cannot overlook them when business men come in a body with words of praise or women are attracted inside to purchase the goods shown. I look after the window because I like the work and naturally one feels flattered when he sees actual results accruing from his labors. I thing, too, that originality combined with attractiveness and selling power are splendid combinations in any window.

I trust I may have the privilege of seeing other displays in The Grocer sent in by clerks, because they all help in the work.

Stock Quality Spices for Pickling Season

Women Lose Confidence in Their Dealer if Given Poor Goods —Are Always Anxious to Excel in Pickle and Sauce Manufacturing—Time to Begin Thinking of New Stocks—Market Is Firm—Care Necessary in Handling Spices.

Not yet, but soon, the pickling season will begin to loom up large to both the Canadian housewife and retail dealer. The price at which cucumbers, tomatoes and other kindred lines are selling at the present moment may not suggest pickling very strongly to the mind of the housewife. However, there will shortly be a change in the order of things and when it commences, it will develop rapidly. Market gardens are blossoming forth in splendid array, excellent progress is being made in most every district, Canadian crops will soon begin the annual outturn, prices will ease off to a more reasonable level and the pickling season will be here once more.

Time to think of Spice Stocks.

The time is indeed close enough at hand to claim the attention of the grocer. It is none too early for the retail dealer to look to his stocks in anticipation of the trade that will before a great time be in evidence. The selling campaign, no matter in what line it may be in which purchasing is done well ahead and plenty of time is left for planning, is always productive of good results. It is so with spices. Having bought early, the dealer need give no more thought to this part of the problem, but may direct his atention to his selling campaign.

Prices Look Firm.

A review of the spice markets just at moment would seem to indicate that nothing is to be gained as far as prices are concerned by holding back in purchases. Indeed, the general tone of spices as indicated by reports from primary markets is one of steadiness which in case of some lines is quite marked. With this condition existing now at a time when the big season of demand is just opening up there would seem no reason to look for anything but steadiness, at any rate in most lines of spices.

In purchasing his season's supply of spices, one of the big questions which comes up for the dealer to solve is, "How much shall I buy?" The purchases of the preceding year should serve as a fairly good gauge of the next year's business. From past years' experiences a dealer knows the lines which he can sell easily and those which are less prominent.

There should be an increase in the total spice sales of a grocer each year for, in this progressive country, the population is constantly mounting upward and spices is one of the lines benefited. However, it is well to keep on the safe side in buying. Wholesalers and manufacturers who have their customers' interests at heart will agree with this.

Get the Housewife's Ear.

A good shelf of homemade pickles, catsup and similar lines is the housewife's pride. As the season draws near she is "all on pins" until she gets started "putting down" the annual supply. The day to commence is awaited with as much impatience as the annual housecleaning. She may remark to her friends that she wishes it was over, but nevertheless she delights in the work. And when she once begins she puts forth her best efforts to produce a product that when friends come in for a meal, she can point to with pride as her own handiwork.

Elevate Standard of Quality.

With her reputation thus at stake, it is plain that she will want the very best goods with which to work. For this reason the wise grocer will make sure that he gives her the best spices and vinegar. If she should waver in this regard in an attempt to buy cheaply, it will work much to his disadvantage; it will break down the housewife's dependence in him and his goods. To such a housewife, what difference does a few cents more on a pound of spice or a gallon of vinegar make? The grocer who buys high quality spices can recommend them with confidence which means much in promoting sales.

Require Some Attention.

Spices are not the easiest thing in the store to handle, but by proper arrangement this handicap may be reduced to a minimum. It must be remembered that spices contain a volatile oil which is really the strength of the spice. This oil easily evaporates, and to avoid this the spice should be contained in a receptacle that will prevent evaporation. The grocer should now make provisions for this before his season's supply comes in.

The tin canister in which spices are sometimes sold is a good receptacle provided it does not become dinted in such a way as to admit air. The most attractive method is perhaps air tight bins with mirrored fronts, while some grocers use glass bottles with glass stoppers which not only preserve the strength but display the spice to fairly good advantage. With bulk goods, a separate scoop for each spice is advisable for a trace of turmeric amongst cloves for instance will not impress a customer with the grocer's carefulness.

It is well to prepare now for the trade so that when the demand sets in, the grocer will be ready to take care of it.

"Twenty Years Ago" in the Grocery Trade

The following items of interest are taken from The Canadian Grocer of July 8, 1892:—

"The Windsor merchants will close their stores at 6.30 each evening, except Saturdays, during July and August."

Editor's Note.—Even 20 years ago Windsor merchants realized that some time for recreation during the warm weather was desirable. This year the grocers are observing a half holiday on Thursday afternoon during the summer months.

"At the Sarnia Court of Revision the other day, Edward Adams and A. M. Smith, wholesale grocers of London, have each a quantity of sugar in store in Sarnia, which was down in the assessment roll at $1,000 for each lot. Sugar is cheap now, and the valuations were appealed against, and reduced to $700 in each case."

Editor's Note.—Sugar on the Montreal market at that time was quoted at $4.50 whereas now it is $5.05.

"John Scandrett, the well-known grocer of London, Ont., died on the 23rd., after a very short illness. A week ago last Monday, he was attending to his business as usual, and, in fact up to the day before his death had no ill-health."

"Hon. Mr. Foster has given notice of a resolution extending the period for granting a bounty on sugar made from Canadian-grown beets, which expires on July 1 next, until June 13, 1895."

Editor's Note.—Mr. Foster is now Minister of Trade and Commerce, and at present time is engaged in bringing about a trade agreement with the British West Indies in which sugar will likely be affected.

In The Grocer of July 8, 1892, tomatoes on the Toronto market were quoted at $1.05 as compared with $1.65 to $1.75 to-day; horseshoe salmon at $1.60 as against $2.55 to-day while lobsters which are now selling around $2.90 were then quoted at $1.90 per dozen.

The Sugar Market and Future Prospects

Developments in Prices During First Half of 1912 and Causes—Difference in Market Compared to First Six Months of 1911—Cuban Crop Better Than Anticipated—Future Depends Largely on European Beet Crop.

It was just one year ago that the sugar market began its spectacular upward flight, reaching before a halt was called, the highest point registered in 22 years. Little did the housewife or the grocer, or even the refiner himself, dream one year ago that sugar would make history before 1911 was out; which merely goes to show just how uncertain a proposition the sugar market is.

It was Europe that started all the trouble. Up to this time it had been peacefully reposing in the background creating but little attention when suddenly, like the proverbial bolt from the blue, the adverse reports from this source descended upon the sugar world. Rather doubted at first, they developed into grim reality as the record prices reached during the year will testify.

Change From Year Ago.

The order of things has been partly reversed during the first six months of this year but it must be remembered that this is an abnormal year. From February onward last year the tendency of the market was upward while since February this year the trend has been decidedly downward.

When the Cuban crop began its outturn this year, prices began to recede from their abnormal level. Three ten-cent drops were registered in January only to be followed by a 20-cent reaction in February when the Cuban prospects looked somewhat less favorable; while lurking in the background was the possibility that Cuba might start some 'high jinks,' such as Europe did last year.

Then in March things in Cuba began to look rosy, confidence in the prospects were strengthened and prices dipped downward ten points, followed by a similar amount in both April and May and a 20-cent decline during June. While refined sugar is to-day 60 cents below the price of early January, it still shows a 45-cent margin over the prices ruling one year ago.

What Will Future Bring Forth.

But the question in which the grocer is now deeply interested is the future course of the market. The preserving season is opening up and for the next few months there will be a big demand for sugar and it means much to the grocer to buy right. If the market is going up, he wants to get in on the ground floor. If there are to be still further declines, he will want to adopt a waiting policy.

Let us consider what happened during the last siege of high prices, namely in the crop year of 1904-1905. In January, 1905 prices had reached the high point of that campaign, $5.75 on Montreal market. The market then began to slump and continued its downward movement during every month of the year, the low figure of $4.30 being reached in December, while 4.20 the lowest point for several years was reached in January, 1906. The same thing may follow this year and again it may not. The October beet crop and the January cane crop will decide whether history is to repeat itself.

One of the depressing features during past few months has been the good outturn of the Cuban crop and only recently sugar authorities have felt it necessary to increase their estimates of the total yield. The statistical situation keeps on improving, the visible supplies of the world now being 127,627 tons less than a year ago, a reduction from 500,000 tons deficiency two months ago. Added to this the European beet crops show favorable progress in all directions, and this no doubt has much to do with the weakness of prices abroad.

Therefore the immediate outlook is one of easiness but what the future may hold in store is uncertain. Last year's performance shows just what a big change is possible in the situation in a short time. Cuba is now becoming more of a finished issue and attention is being directed to the beet crop in Europe. So far reports from that direction have shown no reason for easiness.

The first of the week found Cuban raws in New York quoted at $3.80. Beet sugar quotations were 10s 10½d. for spot and 10s 11¼d. for July. "Raw quotations," said a sugar man, "warrant lower prices in refined. The market is now in the process of readjustment.

"As for what is ahead," he continued, "all depends on the development of the European beet crop."

In absence of any immediate indications of higher prices. dealers will no doubt continue a hand-to-mouth policy, keeping a sharp eye on Europe, however, for any unexpected developments.

TORONTO, JULY 5, 1912

THE BARGAIN MANIA.

It would have to be a very elastic mind that would accept everything as gospel told by many customers of a retail grocer. It seems as if the bargain hunting craze had obtained such a hold on many feminine shoppers that their consciences slip a cog sometimes in attempting to get retailers to cut prices.

The following letter received by a Toronto grocer from a dealer in a summer resort district, in Northern Ontario is apropos to this question:—

> Dear Sir:— A lady, from Toronto, who is spending the summer here, claims she can purchase any of ———— soups at your and other stores in Toronto for ten cents.
> The lines of these soups that I handle, cost me $1.25 per dozen and I cannot sell them for ten cents. I would feel grateful to know if Toronto grocers' can buy these soups and retail them at ten cents.
> I will greatly appreciate your reply and will hold myself in readiness to do you a favor at any time.

As a matter of fact, the soups in question sell wholesale generally at $1.25, in Ontario, and some sell at $1.20, but the majority at the former figure. It is needless to say that the Toronto dealer written —he is one of the largest and most successful in that city—does not sell these goods at ten cents, nor does any other dealer so far as The Grocer knows.

This is just another of the brow-beating cases that so frequently occur in retail stores, and it stands to the credit of the summer resort dealer that he stood his ground. Too many fall easy victims of the chronic bargain hunter instead of investigating the case. In the majority of such cases there is either no truth in the statement or the other dealer is selling an inferior article. The latter, of course, couldn't occur in a branded article such as the soup above referred to.

BUYERS OF GOOD FIXTURES.

A manufacturer of store fixtures who knows the retail trade in both Canada and the United States, is responsible for the statement that the dealers in Canada demand better quality fixtures than those in our neighboring country.

This man should know whereof he speaks, because he has had considerable selling experience in both countries and his assertion adds much weight to the declaration The Canadian Grocer has frequently made, that Canadian dealers—that is, the progressive men in the trade—are of a particularly high grade order.

Merchants in Canada do not at all install new fixtures or store equipment for the mere sake of appearances. They have learned by experience that these things mean more business, because of the facilities in service they offer and because of their cleanliness. They spend money to make money, and the most progressive when they do purchase, usually get the best they can. Farsightedness is a characteristic possessed by men of action and courage, and these are the men who eventually make the successes.

GOOD QUALITY LARD.

That lard sold in Canada is on the whole of good quality is shown by a report by the Inland Revenue Department on 268 samples collected from different parts of Canada and examined.

One sample was compound, but was sold as such. Two samples sold as lard contained cottonseed oil, and should have been sold as such. Three samples contained an excess of water, but the amount in two instances were so slightly beyond the legal limits that it was regarded by the analyst as accidental. All other samples, 262 in number conformed to the requirements of legal lard, and were therefore genuine.

The inspection by the department shows that manufacturers of compound lard are careful to state correctly the nature of the article on the container. The occasional sale of a compound lard, says the report, is to be regarded rather as an act of carelesness on the part of the retail dealer, than as intentional on the part of the manufacturer.

CARELESS METHODS OF PARTNERS.

Confidence in one's fellow workers where money is concerned, may in a great many cases be warranted, but it is not always good business.

In the retail trade there are so many partnerships being run in a loose fashion that the question commands serious reflection. There is much room for improvement in methods where partnerships exist. Cases, for instance, where the partners of a business take whatever they want from the store to feed their families without making any record of the transaction, are frequent. They never charge themselves up with anything, and it is safe to say they don't use exactly the same value of goods in a year. One, therefore, has an advantage over the other.

The business man of to-day, even if he is the only proprietor of the store, charges himself with the goods he uses at regular selling prices, and allows himself a set salary.

There is greater reason why partners should follow this example. By all means, when a partnership has been formed a set salary should be assigned each member. Otherwise there is almost sure to be trouble later on when one becomes suspicious that the other is getting more than his share. This method of dipping into the cash register for money from time to time does not belong to the present. It is antiquated and should be relegated to the proverbial ash heap. A definite salary based on qualifications removes doubt, as does also the charging of everything taken for the table. At the end of the year the money is returned in increased sales and profits and sound, practical methods have prevailed.

AGREEMENT WITH WEST INDIES.

Although no official announcement has come from the Dominion Government as to the exact nature of the trade agreement with the British West Indies, yet an apparent authoritative statement has been given out in the Barbadoes by one who was present at the conferences.

One important announcement made by this party is that the present preference granted by Canada on raw sugar from the British West Indies has been doubled, and the twenty per cent. refiners' privilege abolished. This, if ratified, should, from all appearances, result in Canadian refiners practically confining their purchases of raw sugar to the British West Indies. Some at least of the Canadian refiners are opposed to this, claiming that producers in the British West Indies would be in a position to manipulate prices of raws unfairly.

From further information it is stated that a duty has been placed on feed molasses coming into Canada from the United States, and that the benefit of the Canadian preferential tariff, which is almost four-fifths of the general tariff, will also probably be enjoyed by such West Indian products as cocoanuts, raw spices, arrowroot, salt, sponges, honey, fresh vegetables, essential oils, etc.

The West Indies in return for these concessions will grant a preference of twenty-four cents per barrel of 196 pounds on Canadian flour, the present duty on which varies in the Islands from eighty cents to a dollar a barrel. In addition a long list of Canadian products, embracing all kinds of grain, flour and feed , animals, fresh and salted meats and fish, cordage, brooms, boots and shoes, agricultural implements, machinery, automobiles, pianos, all kinds of wood and leather goods, cement, plated wares, soaps, paints, vehicles, paper, calcium carbide and a number of other manufactures will be admitted into the islands under a preferential tariff twenty per cent. lower than on foreign articles. Great Britain, it is understood, will enjoy a similar preference in the West Indies.

The preference granted to Canadian flour should result in almost the total capture of this trade by Canadian millers. Already United States milling and produce interests are frightened, and have had a lawyer in the West Indies for some time trying to intimidate West Indian merchants by threats if the reciprocity agreement goes through.

STRENGTH IN AGE.

When a customer deals at a certain store for twenty years or more, it must be concluded that he or she has confidence in that store. The same applies to a trade paper.

On looking over the files of The Canadian Grocer twenty years back for items for our "Twenty Years Ago" column, the names of many subscribers to The Grocer are mentioned, many of those still living having been readers of this paper during the past two decades. They have been subscribers all those years for the reason that they have been able to place confidence in the paper, just as many of their old customers have been placing confidence in them. Verily, there is strength in age.

The new "Twenty Years Ago" column is already proving a most interesting one. Coincidences are bound to occur, and this column should be looked for every week.

THE MAN WHO STOOD STILL.

A story is told of a southern merchant, who, after the war remained just where he had been when the war commenced. He continued to carry on business in the same easy-going way. He continued to show the same calicos and the same ribbons. All about him there was advancement, but he closed his eyes deliberately to this. He did not mark time, but stood still. Marking time denotes readiness to advance; but whatever in this man had urged advancement was atrophied. He stood still.

Years passed. Still the man showed the calicos and the ribbons. Still he conducted business in the same old way—or would have, had business come. Finally some business did come, for he fell so far behind the procession that he became an antique. His store was pointed out to strangers in the city who visited it, and bought a little out of curiosity.

It is a strange tale—the tale of a man who forced himself to believe that the civil war marked the end of all things which could influence him. But it is stranger to hear that there are dealers to-day who have adopted this stand-still policy. "There are plenty such men even in Canada," states a dealer who has traveled far.

If these men stand still long enough, they may—like the southern merchant—make their stores famous as fossils of an earlier age; but they run a risk. They may meet the fate of the Irishman's horse. You remember the Irishman wanted to get his horse to the point where it could live without eating. He worked hard at this, and just got the horse to the desired point when the pesky animal spoiled it all by dying.

To-day there is little use for the man who stands still. There are times when it is wise to mark time, until it becomes quite evident in which direction the advance should be made; but standing still is only appropriate beside a grave.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

The dealer who sells goods not as good as the customer expects is the sure loser of trade.

Handicap of Borrowed Capital and Illness

A Business Statement Lacking Details—Whether There is a Loss or Gain is a Conundrum—Expense Account Shows Discrepancies—A Loss in 1911—More Information Wanted.

*By Henry Johnson, Jr.

Quebec, May 25, 1912.

The Canadian Grocer:

Dear Sirs,—Some time ago I found the enclosed statement of one of your reader's business for his first year. This seems to work out all right in his particular case, but I have compared my figures of my last year's business, as well as the figures of my business since I started in business, January 1, 1909.

In both of these statements, which I enclose, you will find that I have included my living in with the general expense, and all of the expenses are included in the one amount.

I note that you have a question department connected with your paper. If this is not too much trouble for you, I would like to have you look over my figures and if my figures are not correct, will you kindly send me a corrected statement of the same, according to the enclosed statement.

I find that on the three years' business I have made $679.41, and on my last year's business I find that I have lost $389.50. Neither one of the amounts compares with my figures on my old way of figuring, and I would like to get your figures.

I would also add that I am doing business on $900, borrowed capital. I have had a great deal of sickness, which extra is added to my personal expense, which is included in the general expense. I trust I may hear from you at your convenience, and thanking you in advance, I am,

Very truly yours,

C. F. C.

P.S.—I would kindly ask you not to publish my name or place of business, but, if you choose, you may publish the statement.

A Two-year Statement.

The statement to which my friend refers is an old one which, while admirable in form, seemed, on close examination, to strain some points, and the fact that the firm failed later on, should seem to indicate that the strain reached the breaking point. So we can pass that and see what may be suggested to this correspondent.

*The writer of this article is one of the most successful dealers on the continent. He has spent almost 30 years in the retail grocery business and is well equipped to answer questions and smooth out difficulties with which others may have met. If a special request is made names of inquirers will be omitted when their letters are printed for discussion.

Have All the Facts.

I wish he had given me the whole story. He says these figures do not agree with some other he has made. Question is, are all the facts here? If so, we can maybe help a bit. Otherwise, this will be waste of labor.

I cannot but think that the statement that he is doing business on $900 of borrowed capital is incomplete. That is to say, he may have $900 of borrowed money, but he must also have had some other capital. For you can see that, on the basis of only $900, he turned his entire capital over 17 times annually on the average in 1909, 1910 and 1911. Then he shows that he has turned his stock only a little better than six times in 1911. This would make his other two years show up at over 20 turns of the entire investment in a year. If he had only $900 to begin with how did he acquire that stock of $2,333.39; not to mention some fixtures, etc., that must have been there at that time?

What Profit Appears to Be.

The statement does not list any debts in detail. If the "Bills Payable" of $1,913.26 covers everything; if the tools and fixtures account is conservative; if the bills receivable are all good, then it looks to me like the net profit made during the three years is $1,629.86. I may be missing something; but that is how it looks. Here is how I get it:

Stock and fixtures accounts, January 1, 1912, amount to $4,178.90. Cash on hand is $302.46. Bills receivable show $1,396.15. Add these together and we have tangible resources of $5,877.51. Going back to January 1, 1909, we find that we had stock of $2,333.39. We must account for that and also for the $1,913.26 that we now owe. These two make a total of $4,247.65. Take that from the other total of $5,877.51, and we have a remainder of $1,629.86, as stated, for net gain during three years.

Further Details Desired.

I think I shall have to ask for fuller details. I want to know just what went into the business January 1, 1909. Give me a clean statement showing just what you had, what you paid, what you owed, etc. Then give me details of expenses also. There is often something wrong where "everything is put into one account." Think it all over, so as not to miss anything. Remember that I know only what you tell me, so my aid may be rendered of little value if the data be not full and complete.

One very encouraging sign I think I see—no, two. One is, that my friend is not inclined to fool himself much. He depreciates things. He figures things out logically, without seemingly sparing himself anywhere. He appears to look facts in the eye. Then when things do not work out right, he immediately asks for help. This is an excellent point. Advantage No. 2 is that he has $302 on hand in money. That looks as if he is not exactly "broke." A man is not lost who has some ready money on hand. It may not be enough to carry things over all at once, but its presence is usually reassuring—indicates that the buffer is apt to be present all the time.

Expense Looks Low.

Examining his figures a bit further, we find that the sales exceed the cost of merchandise by $9,158.41. That is so near 19 per cent. that we can call it that for the present purpose. The expenses given as $6,648.30 we shall call $6,650 for easy figuring. This makes an expense ratio of 13.85 per cent., which is so very moderate that it looks suspicious—without casting any evil suggestions, I shall have to be "shown" on this. But taking it as it is stated, the difference between the 13.85 per cent. and the 19 per cent. is 5.15 per cent.—so we should have a net profit of 5.15 per cent., or $3,120 for the three years. As I have stated above, the best I can get out of these figures is a net gain of $1,629.86, so we seem to be short $1,490.14. Of course, I am not unmindful of the fact that my correspondent claims to have made only $679.41; but I am getting what I can out of the figures.

Another indication, by the way, that expenses are not all included under that one account is the depreciation on fixtures of $49.84. That item should have gone into the expense account—if we are going to have it "all in one account." Maybe interest on investment is not included. How about that? How much?

Poor Showing in 1911.

The year 1911 shows up rather badly. There is a spread between amount paid for stock and sales of only about $3,000, which shows only 15.30 per cent. gross margin against expenses of 14.1 per cent.; but at the same time the stock has been depleted about $300, which makes our gross margin only about 13.8 per cent., so that we show an actual loss. There is something radically wrong with this business. For even with sickness and all that, the expense shown this last year is only a trifle over 14 per cent., which cannot be called heavy as things run nowadays. Either expenses are not all reckoned, or some figures are omitted, or there is some shrinkage not noted.

Maybe somebody is stealing from my friend.

Let us have the remainder of the facts, Mr C., and I shall try very hard to help you land on the real difficulty.

Employe Who Missed Two Days in 21 Years

Two Years Ago He Became Grocery Store Proprietor — Not Afraid of Work—Opinion on Delivery—Making Casual Customers Permanent—Evidence of Selling Value of the Window.

Barrie, Ont., July 4.—(Special)—If a man as an employe misses only two days' work in 21 years, he has a record to be proud of. Anyone would say he is gifted with one of the main characteristics of a successful employe—that of being fond of hard work.

Before entering the grocery business some two years ago, Alfred Rayner, a Barrie grocer, held the above record in his former work. During only two of the working days in 21 years was he absent from his daily labors—and he has been on the job since he opened his grocery store.

Mr. Rayner's experience as a dealer in groceries has taught him a few successful methods in holding and gaining trade. One of them is prompt delivery.

"If a woman telephones for her groceries and wants them at a certain time, I figure that the horse might just as well be delivering them as standing at the door He eats just as much whether he goes or stays and I find that being prompt has made permanent customers out of casual buyers. Some tell me they appreciate the way the goods are delivered."

No Saturday Night Delivery.

More than a year ago, the Grocers' Association in Barrie arranged last delivery hours by which all were to abide. For instance, the majority decided in favor of no delivery before noon of goods ordered after ten o'clock, and none in the afternoon if ordered later than four o'clock. This, however didn't last. It is Mr. Rayner's opinion that had the hours been 11 and 5 respectively better results would have followed, because then customers would have had no excuse. He felt that 10 and four were too early to take the delivery wagon off the road. Goods ordered after four had to be held over until the following morning, creating, he maintained, a congestion at a busy time.

At any rate the regulation did not hold and now each dealer suits himself in the matter.

"But one good result of the association," says Mr. Rayner, "is that we have no delivery after 6 o'clock on Saturday nights. This gives the drivers a chance to get home early and as everybody in Barrie knows of the rule, the grocers have few if any requests for late Saturday night deliveries."

Direct Sales From Displays.

Mr. Rayner has many evidences of the power of the window to make sales. Recently he displayed some 5-cent jars of marmalade and the results even surprised himself. He placed a price ticket on the display and he believes this is the reason so many asked about the line. One woman thought the small jars contained honey and came to purchase a jar. Mr. Rayner, of course, had a stock of honey and sold her a large pail as well as a jar of the marmalade.

On another occasion he placed a 10-cent ticket on some baskets of pineapples. The pines were small and he could well afford to sell at that figure.

"In a short time," he says, "I had them all sold, three people buying the lot for preserving."

Less Work in Bookkeeping.

Mr. Rayner has a bookkeeping system which he claims eliminates much of the work and worry he formerly had. It is the system which brings up to date, the amount of the accounts of all credit customers. With every purchase, the customer has her account totalled to date so that there is not the same tendency to allow the grocery bill to accumulate to large proportions.

Stopping Big Alterations Significant

Prospects of the T. Eaton Co. Moving to Corner of Carlton and Yonge Streets—City May be Asked to Assist in Straightening College Street—What About the Old Building?

Toronto, July 4.—(Special)—There is apparently "something doing" so far as the T. Eaton Co., and the block of land at the corner of Carlton and Yonge Streets are concerned. As pointed out some time ago in The Grocer the block north of Carlton on Yonge Street has been acquired by some party and it was surmised that the department store was the purchaser.

The stopping of extensive alterations planned on the old building at considerable loss to the company, would indicate that they intend to make a start at a no far distant date.

Large Ground Floor.

One of the features of the proposed new building, it is claimed, will be an extensive ground floor space. The company realize that the major portion of their business is done on the street floor, and it has even been said that the percentage runs as high as 75, and that this important point will be kept in view in the designing of the new building.

The main business corner of the city is Yonge and Queen, where both the Eaton and Simpson stores are located. This corner is the favorite haunt of those in search of the so-called bargains. It is the supposed idea of the Eaton Co. to transfer this centre of business activity to their new location, and the city will be asked to assist them in this.

May Want College Street Straightened.

They will probably ask the city to remove the jog between College and Carlton streets, or in other words to make College one continuous and main thoroughfare. Of course, this would be much to the advantage of the Eaton store. Also, it would be in the nature of public improvements, and the other retail merchants of the city would necessarily have to contribute to the cost of providing the big store with a better location than it would otherwise have.

Nor will the mail order portion of the business be forgotten in the general expansion. It has been suggested that the old building may be used for this purpose, but this is unlikely. Provisions for this will probably be made in the new building. Some of the old buildings may be retained for manufacturing purposes.

A GREAT CANNING COUNTY.

It is estimated that $100,000 is being invested in canning factories in Prince Edward County, Ontario, this year. Six new plants are going up, small ones at South Bay, Northport, Picton, Consecon and Wellington, and the Beaver Co.'s factory at Bloomfield costing $40,000. With the completion of these, Prince Edward county will have 20 canneries.

QUEBEC MARKETS.

POINTERS:—

Sugar—Still weak.

Seeded Raisins—Slightly lower.

Brown Wrapping Paper—Lower.

Montreal, July 4.—The first week of July has started off quite satisfactorily for wholesale grocers, general lines as well as picnic and camping goods showing a fair movement.

There has been no further change in sugar, but market still gives indications of weakness. Local price is now $5.05, as compared with $4.65 one year ago.

Brown wrapping paper is quoted down 15 cents per cwt.

SUGAR.—Last week a full shilling decline on beet sugar took place in Europe, and New York weakened in sympathy. The market at time of writing is still weak, and traders seem to be going slowly because some weight must be placed on the chances of a good crop on the Continent, and on the probability of the Cuban crop now ending being far in excess of the previous record crop in 1910. Prices are still considered high, and there is not enough confidence in the situation to warrant the trade purchasing more than will meet current requirements. Of course, a further drop in price would mean increased consumption, but conditions have been so uncertain during the past year that no one feels inclined to purchase in quantities on chance of the increase coming along. This being so, sugar may be offered on low terms to induce buying. On the other hand, it must be remembered that there is a fair amount of preserving going on, but owing to bad weather and adverse fruit growing conditions, busy period is somewhat ahead yet, and consumption should then be on a large scale.

It looks, therefore, that there should be a readjustment soon as the steady declining on the Continent and dropping of raws in Cuba make it seem as if refined prices cannot be maintained. Still it is more than hard to make any definite statement so great is the fluctuation in this particular line.

DRIED FRUIT.—As stated in previous issues, optimistic reports have come to hand relative to prospects of new crop of Californian prunes, and as a result offerings are small, lower prices being expected. While there are few particulars to be had, it is rumored that England is buying prunes freely. Apricots are not receiving as much attention as usual, and the market on the whole is dull, while peaches are easy, and will remain so unless some reports reach the trade to kill the present hopes for a fine crop.

Raisins have not been moving freely of late, and the supplies on spot have no doubt brought about the decrease in two varieties, as indicated in quotations.

NUTS.—The market at present is in a rather uninteresting state, as we are now in a dull season when business is mostly done with manufacturers and confectioners. The new crop of walnuts, according to an advance from Bordeaux, will only amount to one half of last year's yield, but prices are not likely to be made until the nuts are in store. According to other estimates the coming crop of Sicily filberts will also be away below last year's output, so that it seems that prices will stiffen up a bit and that shortly a better turn of business should take place.

RICE AND TAPIOCA.—It may be quite possible that things have been somewhat exaggerated as far as the Eastern rice situation is concerned, and while we have reported according to advices received from the East by responsible firms, etc., nevertheless here is a slowness now noticeable in the market which makes one somewhat suspicious. Reports from the South indicate higher prices before new crop is harvested, while there is also a better demand in New Orleans. However, it is hard to say just what will be the outcome until a full explanation is to hand of the Eastern situation, although we feel confident that stocks must be pretty nearly depleted.

ONTARIO MARKETS.

POINTERS—

Sugar—Still weak.

Wrapping Paper—Firmer and higher.

Domestic Sardines—Prices lower.

Toronto, July 4—The first week of July finds a satisfactory movement of groceries. At least local jobbers have no complaint to offer regarding business, it being regarded as well up to standard for season. General lines are moving out well, while there is more life to camping and picnic supplies. Preserving season is developing and sugar is selling better, while sealers, rubbers rings and other preserving supplies are in demand.

Manilla wrapping paper has continued to firm and is quoted higher again by some manufacturers. Early in June there was an advance of 10 per cent. At least this was the upward movement noted by one firm which has since added another 5 per cent. on to list prices.

SUGAR.—There has been no change in refined during past week, price ruling at $5.15 locally as against $4.75 one year ago. Market is still weak and further readjustment is generally anticipated. Good showing of Cuba and continued favorable reports from European beet crops are the chief bearish features.

There is a fairly good consumptive demand but retailers in absence of any indication of higher prices pursue a hand-to-mouth policy.

DRIED FRUITS. — As far as spot dried fruits are concerned there is nothing or little to report. There is a certain demand but it naturally lacks life.

Future prunes show little change. Packers are quoting slightly easier prices on some lines of apricots. Prospects are for a good-sized crop of California raisins.

Valencia raisins look good so far and a price of 25 shillings is quoted which is much the same as last year's opening price which was,however followed by a slight decline.

A good crop of currants is expected and price is slightly below last year. There is a tendency to look for lower prices. "I am not recommending customers to buy," said one broker.

COFFEE. — There is no particular change in coffee situation locally or on primary markets but a fair undercurrent of steadiness prevails. Deliveries have again been on the increase but trade appears to be becoming more impressed that crop soon to be on the market will be a small one and that it will be late in getting to the seaports. CANNED GOODS.

TORONTO.—Competition is apparently keen in domestic sardines. A few weeks ago there was a cut of 15 cents per case made by packers. At least, some firms cut the price that much, and others followed suit. Since then another ten cents has been lopped off prices. It appears like a price-cutting war, and there is a probability of it being further continued. Although this is not supposed to be a big year in sardine pack, anxiousness of packers to sell would seem to indicate that they look for a big yield.

Opinions vary on spot corn, and peas, or conditions vary with different houses. This is shown by statement of one house that "We are asking a premium on corn," and that of another house that, "There may be a surplus of corn."

Canners are commencing to pack peas, which look fairly good. Tomatoes and corn are not far enough advanced to form any accurate idea as yet.

Fact that a large yield of strawberries could not be expected has been pointed out before. Dry, hot weather of past two weeks has been rather bad for advancement of raspberries and lawtonberries.

Winnipeg, July 3.—Last week was one of considerable activity in wholesale grocery trade and both country and city orders have been coming in satisfactory volume. Two factors have however come into existence that make outlook anything but encouraging for future business. The extreme heat and generally dry weather prevailing will if longer prolonged seriously affect the crops. The other factor is breaking out of serious labor troubles in the city which unless speedily setttled will throw several thousand men out of employment and cause serious loss and inconvenience generally.

Sugar is weak and a further decline is anticipated. At the same time there is an excellent demand for this commodity.

Syrup has declined 10 cents per case for 2-lb. tins and proportionately for other sizes.

Canned meats have generally advanced.

NOVA SCOTIA MARKETS.

Halifax, July 3.—Some local dealers are importing pork products from Chicago. Lard and canned meats packed in Chicago have been sold in Halifax before, but now dealers are importing hams and bacons. With the duty the stock comes high, but the dealers say it finds a ready sale.

Sugar situation continues unsteady, and tendency is downward. United Empire is one cent per pound less than a month ago, and three-fifths of a cent on other grades. Standard granulated is now quoted at $5.20, and United Empire at $5.00.

Molasses is steady at 35 to 36 cents for fancy Barbadoes, but it is likely to go higher in the near future.

The bottom has dropped out of potato market and there is a big slump in prices. Farmers who were holding for higher prices are marketing them now, and the price has dropped to 80 cents per bushel. Some new American potatoes are now on the market.

Reduction in the Price of New Potatoes

Result of Increased Supplies—Old Stock Off at Some Centres in Sympathy—Strawberry Season Said to Be at Its Height—Pines are Coming to a Close—Tomatoes in Better Supply—California Fruits Coming Along.

One of the important features of the week is an appreciable reduction in prices of new potatoes. Under the liberal receipts which have been pouring out of Virginia the market could not hold up and more reasonable figures were the result. There is a big tadre now being done in this line. In a couple of weeks New Jersey will begin to contribute to supplies. In sympathy with trend of new potatoes, old stock at some centres has continued the easier trend which the first drop in new ones started.

The strawberry season has reached its height or almost so—at least in some of the provinces. Season this year has been considerably behind last year but warm bright weather of past week has ripened up the berries and prices have accordingly eased. With 50 to 60 percent. of a crop beng expected, no really cheap berries can be expected. One Ontario fruit firm comes out emphatically this week in its circular and says: "Dry weather together with short acreage and extra heavy demand is causing prices to remain firm and we advise our customers to order their preserving supplies this week as prices will not be any lower this week."

With exception of potatoes, there is no material change in general vegetables. Tomatoes are coming along in better supply from Texas and Mississippi at lower prices. Florida shipments are done.

There are a few pineapples coming but season is fast approaching the end of its tether. Oranges are rather inclined to firmness.

MONTREAL.

GREEN FRUITS.—Prices are still on high side for many lines but demand is particularly good considering. Oranges are not so plentiful and Valencias are mighty scarce. Usually large cases of Valencias reach this market annually, but none have turned up in this particular packing owing no doubt to shortage in centres of production. Two weeks ago oranges could be bought at $2.25-$2.50,but a glance at quotations will soon show the difference and how they have been moving up. Lemons are selling well and present prices may be maintained if warm weather keeps up, in spite of general weakening tendency which prevails when new crop starts to reach this market. Strawberries are becoming cheaper but prices are inclined to fluctuate according to quality. Pineapples are becoming firmer owing to falling off in supplies and we will not be surprised to see higher prices if present conditions continue.

The caterpillar is doing considerable damage in many orchards and plantations and it is evident that drastic measures must be taken to arrest its depredations. The present season has certainly served to prove conclusively the value of scientific horticulture inasmuch as it has shown just what effective spraying means. It is interesting to VEGETABLES.— Local wholesalers are quite pleased with the encouragink demand in face of high prices but after all the consumer needs vegetables and present high quotations seem to have little diminishing effect on demand. Chief cause of high prices may be attributed to short crops. Sweet potatoes, for instance are not to be had everywhere; while fancy tomatoes, parsnips and garlic are all being entered on the "supplies wanted" list.

Potato market is somewhat weaker than usual owing to fact that old potatoes here are being replaced by American barrels which are fairly cheap and good value for the money. Conditions in Quebec Province as far as the farming communities are concerned, are in a backward condition owing to adverse growing weather and heavy rains accompanied by cold winds. The farmers as a body are not inclined to talk business to buyers and if full credit is to be given reports to hand, their plight is certainly discouraging.

TORONTO.

GREEN FRUITS .— Dominion Day stimulated trade in fruits last week while generally brighter and warmer weather has been beneficial to demand. Strawberries now occupy a prominent position on the market, this being a big week in which preserving is well under way. One firm in circular sent out this week said: "With any real hot weather strawberries will ripen up fast and we think crop will not last long. We do not look for any real cheap berries." Prices are lower this week but fluctuate according to supply and demand.

Cherries are in better supply and cheaper. California fruits are quite a feature, peaches, pears, apricots, plums and cherries being offered. Georgia peaches were offered this week in six basket carriers at $2.75. Cantaloupes are down to $4 to $5 per case.

Lemons are moving quite well and market is firm. Pineapples are closing up fast and it is difficult to get a line on prices this week.

VEGETABLES.—The big feature of week is reduction in prices on new potatoes which are now down to $4 to $4.25 per barrel. There is a good demand for them. Old stock is rather on easy side in sympathy, New Brunswick Delawares selling at $1.70 to $1.75.

Tomatoes from Texas and Mississippi are now coming along in 4-basket flat crates, being easier at $1 to $1.50 per crate. Cabbage tend downward under liberal supplies while there is a generally firmer feeling in onions this week.

Rolled Oats Decline 15 cents Per Barrel

Change Made on Tuesday—Market Rather Steady at Decline —Weather a Big Factor in Market for Next Couple of Months —Domestic Flour Trade is Fair for Season—Export Business Slack.

Roller oats declined 15 cents per barrel, or 7½ cents per sack on Tuesday of this week. This was not altogether expected, as a week ago the tendency was rather to steadiness. However, raw material market taking a slightly easier turn, and demand as usual at this season, being inclined to quietude, a reduction was decided on by millers. Since it has been announced there is rather a stronger tone to raw material, so that market at decline is rather steady.

For the next couple of months, the weather will be an important factor in swaying the grain markets as well as determining the trend of flour and cereal prices. The dry and hot weather in the Canadian Northwest has stiffened prices of wheat in Winnipeg of late. And so it will continue, for prices will change either upward or downward, according to meteorological conditions.

There still continues a rather strong front to Manitoba flour. As mentioned last week, several mills have advanced prices in Western Canada, although there is no change elsewhere. Market is, however, steady, for good milling wheat is rather scarce. Besides, as has been pointed out before, recession in mill feed prices throws greater strength on flour.

Demand for flour is on a fair scale for season, although it is natural at this time of year for retailers to pursue a hand-to-mouth policy. Export trade in flour continues slack.

Weather is not conducive to heavy consumption of cereals. Lighter lines are in best demand. Export trade in oatmeal continues slack.. A report from England says that buyers are well loaded just now, and that there will be little interest before new crop.

MONTREAL.

FLOUR.—There is a fair volume of business passing with a good demand from the West, and a steady call from across the water. Prices remain steady, and the situation throughout is strong.

TORONTO.

FLOUR.—There has been no change in Manitoba patents, but steady feeling is still present in market, which is natural under the lower prices for mill feeds. Trade appears to be fair. While some millers report that demand is not brisk, they claim it is up to standard for season.

Feed flour is quoted from $31 to $33 per ton.

CEREALS.—A reduction of 15 cents per barrel, or 7½ cents per sack, was made in rolled oats on Tuesday afternoon. With trade rather inclined to quietness, as is natural at this time, when a weaker turn developed in oat market, a reduction in price of finished product was decided on. Since then raw material market has rather stiffened up, injecting a tone of steadiness into the market since decline.

As expected at this time of year, retailers pursue a hand-to-mouth policy with cereals.

Fish Should Sell During Warm Weather

As it is a Warm Weather Food—People do not care for Heavy Meats at This Season—Trade Almost Totally in Fresh Lines—Lobster Packers up in Arms Against New French Law Relative to Canned Lobsters.

Fish trade is reported as satisfactory from most centres throughout the Dominion. It should be so, for warm weather should be good fish weather. With the thermometer ascending upward, people do not care for the heavier varieties of meat, but in fish the grocer has something to offer them that will coax the appetite along during the warm weather. Fish is truly a good summer food, and handled properly there is no reason why the grocer should not be able to work up an appreciable trade during summer months.

Trade runs almost totally to fresh varieties now, halibut, trout and whitefish being stellar lines.

QUEBEC.

MONTREAL.—Haddock and cod are still plentiful and cheap, while dressed bullheads and perch are cut off wholesalers' lists. Lake trout and whitefish and pickerel are somewhat scarce, and prices remain firm. There is a decided dropping off in supplies of brook trout. Gaspe salmon is selling freely, and prices may go a little lower. The price of fancy large mackerel is inclined to advance owing to scarcity.

NOVA SCOTIA.

HALIFAX.—Nova Scotia lobster shippers and packers are greatly agitated over new French Act, which requires that all tinned fish and lobsters imported into France must be embossed on the top and bottom of the tin. This week the lobster canners and exporters held a meeting at Board of Trade rooms to consider the matter. If this new law is enforced immediately it will mean that the very large lobster pack now awaiting shipment from Halifax, most of which is intended for France, and only a small portion of which has been stamped as provided by the act, cannot go forward.

At the meeting it was decided to send an urgent protest to the Canadian Government to take some action in the matter. They urged that at least a year's notice of such a change in the French law should be given so that they would have time to meet the new conditions.

The preserved lobster shipments from this port amount in value to about two million dollars per year. Lobster season will close at the end of this month.

FRUIT MARKET NOTES.

With greater variety of fresh fruit, oranges do not get the usual attention. Market, however, is steady.

While some time before this harvest, Almeria grapes are said to have been damaged by high winds, and Cape Cod cranberries by frost.

New York reports new apples selling well, although few lots have shown up in really good shape.

Georgia is to have a big crop of peaches of finest quality in history of the State.

The warmer weather has stimulated demand for limes and lemons.

Shipments of citrus fruits from California to June 17 amounted to 31,472 cars as compared with 39,273 to June 19, last season.

During 12 months ending March, 1912, Canada imported $2,002,575 worth of coffee, compared with $1,408,593 during previous twelve months. During same time tea to the value of $6,706,575 was brought in, as against $5,654,883 during 12 months previous.

Produce & Provisions

Butter and Eggs Both Holding Steady

Prices of Butter Steady in Face of Big June Make—Storage Has Taken Care of Certain Quantity—West Still Buying from East—Eggs are Steady, With Receipts Falling Off — Brisker Trade in Smoked and Cooked Meats.

What of the rather confident predictions of certain produce men, that Dominion Day would find butter prices at a much more normal level than in early June? Rather badly shattered, it would seem, from a comparison of prices at the most important centres. Not only have concessions been limited to a small margin, but at moment there is a rather healthy undertone of steadiness.

The foundation for their predictions of lower prices—the large production of butter expected during June has become a reality, at least to a certain extent. With the cows standing knee high in pastures, we would naturally look for a big flow of milk. However, reports from some centres note receipts as lagging compared with a year ago, but it must be remembered that season is later than last year, while cows did not come through the winter in best possible condition.

June butter has also been in request for storing purposes, probably accounting in part for stiffness. A certain demand from West has helped to prevent accumulations on Eastern markets.

Under warm weather there is naturally a tendency on part of public appetite to lag. Their is a bearish feature to prices, but fact that industriousness of the hen has also a tendency to lag balances it up pretty well. Receipts are showing a falling off, and while demand is also to some extent, it continues good for season, induced by high prices demanded for meats of all kinds. Steadiness is, therefore, the rule in egg market.

Cooked and smoked meats have shown a brisker movement of late. Trade in these lines was quite tardy in getting under way this year, due to backward season, but warm weather of late has swung these lines into greater favor. Retailers have found a better demand, and this has been reflected in sales of wholesale provision houses.

PROVISIONS.—The warmer weather of past week or so has stimulated demand for smoked and cooked meats, trade in which has been rather tardy in getting under way this year. Easier feeling in some lines noted last week has not been followed by any further concessions as yet. In fact, at moment, tone of smoked and cooked meats can be said to be steady.

Live hogs weakened middle of last week, and again at beginning of this week, and at country points $7.70 is being quoted with receipts fairly liberal.

Some Interesting Facts About Butter

Government Standard Says it Must Not Contain More Than 16 Per Cent. of Water—Excess of Water, However, Cannot Be Said To Be Adulteration—The Effects From Overchurning —Eaten as a Relish.

The manufacture of butter containing more than 16 per cent. water is liable to prosecution for this is the standard set by the Government. Moisture in butter is the principal factor that makes over-run. It is an object of those who understand to secure butter that contains as near 16 per cent. water properly incorporated, as possible, because of the profit in selling the additional water at butter prices.

Butter as a Relish.

A high moisture content is not an adulteration in butter. Water is a natural part of butter, and compares very favorably with the water content of other food materials. Butter is eaten more as a relish than for the actual food constituents it contains, and it is well known that butter containing from 14 to 16 per cent. water is just as relishing and palatable as that containing 8 or 10 per cent. water, providing it has been properly incorporated. Nor is it possible to distinguish by ordinary means of judging between a good grade of butter having a high moisture content and another having a small amount of water.

What Leaky Butter Is.

"Leaky" butter contains a large amount of free water which appears as large drops held in pockets through the butter. Such butter will not really contain so much moisture as some that appears dull and dry. Even though a leaky butter does not contain an excess of moisture, it is an undesirable condition, and consumers object to it.

The amount of water incorporated depends upon several conditions, most of which are under the control of the maker. The higher the temperature of the cream and wash water, the greater will be the amount of water gotten into the butter. Butter churned at a high temperature will retain its moisture, which will not be so easily pressed out during the working process. However, if the moisture is too high, the body of the butter will be spoiled, and the loss of fat in the buttermilk will be greater. So temperature itself is not so good a means of control as other conditions.

Result of Over Churning.

The amount of churning is probably the most effective way to control the moisture of butter. A very little overchurning, when the butter is in the soft condition will cause it to take up moisture very rapidly. Continuing the churning until the granules are the size of corn kernels or larger will incorporate more moisture than if churning is stopped when the granules reach the wheat kernel size. The difficulty here is that over-churning usually retains more of the buttermilk, which hurts the keeping qualities of the butter. The length of time butter is churned in water influences the moisture content the same way as churning in the buttermilk. The more churning in the wash water the better is the buttermilk removed, the more water is taken up, and the less leaky will the butter appear.

FARRINGTON PHILOSOPHY.

There's a better way of doing almost everything in the store. Always be on the watch for a chance to find out what it is.

How is a store to gain the reputation of being generous if the individuals connected with it allow themselves to act in a niggardly manner toward customers?

Mr. Merchant, help your clerks to develop proficiency in those directions in which they seem to have natural talent.

While economy may be wealth as has been said, yet stinginess, particularly in store methods and policy, is certain to prove to be poverty.

When customers raise objections to your goods, don't raise your voice in the effort to overcome them. It isn't loudness of voice that impresses people most.

No matter how many times a day you have to go over your story about certain goods, don't let your talk become mechanical like the book-agent's threadbare story. Speak naturally.

READY MADE CARD PHRASES.

You want the best. We have it.

Delicious strawberries for the evening meal.

Rice—a nourishing and healthy food.

Cereals — lighter food for warmer weather.

Jams with the taste that lingers.

Taste and try, you sure will buy—these pickles.

Pleased customers—our best advertisement.

Eventually—flour. Why not now?

Inferior goods at low prices do not make a bargain.

Mooney's Perfection Cream Sodas

have proved phenomenal sellers right from introduction. Every dealer who has handled our line has sent in repeat order after repeat order.

The reason lies in the distinctive quality and flavor of Perfection Cream Sodas. A little more care in the making and baking results in Mooney's Perfection Sodas being a good deal better than the next line.

Well and attractively packed. A good profit in the selling makes Perfection Cream Sodas a profitable stock for you.

To Make The Most Profit Selling Oil

You must be equipped with the most modern devices—such that will enable you to measure exactly, keep your hands and floor clean, and have your premises entirely free from the odor of oil.
Such an equipment is the

It will discharge a gallon, half gallon, quart or pint at a stroke. The discharge nozzle is so arranged that the oil can be pumped directly into the customer's can, and the measure is guaranteed accurate. Isn't that the model of cleanliness? And that is the only way to sell oil and make it a profitable department.

Send for circular No. 5, or particulars to fit your case.

THE "WANT AD."

The "want ad." has grown from a little used force in business life, into one of the great necessities of the present day.

Business men nowadays turn to the "want ad." as a matter of course for a hundred small services.

The "want ad." gets work for workers and workers for work.

It gets clerks for employers and finds employers for clerks. It brings together buyer and seller, and enables them to do business though they may be thousands of miles apart.

The "want ad." is the great force in the small affairs and incidents of daily life.

Keep in mind the dominant fact that mankind from its first appearance on the earth has been schooled by nature to look for signs; for invitations to taste; for suggestions as to what to wear. Tell your story briefly, forcibly, truthfully, and address it through the proper media and you can successfully apply advertising as a means to increased distribution.

"Get your money in"

If this Register will Double Your Collections—

—then you actually need it in your business. If the BARR Register will abolish the clumsy daybook-and-ledger system of book-keeping with all its mistakes, its losses and worries, then again you need it in your business. If the Barr Register will do away with the old monthly and semi-monthly rendering of statements, once more you need it in your business.

The Barr Account Register will do all this as it has proved in actual practice. One merchant has reported that he has in this way reduced his outstanding accounts from $3,000 to $500, and he is doing a bigger business than before.

Is not such a system as this worthy of investigation? If the Barr Register will save you hundreds of dollars in the course of its lifetime, don't you want to find out more about it? Use the coupon NOW.

Your Trade is Right in Wanting More than Quantity

You would not buy a piece of timber without first considering its breadth and thickness, as well as its length. Why not apply the same principle in buying food stock for your trade?

Ramsay's
BEST BY TEST

Farm Cream Sodas

We certainly believe that the value of any soda biscuit cannot honestly be measured by one dimension only (generally it is quantity) but, is not the question of quality of greater importance?

Granted it is; then why not build a soda biscuit trade on quality? Sell them the Ramsay line—a soda that measures up to the standard in quantity and above any other in quality.

You will find the popularity of Ramsay's so much so that every line in your store will be drawn into the same rapid selling slide.

We attribute the high quality of Ramsay's Farm Cream Sodas to our expert knowledge of the business and our modern methods and perfect cleanliness.

"I might say we use FIVE ROSES flour and think "it cannot be beaten. In fact, when I remarked a few days "ago that another bag of flour would soon be needed, my father "said, 'Well, I suppose there is no use getting you anything "but FIVE ROSES,' altho' it is miles farther to get it than "several other kinds at nearer stores."

Five Roses Flour

Not Bleached LAKE OF THE WOODS MILLING COMPANY LIMITED KEEWATIN TRADE MARK REGISTERED Not Blended

If one buyer will drive miles past other stores in order to be sure of FIVE ROSES, what of the woman who has merely a street to cross?

It is inevitable that the store where FIVE ROSES flour is sold becomes the supply house of the best cooks in your district —because permanent patronage gravitates to the man best able to satisfy it.

There are many women in Canada to-day, Brother Grocer, who made their first FIVE ROSES purchase in 1888. These are the good cooks that teach the younger generation how to use flour—how to buy it.

Because FIVE ROSES has shown ability to hold what it has won and reach out for more, the output has grown from 800 barrels in 1888 to 10,500 barrels to-day. And soon, very soon, the big Keewatin mills will be too small.

Why don't you get YOUR share of the profits involved in such a large turnover, a steadily growing turnover?
Your jobber knows FIVE ROSES—or write our nearest office.

Gaining in Popularity Daily

Why? Because the public are fast learning its superiority to the supposed-to-be fresh milk and cream.

Canada First Evaporated Milk is full cream milk, reduced by a sterilizing vacuum process to the consistency of rich cream. It is three times richer in butter fat and solids than ordinary fresh milk. It is especially suitable for invalids and infants. A Canadian product from the cow to the can.

Also don't overlook "Canada First" sweetened condensed milk; or you will miss good sales that are profitable.

You can pay more money for other brands, but can get no better than "Canada First."

The Facts Behind the Figures Determine the Value and Popularity of "Simcoe" Baked Beans

The significance of a large steadily increasing sale bears directly on the quality and popularity of a food. Quality is the feature predominant with all Dominion Canners' Products.

Popularity is another word for "economy." Baked Beans are really economical; a can of Simcoe Baked Beans contains as much nourishment as one pound of beefsteak. Notice the difference in price. That's just one reason why Simcoe Baked Beans are popular. There are many others.

Gentlemen We have had one of your Registers in use for two months and are thoroughly satisfied that the system is all that you claim for it.

We find that the carrying forward at each transaction of any outstanding balance does away entirely with the leakage from small accounts left unpaid through a customer's negligence - formerly a fruitful source of trouble with us; we are sure that this alone is quite sufficient to justify the installation of the system

Another feature that appeals to us is that we can compile an absolutely accurate total of our outstanding credit accounts in less than ten minutes at any time, without any previous posting or preparation being necessary; a feat hitherto impossible to us.

We shall be pleased to allow any interested person to inspect our Register at any time on receipt of a request from any of your representatives

Yours truly

THE TEST OF SERVICE

Few electric coffee mills develop trouble in the first year of their service. To the new owner, enthusiastic over the beauty and convenience of his new mill, what is out of sight is more than likely to be out of mind.

But to the level head buyer the value of foresight in what is out of sight needs no explaining. He knows that on these parts depend the life and service of his mill. Many a COLES mill is to-day, after three or four years service, giving just as good satisfaction as when it came fresh from the factory. Is this kind of service worth anything to you?

Gentlemen:—

DEARTH OF STRAWBERRIES

SMALL AND DEAR SUPPLIES FOR JAM MAKERS

Only by a continuation of such sunshine as yesterday's can the strawberry crop in Hampshire and Kent be saved. For the rain of the past few days has done great harm and mildew has attacked the fruit. Large quantities of fruit are rotting on the ground. The remaining strawberries, needing the sun to ripen them, are so small that the growers declare that the strawberry season will not last more than a week.

In every way the strawberry growers have had a very poor harvest. The crop in the first instance was one of the smallest experienced for years. "Many farms in Kent, where the strawberry yield in an average year amounts to several hundreds of tons," said a grower yesterday, "have this year had scarcely any strawberries. The hot summer of last year affected the plants. Then this year night frosts cut off the blossom, and the rain came when we needed the sun to ripen the small crops we had got. So far as Kent is concerned, it is a very bad strawberry year indeed."

DEARER JAM.

The jam manufacturers are finding it extremely difficult to get anything like the supplies they usually receive. "We are now having to pay £20 to £30 a ton for strawberries," said the manager of one London firm, "as against the ordinary price of £11 to £13 per ton, and even at that high figure we cannot get all the strawberries we want. As a result, strawberry jam will be scarce and dearer than usual.

At the London markets the strawberry supplies were short yesterday and the quality of the fruit poor. The retail price was 4d. to 8d. a pound, according to the class of trade. At this time of June, in a good strawberry year, the price would be 2d. to 6d. a lb.

Fruit and Vegetable Window, with Display Fountain in centre. Accompanying article explains how the Fountain has increased sales.

Eliminating the Waste in Vegetables

How One Dealer Combines His Window with Display Fountain to Prevent Waste and Increase Sales—Claims He Doesn't Lose Ten Cents Worth in a Week, and at Same Time Turnover is Much Greater — Fresh Nature of the Vegetables Stops the Passerby.

One of the great works of the scientist is to devise methods and means for eliminating waste. His life is given up to the conservation of things. His brain helps us to save time, energy and money.

In the hot summer days the most trying work of the grocer is also done to the end of eliminating waste. When a quantity of perishable goods are purchased, he wonders if he is going to get them off his hands before they spoil or wilt. On the measure of his success depends the extent of his profit or loss.

To sell any quantity of goods, the people must either read about them, hear of them, or see them. If actual demand only is supplied sales are not going to be large. The successful dealer is the one who increases his sales at a fair margin of profit. In this connection the power of the window cannot be too highly recommended.

Nature of Summer Displays.

J. W. Island, 262 Dundas St., Toronto, is a consistent window dresser of fruits and vegetables in the summer time. He makes known his stock by the display method, and at the same time has a device which practically dispenses with all waste in small vegetables. One of his displays is herewith shown, as well as the equipment referred to. This is a vegetable display fountain set up in the centre of the window which keeps up a constant spray over the goods placed on its various shelves.

A Valuable Equipment.

"We purchased the vegetable fountain last year," states Mr. Island, "and we have found it to be one of our best investments. We saw it advertised in The Canadian Grocer and sent for particulars. We wouldn't take $200 for it now, if we couldn't get another."

Mr. Island declares that from week to week he never wastes 10 cents worth of goods placed on the fountain. More than that, he sells a great deal more vegetables because of this display stand.

"On Friday and Saturday now we sell from 40 to 50 dozen lettuce, whereas we could only dispose of about a box formerly. When 6 o'clock comes on a Saturday night we are usually cleaned out of small vegetables," he further stated.

Attracts Occupants of Autos.

This fountain has frequently been the means of stopping passing automobiles. Not the way a telegraph pole would stop them, but because the displays are so inviting with the water trickling over the vegetables that occupants of the autos have come back to purchase on seeing the window.

An inspection of the above photograph will show how the window was dressed last week. The vegetable fountain contains radish, asparagus, onions, beets and lettuce. The shelves are kept well filled all the time, so that customers who buy from them are assured of fresh goods.

On the left of the stand are tomatoes, strawberries, peaches, cherries, gooseberries, plums and pines, arranged carefully and systematically so as to present a good showing. To the right are rhubarb, cucumbers, beans, peas, carrots, beets, cabbage, and green peas. This variety is almost sure to catch the eye of the passerby, and Mr. Island claims there are few things better than a fruit and vegetable display to bring the people inside the store. As soon as summer comes he makes it a point to always show them. They are summer goods and are sure to sell with little persuasion.

Requires Little Attention.

The display fountain in this store needs little attention. There is a waste pipe attached to carry off the water, and once in ten days the holes in the top shelves collect a few leaves, which have to be removed. Otherwise it requires little or no attention.

The above window was dressed in about an hour's time, and, considering the results which were obtained, the time was profitably spent. This display is another evidence of the importance of making aggressive efforts to increase trade. Wait for it and it doesn't come. Go after it and results are sure to follow.

A Young Grocer Who is Entirely at Sea

Has Good Store Front and Good Stand But is Grossly Careless and Seemingly Indifferent—Evidently Did Not Assimilate Much During Apprenticeship Although His Employer Was a Thoroughly Modern Grocer — Little Attention Paid to Windows.

By O. S. Johnston.

Human nature is just as frail to-day as it was one hundred years ago, and we are none the less prone to make mistakes, although it may be conceded that the man who fails to benefit by the experience of those gone before is not at all justified when he deliberately errs and sets down his negligence to "didn't know."

The writer not long ago happened into a grocery store which could boast of a good front and being located at a corner seemed well in the running for catching a large amount of transient trade to say nothing of regular custom. But it did not take a keen power of observation to bring about the decision that the young proprietor had either forgotten all he had learned or learned nothing from his former employer; in other words that he had failed miserably to put in practice the good retail methods employed at the store where he had served his apprenticeship. It would take up too much space to point out all the deficiencies—there are so many—in this man's way of doing business, but some observations made on various calls should prove of benefit to the young men now contemplating starting business for themselves.

Cutting Prices Led to Chaos.

Noticing that his competitor across the way had the greater share of the business going, he concluded that the best way to secure some of the best accounts would be to cut prices all round to such an extent that they could hardly be anything but enticing. Slips of paper badly printed were pasted on his three large windows late one Saturday night and on the following Monday the doors were thrown open even though little preparation had been made for the expected avalanche of business. Late in the morning the sweeping was being done and of course plenty of dust was being sent through the entire store.

Customer No. 1 Arrives.

A woman entered evidently having prepared a tall order and ready to take advantage of the low prices. But Mr. Grocer and his clerk at that time were busy moving a few dozen canned goods from shelves to counter and in spite of the absence of a chair or stool for the woman, chatted away and kept the customer standing for five minutes. Finally the proprietor came along somewhat like a funeral, and without making any apology asked for the order. He had five or six articles entered on his order form when he was asked the price of a popular sauce. Now, whether he regarded this woman as an innocent June bride or not the writer cannot say, but he certainly thought he would get back part of the profit he was losing on the goods just ordered, and quoted five cents above the general selling price. The result was that she disputed such a price for this particular sauce. Instead of using a little tact and covering up his attempted deceit, the order taker (we cannot call him a salesman, there's a difference) said, "What's next madam?" "Nothing, I want absolutely nothing from you," was the unexpected reply, and this bit of carelessness, to say the least of it, lost a nice order and in all likelihood further business.

There is little necessity to deal any further with this transaction, but it might be said in passing that the cut-price notices remained on the windows for about five days after the game had failed and the ordinary schedule had been resumed.

Doesn't Utilise Valuable Windows.

At the outset this "would be" grocer did not realize, let us hope that he does now, that cut prices are not permanent trade builders, and he may also be regarded as either ignorant of or indifferent to the pulling power of good window display. Instead of keeping the three large windows well dressed he lets them remain in such a state that they are an eyesore so bad indeed that a genuine "something for nothing" offer would in nine cases out of ten fail to induce the particular housewife to enter.

A traveler from a large cereal company made a most attractive display for him quite recently but in a week's time it was hard for outsiders to decipher the brand on the cartons owing to thick layers of dust on the window panes and cartons, caused of course, by careless sweeping and the dust coming through the open doors.

Flies seemed to enjoy the sunny windows and were there in numbers, some lying dead half buried in the dust on floor of window with the cartons standing over them like tombstones. What a fine graveyard scene and yet in a window which was supposed to attract trade!

A Jack of All Trades.

On another call, the writer noticed the clerk who had the honor of working under such an "advanced" employer, cut some bacon for a customer, and then proceed to weigh out a pound of tub butter with the same knife. It was wise of him, though not to wipe on his apron after finishing the bacon slicing, as the linen seemed to have escaped the attention of the nearby laundry expert, Mr. Woo Chong Kee, for a considerable period.

A Humorous Side.

Quite recently a number of people were obliged to take shelter from the rain in his doorway, pending the arrival of a car for down town. A confectionery traveler who happened to be there (the time was about 8.45 a.m.), told the writer that just before the car arrived the store was opened for the first time that day and Mr. Late Riser, with a look of surprise at the number outside, asked, "Waiting to get in?" Was it any wonder that a couple laughed, and a few giggled at this question when people were seen coming out of the store opposite which had been opened at 7.30 a.m.

How long this young man will be in business it is hard to say, but we have no hesitation in stating that unless he changes his methods and takes a few lessons in salesmanship and store management he would be wise in closing up and seeking a more suitable occupation.

An expression of opinion from readers on the possibilities of this young man retrieving his lost position and winning confidence from residents in his district would be interesting. What would you consider to be the best way to secure trade again if you were in his shoes? Do you think it is possible for him to continue at same stand and do business there under different methods?

Science Teacher Has Made No Reply

Letter Sent More Than Month Ago Explaining the Trade's Method of Figuring Profits, But No Answer Returned—He Had Questioned by Phone the Correctness of Basing Profit Percentage on Sales—An Explanation of The Grocer's Contention.

About the middle of May a teacher of mathematics in a collegiate institute questioned The Canadian Grocer's correctness in figuring profits on sales. It was decided over the phone that both the science master and The Grocer express their opinions in writing, the latter to present its case and the former to reply.

On May 17 the letter appearing below was sent to the mathematician. That was almost two months ago. Up to the present there has been no reply.

One View of Problem.

To give our readers the benefit of one side of the question The Grocer's letter is herewith reproduced:—

Dear Sir,—

Re your telephone conversation with the writer the other day on figuring profits, we are glad to have the opportunity of taking the matter up with you because it will lead to a better knowledge of the problem on the part of all concerned.

Our standpoint is that while it is correct to figure profits on costs, it is not practicable, and figuring profits on the invoice cost leads many a merchant into thinking himself much better off than he actually is, and that the only safe method of calculation is on selling price or turnover.

What Cost Includes.

In a merchandising business to obtain the actual cost one must add to the invoice net cash price all items of expense such as interest, freight, cartage, rent, light, wages, salary for proprietor, depreciation, bad debts, etc., all of which have to be reckoned on in holding and turning over goods, and which show the actual total cost of doing business. The difference between the amount paid for the goods plus the handling of them and the selling price constitutes the profit.

But it is not practicable to figure on this basis. No dealer knows absolutely what the cost will be until the goods have been sold and the money collected. The matter of interest on outstanding accounts and bad debts, as well as the length of time goods are held in stock, together with their depreciation in value are always uncertain elements until every cent of the sales are in the merchant's cash register. When this result is obtained he can figure out his rate of profit on the actual total cost if he so desires, but he could not so figure in advance with any degree of accuracy.

The Only Definite Basis.

The uncertainty of what the actual total cost will be affords no safe basis for figuring in advance what the selling price should be. One should have some good, sound basis. The invoice cost would not do, because that is only a part of what has to be paid out in disposing of the goods. The total cost would not do, because that is never known until the last article leaves the store, and an inventory is taken at the end of the year. The only sound, practicable method, we submit, is, therefore, to figure from the selling price or turnover.

The total cost, as above stated, cannot be estimated in advance, but it will be found in almost every case so far as the retail trade is concerned, to be much nearer the selling price than the invoice price, and if an arbitrary basis is to be decided upon, then what is approximately nearest should be selected—which is the selling price. The percentage ascertained by calculating on the selling price is safest for the dealer because he is certain if he adds a reasonable advance he is at least making as much as he calculated. On the other hand if he works on the invoice cost, he never makes the profit he thinks he does, and is sure to be disappointed at the end of the year, because he is looking forward to his profits on the basis of his year's turnover.

Figuring Backward on Cost.

If the merchant finds at the end of the year he paid $10,000 for goods and it cost him $2,000 to cover all overhead expenses, and he received $14,000 in sales, the inventory of goods on hand being the same, he knows he has made a profit of $2,000. The profit percentage can then be figured on the actual total cost, which was $12,000, being 16 2-3 per cent., and this would be absolutely correct. If figured on the invoice cost of $10,000 the percentage would be 40 (which would be greater than made) and if figured on the turnover of $14,000 it would be 14 2-7 per cent., or at less than actually made.

This shows in a striking manner the danger of figuring profits on the invoice cost. The inference might fairly be drawn from the above that a merchant who has been in business for longer than a year could easily discover what his business cost him during the previous years and add the percentage to the invoice price to obtain the cost price. This would be approximately much nearer the actual cost than figuring on the basis of either invoice cost or selling price. But as the cost of doing business and volume of business are not fixed quantities it could hardly be considered as the absolute cost.

Thinks of Margin on Sales.

Ask a merchant who has on a certain day had cash sales amounting to $100, what percentage of profit he has made, and he immediately thinks of the profit on the sales. The cost of buying and marketing these goods is not known to him, or considered by him at this time, so that the only definite basis is the amount of the sales.

In conclusion we would like to emphasize the importance of safety in business. You will, we have no doubt, discover there is a great element of safety in calculating profits on the sales which as a rule, if you will allow us to repeat, affords a margin of safety over and above the expected results.

Yours very truly,
The Editor Canadian Grocer.

A reply to this letter from anyone would be interesting, and no doubt appreciated by readers who are making a study of this important question. The science teacher's contention was, of course, that profits should be figured on cost.

MUST STOP CALLING WARES.

Toronto, July 11.—The third reading was given, at the Toronto Council meeting on Monday, to a by-law regulating street peddlers. When the by-law becomes law next January peddlers will be subject to a fine if they call out their wares on the street. This is what the Toronto R.G.A. have been contending for, as peddlers were wont to go about, subject to a meagre license, and sell inferior goods by calling people from the houses.

The old by-law contained the word "hawkers" and "moderately calling their wares." These words will be omitted from the new. Any further licenses taken out between now and Jan. 1 will be subject to the new by-law.

SUMMER DRINKS IN FULL SWING.

These days the soda fountain is a favorite haunt of the public. The reason for their presence there is self-evident. They are in search of something to refresh and relieve as much as possible the effects of the oppressive weather. They are trying to counterbalance the scorching rays of Old Sol.

This search on the part of the public gives the grocer an excellent cue to more business. Why cannot the grocer come in here and point out that they might just as well partake of their summer refreshments at their own homes? By putting in a supply, a refreshing drink is always available without the trouble of a walk to the nearest dispenser's shop.

Besides, at this time of the year there are many picnic and camping parties who will want to take along some cooling liquid refreshments. At many camping grounds good drinking water is not always obtainable, at least without some trouble, so that it is well for the camper to be supplied. To picnicker and camper, as well as to the householder, the grocer would do well to suggest these lines and urge the advantage of a good supply.

In the line of summer drinks the grocer has much to offer, including lemonade powder, concentrated lemonade, soft drinks of various kinds, fruit vinegars, cider, grape juice, mineral and aerated waters, etc. These are the lines which the grocer would do well to swing into prominence now and push strongly. Added to personal talks to customers, window and counter display as well as advertising are the valuable selling features.

MUSTY CEREALS LOSE CUSTOM.

We learn a great deal sometimes from our own as well as the errors of other people—at least from those that are made public. Probably the following incidents, related by the heads of two households, explaining why they stopped dealing at a certain grocery store, may result in more careful attention to goods in stock, as well as to buying.

Both complaints refer to bulk cereals. One woman, who was a buyer for an old folks' home in a Western Ontario city, had purchased a hundred pounds of a certain cereal. The morning after it was delivered to the home, the woman in charge of the cooking complained to the purchaser that the cereal was musty and could not be used. Further investigation proved the original analysis to be correct, with the result that the grocer not only had to take back the goods, but in future lost his share of the home's trade. In addition to these losses, the woman who made the purchase declares she will buy nothing more at that store.

This same dealer lost another regular customer by selling her a musty wheat cereal. In this case he will probably never know the cause as she has never gone back. The cereal was thrown out and the money wasted, which was sufficient justification, in her estimation, for a complete change.

These instances of the loss of customers should be carefully considered. A dissatisfied customer generally voices her disapproval of inferior service, and the exact loss is never known. It is the men who prevent altogether the dissatisfied customer who make the most of the grocery business, other things being equal.

Now that the hot weather is here with a vengeance, especial care should be taken with cereals. Careful buying will assist a great deal, as well as care in giving them proper attention.

SURVIVAL OF THE FITTEST.

The poor, we shall always have with us; likewise the indolent.

A story is told by O. S. Johnston on another page of this issue of a young Canadian dealer who, in spite of the fact that he has every opportunity to build up a successful business, actually, by his indolence, drives away trade. Imagine a live, up-to-date dealer these days allowing a customer to wait five minutes before serving her, while he and his clerk continue with their dusting operations well onto the middle of the forenoon! Yet this is the business crime marked up against the young man in question.

The more representatives of The Grocer move about the country in search of trade news and methods, the more do they realize the importance of aggressive business campaigns. Dealers who are alive to opportunities have the least complaints to make about quietness of trade and business going elsewhere. They are the men who are using every facility at their command to attract new custom and to increase sales among their regular patrons.

There is little room to-day for the indolent man in the grocery trade. He will never be a success because there are too many competitors ready with superior service to attract business. The fittest will survive while the weak will be forced against the wall.

RESULTS FROM BUTTER INSPECTION.

It was pointed out in last week's issue that the Government butter standard stipulated that butter must not contain more than 16 per cent. of water. During the week a report from the Inland Revenue Department has come to hand describing 157 samples of butter collected in Canada by inspectors during February and March of this year. It contains many interesting points.

The standard also defines legal butter as containing not more than 17.5 per cent. of substances other than milk fat, the other substances being usually water, salt and curd. Therefore, butter containing more than 16 per cent. water and 17.5 per cent. of all substances other than milk fat, is a fraud on the public in the eyes of the Government.

From the investigations of the inspectors the maximum of 16 per cent. of water is evidently higher than necessary, as only one out of the 157 samples was above this figure. In fact, 133 samples contained less than 10 per cent., and only 33 between 10 and 16 per cent.

If we are to assume that the best butter contains the least water, then Prince Edward Island is the best butter producing province. Ten samples from there show an average of 3.93 per cent. water. The same number of samples taken at Ottawa show 5.13 per cent., and New Brunswick comes third with 5.66 per cent.

At the time the inspections were made, the price of good butter varied from 29.5 cents per pound in Prince Edward Island, where it was cheapest, to 44 cents per pound in Alberta where the ruling price was highest.

FRUIT PROSPECTS FAIRLY BRIGHT.

It is encouraging to note that British Columbia apple growers are making preparations for the biggest crop in the history of the province. In fact the prospects generally are for an excellent crop throughout Canada. The wet weather of May and early part of June in some districts had the effect of retarding pollination, resulting in the falling of embryo apples, but on the whole there is every indication so far of a good crop.

The outlook in Nova Scotia is for another crop nearly, if not as large as last year's. There was a particularly heavy bloom on the Gravenstein, and if nothing occurs to mar growth, the yield will be heavy.

In the Niagara district there is a fairly good setting of most varieties of peaches, but the crop in southwestern Ontario is reported to be short, probably not enough to supply the home market.

Plums and pears are on the whole a fairly good crop. Sweet cherries are showing some signs of winter killing, but the sour variety is an excellent crop almost everywhere. A medium crop of grapes is expected, although many vines were winter killed.

In Great Britain the fruit growers have been complaining seriously of dry weather and insect depredations, more particularly in small fruits.

ARE YOU ON SCHEDULED TIME?

Standing upon the threshold of the last half of the year, it is well that the merchant cast an eye back over the first six months that have just come to a close, and sum up the results of that period.

It is the desire of every merchant to show a gain each year over the previous one. In fact, a healthy business should show a gradual growth. Just at this time it would be wise for the grocer to review the first six months of 1912 and compare them with the same period of 1911 to ascertain if there has been any increase, or if the ideals with which the year was started, have not been realized.

If the financial sheets either relative to sales or profit show no improvement or not enough improvement so far this year, there is no reason to give up in despair. In fact, if such be true, it should have a directly opposite effect—that of spurring the merchant on to greater efforts.

Now is the time to begin in real earnest if sales at the end of the year are to look big. If a dealer hopes to attain his ideal, he cannot afford to wait until October or November before finding out how he is progressing.

THE CROPS IN THE WEST.

Rains last week relieved the dry spell in the West, with the result that anxiety regarding the growing grain has been removed. There is yet the frost bugbear to contend with, but in many districts in Alberta and Saskatchewan crops are a couple of weeks in advance of a year ago.

Authoritative reports from Southern Alberta state that the crop will be 60 per cent. greater than a year ago. Winter wheat is averaging 30 inches and should be almost ready for harvest towards the end of the month. Spring wheat has headed out, and has reached a growth of from 8 to 24 inches.

If good growing weather continues it will, combined with the increased acreage, give the West a record crop. At the present time, therefore, Western conditions, which depend largely on the crops, are sound.

THE SEASONABLE DISPLAY

It does not require much thought to see the advantages of a seasonable window display, particularly if it consists of goods that might perhaps be overlooked by the feminine shopper if they were not to be seen.

The man who takes advantage of seasons and special occasions to trim appropriate windows, and does his work neatly and judiciously is sure to increase sales above what the shopper actually had in mind on leaving her home.

The power of display cannot be too highly magnified as a business getter. But there are displays and displays. The best get the bulk of the extra business.

Account With a Business Men's Club

Case Where Union Isn't Always Strength—Club Included Some of Town's Best Men, But Yet Payments Were Slow—How Co-operation in Same Town Has Prevented Bad Debts — The Humble Origin of the System.

*By Henry Johnson, Jr.

A junior partner in Johnson & Son has been getting some valuable experience in credit-extension. Maybe the experience will cost the firm some money: maybe it will come out all right. That is one advantage of being interested in a business which is not all your own—you can get some experience at another's expense.

This partner took a fancy to the account of a newly-established Business Men's Club, not, perhaps, for any particular reason, but by one of those psychological kinks that will get all of us occasionally. In fact, there is only one safeguard against that kind of thing; that is to have rules—definite, fixed rules,—which nobody can break, and then have a conference on any extension of credit beyond the limits and abide by the decisions of the conferrees.

Purchased Best of Everything.

This account was, and is, for the experience is not yet complete, a nice one to handle. The orders were liberal. They wanted the best goods. When it came to choice between extra quality and a trifle of saving, the saving had to go—for they wanted the best. This was natural; for that is the way with men's clubs everywhere. They think it the mark of good breeding to spend to the limit. The trouble was the usual one; that at the end of the month, they did not pay. Details of management, especially involving the payment of bills promptly, are not strong features in men's clubs.

A few days after the first of the month after the account was opened, I asked my partner how about it. He "was not very sure, but would find out." He did not find out very much except that he got no money. In fact, he seemed to gain the impression that the payment of money was a sort of low, sordid thought that clubs should not properly entertain to speak of. And we got no money.

Account Ran for Three Months.

My plan would have been to cut off the outgo and proceed quickly to get what we could; but I yielded to let the young fellow try out his ideas. So the second and third month went by and the account was upwards of $600. It was a very "good" account, you see! Then I thought things had gone far enough, so I put it right up to my young friend to get that money. I felt we had as much invested in that one experience as we could take chances with.

Well, by dint of pressure, and going to see this and that, the boy got in $180, which was the amount of the first of the three months' bills. But, while money was scarce, "assurances" were plentiful. Many told him not to have any anxiety because "that club was composed of the very best men in this town and they would not allow any of the bills to go by default." When this was reported to me, I gave the young man my views in detail; and I shall insert them here because I think they are sound, and I believe they may be memorized by almost any retail merchant with profit to himself.

Where Union is Not Strength.

"Now, John," I said; "it is just the right time for you and me to go into the details of this situation a bit. I want to show you how I regard that account and why I so regard it. Then you may change your attitude a little.

"It is true that the 'best men' of this town are members. Yes: there are several members there who individually, for their own household purposes, might have such an account here and I should not lose a minute of sleep over it. But this is a case where union is not a source of strength, but of weakness, and I'll show you why. Individually, those men are good. They pay their bills promptly and to the last cent. Why? Because their credit is valuable to them; they make it a rule to pay; and they are honorable. Because of this very fact, you will find that those men have paid their dues at the club very promptly. Also, because of this fact, they are not the kind of men to pay those dues twice. They would not think of paying one of our bills twice, no matter how much we might need the money, though they are as good as the wheat to pay their just bills. And why? Because they are quick to recognize and discharge an obligation, they will not feel any obligation to go any further.

If the Club Should Fail?

"Thus, all this talk about the certainty that those men would not let the club go down in disgrace is bosh. If that club should fail to pay, where would any obligation rest on them? Would they not feel that they were free—had they not paid their dues promptly? Take Judge Ryan, or Dr. Chapin, or Deacon Burrows—every man of them good for anything they want to buy at Johnson's, even past the usual limits—do you think those men would feel any twinges of conscience if the club should fail? No; nor would they need to feel under any obligation?

"No: your feeling that such membership was a source of strength is wrong. It is, in fact, a source of weakness. If the membership were a little slower pay there would actually be more security, because then you might hope to scrape up something in unpaid dues; but now you have nothing to fall back on. That is NOT the kind of account you can permit to run a day over its proper time. Get busy, now and get the money."

Well, we are not done yet, as I say. That is, we are not sure we are "done." But I have my suspicions. What?

We Get By Giving.

While I am on this question of credit-giving, I think of a recent Convention Question: "Can a local federation with few members properly organize a credit rating system?" That seems to me to be akin to the question: "How much does it take to start a business?" For one man can start on $5 and get rich and another will fail on a capital investment of $50.000. Likewise, a federation" of two merchants can start a credit rating system, if they are the right kind of men; while 500 may readily fail to make this work because they do not enter it in the right spirit. Trouble is that nearly every merchant immediately thinks of what he is going to GET out of the system—not what he is going to GIVE it; and until a goodly proportion of any federation gets the idea of GIVING, the system will not amount to anything.

The Origin of a System.

In our town there is hardly any need of any system to take care of credits. Why? Because we began right, years ago, to HELP each other. I am somewhat to blame for this condition myself, so I'll tell you how it began.

About 18 or 20 years ago I took to visiting neighbors. I went when I had a little time, without any particular plans or intention. It seemed a little strange and awkward at first; but we got personally acquainted; chatted together—not much business—mostly just learning to know each other. On the second round I talked a few problems and suggested, or hinted at, betterment of some difficulties. When credit was talked about, I made it a point to offer information on any customer at any time. The way was thus partly prepared, but still some action was needed to galvanize the thing into life; so I took the action.

The Promiscuous Credit.

I decided that I should grant credit on precisely the same basis as I got credit—through the passing of references. I also decided that I would take no account where the applicant owed a brother grocer a past-due account. Thus, it was not long before I had occasion to call up a neighbor and ask him whether he knew Peter Filkins and how his credit was. After getting the information, I thanked my informant and repeated my offer to help him any time he wanted help that I could supply. Little by little this idea spread, until to-day we ask each other freely back and forward. That is why we need little protection from bad accounts. If we take on slow ones, we do it with our eyes open—as my partner took on that club, for instance.

So here you have examples of the Union which is Strength and the other Union which is Weakness. You can see the difference.

Claim Auto Delivery Equals Three Horses

Experience of New Zealand Firm Who are First to Introduce New System Into that Country—Advertising Valued Placed at $500 a Year—Covers 300 Miles a Day.

The first robin, the first straw hat and the first strawberry of the season are all objects of note. And so is the first automobile delivery in any town or city. Greater still is the first motor in a country—and Hill & Barton, merchants of Wellington, New Zealand, whose delivery car is shown herewith, can boast of this honor.

Comparison With Horse Delivery.

This firm is quite enthusiastic over the innovation, their experience being that it is more satisfactory and more economical than the horse and wagon systems. In a letter to The Grocer, which they read every week, H. G. Hill states that the car is a 14-16 h.p., the body being specially insulated. The total cost of the car was £500 ($2500), and it is doing the work of three teams of horses and three men. The average distance covered is 300 miles per week and the cost works out at 8d. per mile. This cost includes wages of men and depreciation at the rate of 25 per cent. per annum interest on capital outlay and all incidental expenses. To their mind there is no comparison between the motor delivery and horses and wagon method.

A Profitable Advertisement.

"We consider," says Mr. Hill, "the advertising value of the car is at least £100 per annum. You will, therefore, see that we are getting every satisfaction with it although many predicted that our enterprise would result in failure."

The first automobile delivery in New Zealand. Owners say it does the work of three horses and three men.

The opposite, however, has been the case. They have found the motor car superior to the old system both as to advertising value and economy.

Big Work for Three Horses.

Three hundred miles covered in one day means 30 miles an hour in a 10-hour day. This would appear to be greater than the work of three horses, as it would take a pretty good horse to travel a third of 30 miles in an hour, or 100 miles a day. Few horses in Canada, at any rate, could accomplish such a feat.

Lesson 18---Complete Course in Cardwriting

Showing the Lower Case of the Capitals Demonstrated in the Previous Lesson —The Three Cards Illustrated Introduce the Trade Mark Idea in Cardwriting.

By J. C. Edwards. Copyright Canada, 1911.

How many stores or commercial institutions work the trade mark idea to the extent that is possible? There are some that do, but there are hundreds that don't, and these are the businesses that remain small and immature, and the heads of these places wonder why those others grow and become industrial concerns.

The reason lies, to a great extent, in the advertising; either the advertising is too weak, or too little.

We suggest the selection of a good trade mark and advertising it everywhere, keeping it constantly before the public eye—in every advertisement, on every sign, on your electric signs, on every window card. Make it so common that every time it is seen it is at once associated with the firm's name.

The Trade Mark on Cards.

To demonstrate the trade mark idea on the show card, we are illustrating three sample cards showing the manner in which it is used.

The "hand bag" card has the double diamond trade mark, with the firm name or the firm's catch phrase inside. The space between the two diamonds is in a color which makes it stand out strongly in relief. In the "layette" card, the trade mark is more in keeping with the nature of the goods being advertised, the outline of the shield being in a light shade with the centre white, and the lettering in a light shade. The strength of the trade mark should be regulated by the style of card it goes on. The "suiting" card shows still another style which is in keeping with the general effect of the card, viz., the lined style.

Working Up a Design.

Get an idea into your head and improve on it wherever you can. Sketch the design in pencil first, just roughly, then, if it suits you, ink it in.

The design in the "hand bag" card makes a very good effect. The circles were made with an ink compass in alternate black and white lines, and then cross hatched with black ink. This design may be carried out to splendid effect in colors or tints. The floral effect is very simple, in fact only a suggestion is needed to illuminate the design.

First, the outline is made with the brush, then a light tint is added or filled in, with a few touches of the brush in the centre to complete it.

The Stork a Suitable Decoration.

If illustrations are used or drawings made on a card, they should harmonize with the inscription. The stork decoration used on the Layette card is quite in keeping with the "Dainty, Snowy Layette," as it is symbolic of infantile reception. This design is made by first drawing the bird in outline on the light champagne card, then coating the whole design with white and touching it up with a light grey and dark grey for the tips of the wings, the beak and the feet. The apple blossom designs used in the panel also lends a dainty touch to the card.

An Unusually Simple Treatment.

Note the very simple decoration used in the suiting card. It certainly is "distinctly different" and yet refined.

The word "suitings" is outlined first, with a brush No. 4, red sable, square point, drawn down small. Then the white line decoration is made, using the T square and small pen, say a number 5 or 6 soennecken, as shown in the upper corner of the plate. These lines may be made first, if desired, and the letter outlined over the top of them.

The letters then are filled in, leaving the space, as shown, open, allowing the white lines to show through.

The words "distinctly different" are made with a small soennecken pen and left in outline.

Ruling With the Square.

In ruling with the T square, be careful not to allow it to rest on the card, but to raise it high enough to allow the wide part or shoulder of the pen to rest against the edge. Hold the hand and T square steady and give a firm, quick stroke.

Another device for ruling is known as the ruling pen. It is a double affair, which may be regulated by turning a set screw. The ink is dropped in as needed.

Dainty Outline Lettering.

Nothing but dainty lettering should be used on such cards as the illustrated "layette" card. The pen outline letter gives a daintier effect than if filled in. The word "layette" is outlined with a grey shade and filled in with black, which brings this word out more prominently, as it is the main word of the inscription.

The Hand Bag Card.

The object in making the word "linen" the most prominent on the card is to bring out the importance of the novelty, otherwise the words "hand bag" would be given the foremost place.

Condensed Milk and Rice Up---Sugar Weak

Many Changes of Note During the Week—Another Firm Places Sugar in Cartons on the Market—Brooms Easier—Prospects in New Pack Fruits—Salmon Market Strong.

QUEBEC MARKETS.

POINTERS—

Rice—Up 15 cents.

Sugar—Weak.

Shelled Walnuts—Primary advance.

Montreal, July 11.—It is hardly surprising nowadays to hear of an advance in any particular foodstuff so general is the movement upward.

The higher grades of salmon are $1 to $1.50 per case dearer while the cheaper also show an advance of 50 cents. All packers in Vancouver are trying to induce easten buyers to interest themselves in ½ lb. flat tins. It appears that packers for past few years have been getting a high price for salmon in ½ lb. flats for shipment to England, and we have reports this year to the effect that large orders have been booked on a basis of $10.50 per case f.o.b. shipping point unlabelled. But eastern buyers will hardly be induced to substitute the ½ lb. flat for the 1-lb. tall. At present prices, as there is not much sale for the ½-lb. flat except from laborers for their lunch pails.

Authoritative news has been received from the Old Country to the effect that there is a shortage of fruit and that jam prices are advancing as much as 3d.

There will be some canned mackerel on the market in about three weeks' time prices having been fixed at $1.45.

Business on the whole is surprisingly good and wholesalers are looking for records in turnover this year.

SUGAR.—The market on the whole is weak due to improved prospects of ample supplies throughout the world and to continued increase in present Cuba crop.

There should be considerable business done during coming week as present heatwave, to say nothing of the preserving season means a large consumption owing to large sale of ice cream and soft drinks.

No doubt brokers are inclined to believe that hand-to-mouth order of things, which has prevailed for the past few months, must soon cease and that the trade will buy in larger quantities to take care of increased demand. On the other hand the trade looks for another decline basing opinion on big margin between $3.77 for raws and $4.95 for good granulated in New York. But refiners have also something to say in the matter claiming that the cost of supplies has not been altogether in their favor, even if the raw market has been on a steady decline.

However, changed conditions in Cuba as aforesaid, have brought about a desire on part of planters to make concessions because the present crop is 230,000 tons greater than in 1911 and considerable operation is going on still in different estates. They art not over anxious to have a heavy accumulation of supplies which with the approach of the rainy season, are liable to deteriorate.

SYRUP AND MOLASSES.—The molasses marked is steady there being fair amount of business transacted for grocery grades. It is believed that Barbados has now nothing further for export but there are some who doubt it. While at one time it was thought prices would move upward, yet we are now inclined to tell the trade to study the sugar market carefully from all standpoints as on it depends the tendency of molasses.

NUTS. — A sensational advance has occurred in shelled walnuts, the price quoted in primary markets being equal to 26¼ Montreal. The local market so far is unchanged as there are still some stocks on spot but it can easily be seen that it is only the matter of a short time before the extra price is asked. The cause is attributed to short crop.

There is a stronger tone to market for Brazil nuts as a result of recent purchases which have cleaned up most of recent arrivals.

All shelled nuts are firm as result of reports of likely short crops.

DRIED FRUITS.— There is nothing of particular interest to note in this market, things on the whole being dull.

There has been little business done in raisins of late and reports from the coast only duplicate conditions here.

Prunes are also slow to move, although a good business would be on if holders made slight concessions but are advised that this is hardly likely as holdings are not particularly heavy.

Apricots and peaches present dullness also and it is just hard to say what is coming over the market. However, it might be stated there is every prospect of large crop of peaches and undertone is easy, while same thing may be said of apricots.

Currants are steady and prices remain the same. The latest reports from Greece show that crop is progressing in good shape, market being firm with no prospects of decline.

RICE AND TAPIOCA.—It seems we have been perfectly justified in reporting strained Eastern conditions in rice as again this week we have to announce further increase of 15 cents.

Rangoons are much firmer owing to strong eastern demand, especially from Tapair and as a result business with Europe has been greatly curtailed.

The Saigon market also remains firm with continued demand from Manilla; paddy is dearer, and higher prices are expected.

Firmness also prevails in the China market. A lot of Hunan rice has been imported to Shanghai but quality is inferior to qualities generally consumed, having been secured chiefly for sale amongst poorer classes to relieve distress caused by the soaring of prices. The tendency throughout is for still higher prices.

COFFEE. — As might be expected there is no change in local market as any increase of few points in primary market has little or no effect here. It may be of interest to know that while weather in Brazil is good nevertheless coffee crop is backward and ripening is uneven. The general opinion is that crop will be small one, but some planters state that these reports come from some who simply take a casual glance at the trees. and don't examine them closely. They further add that while some trees look bare nevertheless they carry quite an amount of fruit under the branches.

ONTARIO MARKETS.

POINTERS:—

Condensed Milk—Up 15c and 25c.

Brooms.—Lower grades easier.

Rice—Advanced 15c cwt.

Haddies—New pack arrives.

Sugar—Weak.

Toronto, July 11.—Since week ago an advance of 15 cents on family size and 25c per case, hotel size, has been made in condensed milk. Scarcity of milk is given as the cause.

Rice has gone up 15 cents per cwt. and liable to go still higher, so great is the shortage in the East.

Wholesalers are waiting for opening prices on early canned goods. One wholesaler this week had chance to sell a car load of strawberries to buyers for a Western Canadian firm, but will have to await the opening price. Last year these were out on strawberries, raspberries, cherries, peas, beans, etc., on July 20, but they may be later this year. A Western Ontario preserve and jam manufacturer has sent out his new prices, strawberries being placed at $2.30 as compared to $2 a year ago, and raspberries $2.25 as compared to $1.90 last year, the advance being about 10 per cent.

The new pack of Thistle haddies has arrived, price being $5.40 per case, same as year ago.

The St. Lawrence Sugar Refining Co. have placed on the market 2 and 5 pound cartons of sugar, and pack 100 pounds to the case.

There was some talk of a rise in prices of matches, but this did not materialize at time of going to press.

SUGAR.—The sugar market has remained unchanged from week ago. There is no tendency at the moment upwards, but from all appearances the next change should be down. The European beet crop is reported good, an estimate of 8,500,000 tons being placed on it. If this materializes, it will be a couple of million tons ahead of last year, and more than a million ahead of 1910-1911. It all, of course, depends on future weather conditions. There are close students of the sugar market who see the slump that followed the high record of February, 1905. In January, 1904, the price was $3.95 on Montreal basis. This gradually rose to $5.75 in Feb., 1905, and then declined to $4.00 in March, 1906. The Cuban output up to June 20 is placed at 1,770,988 tons, so that everything seems favorable—except possibly the cost of production—for a declining market. Whether the weather will upset these calculations or not is of course impossible to state.

DRIED FRUITS. — In majority of cases wholesalers have sufficient prunes to meet their trade. While the California crop is good advices indicate heavy buying from Europe, where Bosnia and Servia are reported small crops. Oregon prunes are decidedly short, as it looks as if the big California crop will be easily taken up.

Greece advices state the currant market is excited over rain damages and some think prices will be higher. Apricots are easier.

SPICES. — Demand from the retail trade for pickling spices is already quite keen. Manufacturers claim that the best dealers are buying quality goods, while majority of the smaller purchase for price. The general tendency is to raise the standard of quality regardless of price. Firm markets are the rule in many spices. This is particularly the case in celery seed, cloves, mace and mustard seed. Celery, for instance, used to sell to the trade at 15 cents; now it is around 40 and 45c per pound.

CANNED GOODS.

TORONTO.—Spot stocks of good salmon are light, and prices on new pack are expected to be high. Sockeye salmon in one pound tins is quite scarce.

Wholesalers anticipate getting old stocks of canned goods down pretty well before new pack comes on. The majority of lines will likely be down to vanishing point. Corn is moving out well, and with two months yet to go a good deal more will be sold. Reason for recent weakness in corn prices is given as incident upon Western Canadian market being able to purchase from the U.S. for $1, Winnipeg, whereas Eastern wholesalers were naming $1 here.

Sales of canned beets have increased about 150 per cent., with some wholesalers during past two years. This is a splendid line for retailers to feature.

It is believed that opening prices on strawberries will not be less than year ago. In fact, tendency points upward, as reports from Old Country indicate poor crops and high prices for prepared jam, etc.

MANITOBA MARKETS.

POINTERS:—

Canned Lobster—New pack.
Sugar—Weak.
Nuts—Good trade.

WINNIPEG, July 1.—Both wholesale and retail grocers anticipate an extremely busy fortnight during the Winnipeg Industrial Exhibition and during the visit of H.R.H. the Duke of Connaught. A particularly active demand for canned goods, fruits and nuts is certain, and hotels and restaurants have been stocking heavily in advance.

The crop situation has vastly improved with the advent of heavy rains generally throughout the West.

Labor troubles are not yet ended, but there seems now no danger of anything like a general tie-up of the building trades. It looks now as if the strikes will peter out without any definite results being attained.

The new pack of canned lobsters is now on the market.

Sugar is still weak and farther declines in price are considered as probable; at the same time there is an extremely good demand, which will likely grow stronger as the preserving season advances.

June collections were fairly good, and retailers report volume of cash trade as above the average.

SUGAR.—Sugar is still unsettled. Europe has touched a lower point than for some months past, a new low level in a not long drawn-out downward course. The chances on the Continent seem good for a big beet crop. The weather has been favorable. There is a probability of Cuba's crop now ending, amounting to 1,900,000 tons. This tonnage would be nearly 100,000 over the previous record crop, 1910. Big production and the probability of big outturns to be reaped in most of the important producing countries means lots of sugar and is causing traders to go slow. Sugar will likely be cheaper yet.

NEW BRUNSWICK MARKETS.

St. John, July 10.—Fine weather last week proved great help in stimulating business which had been rather slow for a time, and the trade is well satisfied at the orders and receipts which have been produced. So far as the markets are concerned there is little change of interest. Sugar is ten cents lower in all grades from last report, as was predicted would be the case some weeks ago. The price of canned salmon has gone up and is expected to remain at that price for a time, even though the demand for the canned stock at present is not excessive because of large receipts of fresh river and harbor salmon.

The past week has proven also of decided help in vegetation and fruit growing, and in consequence, there is a better supply of early green goods and berries in local grocery stores than for any time previous this year. Strawberries are being received from up-river districts in large numbers, and at present are fairly low in price. Tuesday and Wednesday of this week were probably the banner days for this berry. The quality is particularly good, the demand brisk, and the price easy.

Retail Grocers Join in Advertising Plan

Use Page Space Every Tuesday to Tell Housekeepers of the Economy in Buying From Association Members—Triangle is Their Trade Mark—This Appears on all Their Windows—700 Grocers in the Plan.

The Retail Grocers' Association, of Philadelphia, have commenced a co-operative advertising plan. They publish a page advertisement in one of the local papers on Tuesday morning of each week. On each page the heading is the same, "Pure Food Economy," it is, "a bulletin issued by the Grocers' Association to promote honest grocery values, encourage the pure food movement and help reduce the cost of living."

More than 700 reputable grocers belong to the association. A complete list of members with the addresses of each store was published in the second advertisement. That the value of the general advertising may be secured by each member, a triangle emblem has been adopted which is shown on the advertisements and appears on the windows of each store. The consumers are told to "look for the store in your neighborhood with the triangle emblem."

Business Talk in Each Ad.

An editorial forms an important part of each advertisement. Here are some of the talks:

"When you need groceries, look for a store with a Triangle Emblem. In giving such a store your patronage you will be dealing at a reliable store, independent of any trust; you can depend upon the purity of any article you buy there and upon honest value and full weight and measure.

Co-operate to Reduce Costs.

"We do not expect to clean up all of the factories and prevent adulteration of food stuffs in a day, but if you will co-operate with us we know that we can greatly improve existing conditions and gradually bring about a reduction in the cost of living."

From editorials in other advertisements statements which can be used by any dealer who seeks for strong arguments in his advertising.

"If you underpay you underget. Buy groceries of known quality from a merchant in your home neighborhood and hold him responsible for their purity and quality, and you will do more to protect yourself against impure food stuffs and unfair prices than all the laws of all the states."

Here is another:

"Looking at it from the viewpoint of the consumer, the retail grocer occupies the most important place in modern commerce. To him we look for the things most necessary to the maintenance of life and health. He supplies the fuel that keeps our vital processes in motion. Our lives are literally in his hands.

"Direct contact with him is desirable. His personal supervision over your purchases of groceries and their delivery to your home is invaluable. He knows the requirements of the community in his immediate neighborhood and is equipped to meet them promptly. The triangle emblem on his window stands for all that is good in the grocery business—purity, honesty, reliability, prompt delivery and courteous treatment."

Here is where the department stores and the chain stores come in:—

"A few department stores throughout the country maintain grocery departments and so-called pure food expositions and make extravagant claims about the high quality of their groceries and the low prices at which they are sold.

"As a matter of fact there is no such thing as higher quality groceries than those sold in the triangle stores; and the prices at which they are sold, quality considered, are as low and quite often lower than in any department store anywhere in America."

NEW COFFEE FILLER ON MARKET.

The Sleepy Eye Flour Mills Co., with headquarters at Minneapolis, Minn., are placing on the Canadian market a coffee filler called Koffio. The agents in Canada are Mason & Hickey, Winnipeg, and P. S. Doyle & Co., Montreal.

The world's annual consumption of prunes is estimated at 360,000,000 pounds. The production in 1911 amounted to 376,400,000 pounds.

Rolled Oats Recover the Lost Ground

Decline of Last Week, Followed on Monday by Similar Advance —During Interval of Lower Prices Wholesale Trade Restocked —Flour Situation Unchanged—Crop Prospects in United States and Canada.

As intimated last week, the rolled oats decline was not warranted by market conditions. On Monday of this week prices recovered again, going back to the former figure. It will be remembered that the extent of the decline a week ago was 15 cents per cwt. Present quotations appear to be well able to maintain themselves for a time at least. After the decline the trade stocked up pretty well.

The flour market remains about the same as week ago. The eyes of all grain and flour dealers are now centred on the growing crops, on the outcome of which the market will largely depend. It is not only estimated, but now practically assured, that the total wheat crop in the United States will exceed that of last year. The prospects are that the quality of the hard winter wheat will be exceptionally fine. Although the winter wheat is now being harvested in large quantities, the market is still above export basis.

Of Canada it is too early to forecast with any degree of certainty the result of the harvest, as cutting is some distance off. With the considerable increase in acreage, however, the moderately warm weather, and the general rains in the three prairie provinces last week, for which the growers had been praying, the present outlook is bright. It is true that possible early frosts will keep the result uncertain to the end, but against this stands the fact that in some parts of the northwest planting was two weeks earlier than usual. In England the wheat is reported to be in healthy condition.

MONTREAL.

FLOUR.—The volume of business being done is fairly large, and millers have no reason to complain. There has been more business transacted over the cable lately than during past week, and quotations are fairly well in line.

CEREALS.—The recent drop in price of rolled oats, as stated in last issue, was hardly warranted by market conditions, and prices have gone back to what they were a fortnight ago. There is not a heavy trade passing, as new oats will be on the market in another month or so, and dealers are inclined to wait.

CEREALS.—Rolled oats on Monday recovered the 15 cents per cwt. lost last week. At that time the market didn't really warrant the break, which was probably due in part to induce trade this hot weather. During the week after the decline wholesale grocers stocked up pretty well, being assured of steady future market. Oats are, however, at time of writing, on the weak side.

Lemons Up; Canadian Vegetables Arriving

Hot Weather Makes Heavy Calling on the Lemon — Canadian Vegetables Including Tomatoes, Peas, Beans, Beets and Carrots Forcing Out Imported Stock—New Potatoes Declining Further—First Raspberries Arrive—Prospects for the Crop.

The Canadian fruit and vegetable markets these days present as many new arrivals as a popular summer resort in hot weather. At the same time other lines are disappearing as the season advances. For instance this week we have raspberries, Canadian outdoor tomatoes, green peas and beans, beets and carrots, etc.

The first crates of raspberries arrived on the Toronto fruit market on Monday and Tuesday and as the week wore on their arrival was accelerated. They were picked at Queenston and St. David's, and sold at 20 cents per box. From prospects at present raspberries will only be a fair crop. Numbers of the vines were winter killed and the dry weather of past few weeks has retarded growth and hastened ripening. The strawberry season is almost over being hurried on by the drought. As early predicted there were no cheap berries this season.

The lemon situation is interesting. Prices in some centres have been put up on account of the large quantities used in manufacture of lemonade this hot weather. Almost every family has a stock and retail demand is heavy.

Cherries will be at their height during the next 10 days so that every advantage should be taken by the dealer to move them out while sales are easy. Gooseberries are a rather light crop this year.

Green beans from Streetsville and Windsor, Ont., were offered during the week. The arrival also of Canadian beets and carrots will stop importations henceforth. Outdoor grown tomatoes also attracted attention.

A further decline has taken place on some markets at least in new imported potatoes. Canadian grown stock will soon make their appearance when prices will have to go further down.

MONTREAL.

GREEN FRUITS.—Bananas are moving out freely while strawberries are becoming somewhat scarcer and prices show a slight increase. Lemons are in good demand owing to heavy consumption during recent and present hot weather. Oranges are following the lead of other lines and are moving upwards.

FRUITS.—The continued hot weather has boosted the price of lemons. The local price at time of going to press is $5 for both Verdelli and November cuts. These are practically the only lines on the market. That prices will not recede much as long as present retail demand lasts is a certainty. California navel oranges are about over, and our summer orange the late Valencias are selling well, prices being advanced about 50 cents case from week ago.

Strawberries are on their last legs after a fairly good run. The rains of last Friday and Saturday helped the last berries and prices on Saturday were fairly reasonable. In fact on Monday and Tuesday berries were selling wholesale as low as 8½ with best quality at 13 cents. The rains were however too late to prolong the crop but helped along raspberries a few of which began to arrive on the market early in the week. The opening price was 20 cents per box.

There is a fair supply of watermelons coming along and they are being bought up rapidly. They are however a little scarcer than usual.

The present as well as the next 10 days or so will see the cherry market at its height. Some nice California pears, plums and peaches are arriving.

VEGETABLES.—Several new Canadian vegetables have made their debut on market during the week. These include beans, outdoor tomatoes, beets, carrots and peas. Beets and carrots are quoted at 40 cents per dozen, but with the others will gradually get cheaper as season advances. The tomatoes have come in from St. Catharines and Leamington districts and sold early in week for $1.25 to $1.75 a basket, according to quality. The arrival of these vegetables means that United States shipments are practically at and end. Canadian asparagus is about over, while celery from Kalamazoo is being offered.

New potatoes have declined again from a week ago from 50 to 75 cents per barrel. Future easing off may be expected as season advances and supplies secured from further north.

FRUITS AND VEGETABLES. — There is the greatest activity in these lines at present, and the heaviest trade on record is anticipated during the visit of the Governor-General and exhibition week. This is also the season of summer fairs and picnics, and the holiday trade is good. Potatoes are much cheaper, demand poor. New potatoes are 4 cents per lb.

FILLING IN THE SPARE MOMENTS.

There are clerks who find time hanging heavily on their hands. In the grocery store where there are so many things that can be done, such should not be the case. It is an open secret that the way to make time go quickly is to keep busy. It is the busy day that appears short and the short days which are happy, contented ones.

Most people are busy through necessity. It requires some practice before the average person can see enough things ahead to keep his mind off the flight of time. The person who does one thing and then sits down to figure out what to do next is likely to be keeping an eye on the clock. It is the fellow who sees many things ahead who forgets all about time.

A good method is to plan in the morning a number of things you intend to do during your spare moments that day. Some days perhaps you will not be able to get over the whole list, but it will hold good for the following day. The grocery clerk should not find it difficult to keep busy. There is always a window to be cleaned or trimmed, shelves to arrange, counters to dust, show cases to clean and arrange, displays to be made, show cards to be printed, and so many other things that the clerk should easily be able to put in a busy day. And it is the clerk who puts in a busy day, not one, but many, who is successful.

How Newfoundland Grocer Sells Fresh Fish

His Summer Sales Are Kept Up By Devoting One of His Display Windows to This Line—Built Zinc Lined Vessel in the Window and Sprays the Goods Continuously — Waste Water Carried Away by Second Pipe.

St. John's, Nfld., July 8.—(Special) —A source of anxiety sometimes to a grocer is his inability to display his stock of fresh salmon, lobsters, halibut, etc., to the best advantage, and make them attractive to customers.

Outside of the store of W. E. Bearns, a local dealer on some specially built stand was the only available place that suited all right in cool weather. But now with the hot days, and dirt and dust blowing around the streets goods could not be displayed in this way. Goods in side would only attract persons who came in regularly, but by the judicious and persistent use of a blackboard outside, goods, of course, could be well advertised; but this is nothing like the actual display of the goods themselves as that is considered by far the best method of selling.

Mr. Bearns hit upon this idea, which is perhaps new to some of the trade. He decided to give up the whole space of one window to display this class of goods. He built up in the window a zinc lined receptacle, the whole breadth of the window. This receptacle he connected at the back with the water system. The pipe continues along the centre and then goes up through the surface about three feet. At the top of the pipe he has a perforated nozzle, and by turning on the water at any time he can spray and keep cool all the goods displayed. Another pipe carries off all the water used. Besides keeping the goods cool, he is able to keep them free from dirt and dust incident to a store. Scattered all over the receptacle he has ice in small lots.

It is an admirable arrangement and gives the goods a clean, healthy and wholesome appearance, and makes them attractive to customers. Besides useful for fresh fish display, it can also be utilized for other goods of a perishable nature, such as fresh eggs, fresh rhubarb, or anything of the kind.

Has Large Window Space.

Of course , Mr. Bearns possesses abundant window space, and his other goods do not suffer anything. But to a grocer with only two windows it is a question if the amount of trade to be done would warrant him giving up one of his windows exclusively to a fresh fish display.

The arrangement is simple, useful, and costs but little to fix up, and the certainty of always having goods fresh and clean and no chance of spoiling would more than warrant the small outlay. It is likely other grocers will be installing something similar as the goods will be always displayed to the public.

A Youthful President

Gordon Drake, a London, Ont., grocer, is one of the younger members of the trade who is taking an active interest in organization work. He is president of the Hamilton Road Section of the London R.G.A., and a member of the executive of the main body. He was vice-president of the latter last year. The

G. B. DRAKE,
President of the Hamilton Road section of the London Retail Grocers' Association.

Hamilton Road Section has a membership of 16, and meets twice a month. Mr. Drake was largely instrumental in its organization.

One good result of this Association is that no person can obtain credit from any member unless he has paid his bill where he has been previously dealing. The members have also agreed to close their stores on Wednesday afternoons during May, June, July and August, going the main body one better as its members close during three months only.

If any grievances crop up from time to time the members get each other on the phone and discuss them frankly.

Hot Weather Hard on Fresh Fish Trade

Easily Sold if it Could be Kept Fresh—Dealers With Good Facilities Making Money—Big Catches of Cod in the East Resulting in Easier Prices—Lobster Season Just Closed a Good One.

It requires considerable ice these days to keep fish fresh, and it does not appear from the sum total of sales that all grocers are maintaining their fish departments during summer. Fish, however, has a good reputation as a summer food, and those dealers who are giving it the proper care and attention are making good money and at same time attracting customers for other goods. Thursdays and Fridays are the big days of the week for the retailer and those handling fish are selling good quantities.

Reports from the Maritime provinces indicate splendid catches of cod, and the lobster season just closed is claimed to have been a good one. Newfoundland and Norway fishermen have met with good success in cod, and market is quite easy.

In Montreal, lake trout and whitefish are not as plentiful as usual, and prices are firmer. On Toronto market, however, there is sufficient of everything to meet demand.

QUEBEC.

MONTREAL.—Haddock and cod remain plentiful, and are in good demand as prices are quite reasonable. Lake trout and whitefish are not so plentiful, and prices are firmer. Gaspe salmon also shows a dropping off in price. Fancy large mackerel are scarce, and price has advanced. Smoked eels are also coming along in good quantities now.

ONTARIO.

TORONTO.—Practically no change has taken place in price quotations on fish from week ago. This is usual during the hot summer season and few changes may be expected. While fairly large quantities of fresh fish are going into consumption, yet the great majority of retailers have not yet decided that fish in summer can be made profitable if attended to properly. The hot weather is therefore against distribution while in favor of consumption.

The chief fresh fish on this market are white, trout and halibut, and there are plenty of these to meet the retail demand. Thursdays are naturally the big fish days so far as sales to the trade are concerned.

NOVA SCOTIA.

HALIFAX.—There is a big slump in the dry fish market, the prices having declined from $7 to $5 per quintal for codfish. The situation has been brought about by the phenomenal catch of the Lunenburg fleet, coupled with successful fishing on Labrador and Newfoundland coasts, and also the record breaking catch in Norway. The heavy shipments from Norway to the Cuban market have also caused prices to take a sudden drop, and will seriously affect exports from Nova Scotia.

A few cargoes of fresh fish were placed here at prices ranging from $6.25 to $5.00 per quintal. From that price the decline continued, some cargoes being sold at $4.50 and $4.00, but the quality of the fish was not as good. A reduction of 20 per cent. in the price of fish is in direct contrast with the price of meat which has advanced about the same percentage.

While no quantities of spring Mackerel have been arriving, it is stated that the price will be about $8.50 per barrel for No. 3 stock, which is about $2.50 less than at same season last year.

The lobster season is now closed, and the pack is quite heavy. The action of the French Government in making new regulations regarding the marking of cans continues to cause some uneasiness among the exporters, as nothing definite has yet been heard from the Canadian Government. Prices now rule about as follows:—

Produce & Provisions

Butter and Eggs Show Firmer Tendency

Advances Made in Each Case on Some Markets— Considerable Butter Going to the West and Into Cold Storage—Shrinkage in Eggs High—Refrigerator Cars Wanted — Cooked Meats Meet With Favor in Hot Weather.

The hot spell has been a deterrent to the provision business as well as to other lines. At the same time it is responsible for the maintenance of demand in cooked and smoked meats as women are anxious to get along with as little heat as possible in the house. Dressed hogs and lard have eased off somewhat since last report at some points. If we experience much more hot weather retailers will find cooked meats an easy summer selling line.

Reports from Montreal show that large shipments of butter are being made to the Canadian West. Vancouver is buying from Eastern Canada now, since the New Zealand market will not be available again till fall. Large quantities are reported going into storage in the far West as the June and early July make is particularly desired for this purpose. Eastern wholesale firms are storing as well, all of which has been responsible for increased firmness and advances in some places from a week ago. Large shipments of cream are being made from Quebec province to the United States and much is going into consumption in the form of ice cream. These conditions combine to make the butter market high at present and we may expect comparatively high prices next winter on storage stock when supplies now going in are put on the market. Fresh creamery prints on the Toronto market a year ago ranged from 21 to 24 cents, whereas this year they are from 27 to 29 to the trade.

These are the days when the egg buyer has to be careful. The candlers are working overtime selecting the fresh from the heat-affected as shrinkage is heavy. In fact this has much to do with firm conditions of the market as large numbers of eggs have to be discarded. Few if any are now going into storage on account of the heat and anyway wholesale dealers generally are just about getting enough to supply their retail demand. Receipts as natural in humid weather are not at all on the increase as the hen feels the heat as well as other bipeds. For these reasons eggs are slightly firmer than a week ago. Montreal wholesale men make an attempt to get refrigerator cars for carrying eggs as well as butter. This would undoubtedly check shrinkage to great extent as most eggs are fresh when starting out.

While the undertone to the cheese market may be steady the price of new cheese eased off a bit since last report. In view of the comparatively high price this season factories are probably gtting better supplies of milk lately. At the same time the British market is weaker and buyers of Canadian cheese boards are paying less in order that profits may be maintained. Statistics show that exports from Montreal last week were 76,869 as compared to 88,806 the corresponding week of a year ago.

MONTREAL.

PROVISIONS. — Although things pointed to higher prices for lard, the feeling is a little easier owing to acculation of stocks. Still there is little hope of lower prices just now.

There is quite a good demand for smoked meat, etc., for camping trade, and on the whole business is good.

TORONTO.

PROVISIONS. — The retail demand for cooked meats has of late been good. This is accounted for by the fact that the retailer is pushing cooked ham during the hot weather. Women are simply rebelling against standing over a hot stove while beef is roasted and are easily persuaded to eliminate this work by buying ready cooked goods. Roll bacon is marked down from a ¼ to a ½ cent per lb. since last week and dressed hogs have weakened 50 cents per cwt. The supply has been fairly good and as remarked by one provision dealer, "hogs have been a little too high." Pure lard has also eased off to the extent of a quarter of a cent.

BUTTER. — There is no weakening sign to butter market. In fact quotations are advanced from a week ago from a half cent to one and in some cases two cents. Demand is given by all as the chief cause. In some cases reports are being received regarding burning up of pastures in the country; but this is by no means general and is not as yet a deciding factor in advancing tendency. A continuation of the hot spell, however, would soon result in substantial decline in production. The fact that cheese is a good price is resulting in increased quantities of milk going to factories and this year larger quantities of cream than usual are being used for ice cream and household purposes, all of which tends to curtail butter production. The June make of butter is considered a good one for storage purposes and a large quantity has been put away. Western demand is heavy, too, and there are, therefore, not many weakening tendencies just now.

EGGS.—Naturally the shrinkage in eggs is now heavy. Eggs exposed to a temperature of from 80 to 90 degrees for any length of time are apt to deteriorate in value and that is just what is happening. Commission houses report receipts fair but their prices to the trade are kept up by loss in bad stock. All receipts are being turned into present trade channels as hot weather eggs are not desirable for storing. Few, if any will be put away this month or the first part of August. Some firms quoted new laids to the retail trade this week as high as 25 cents.

CHEESE.—The increased make of cheese and the weakening market in the Old Country are responsible for an easing off in new cheese prices this week of about ½ a cent per pound. The British market is a big factor in ruling our prices as buyers must buy at a price that will mean a profit. Old cheese is in small bounds, some wholesale firms getting 19 cents. Stiltons are practically off the market.

Special Care Being Given to Provisions

Newmarket, Ont., Dealer Has Set Aside Two Display Cases for Them—Maintains that They Should be Seen—Has Meat Slicer and Considers it of Great Assistance.

Newmarket, Ont., July 11.—(Special.)—The provision department has an important place in the grocery store. Such is the opinion of W. L. Bosworth, a grocer of Newmarket, who believes also that if it is worth having in the store it is worth specializing on to some extent. Therefore, with this store, provisions have been worked into quite an important department.

Meats hidden behind refrigerator door, under the counter or in the cellar will not sell. Situated thus they may be boosted into a degree of prominence by advertising, and bringing them to customer's attention frequently by personal talks. However, Mr. Bosworth thinks that proper display of these lines will assist materially in their sale. When goods can be seen they are much more likely to create a favorable impression on the customer. This is perhaps more true of provisions than many other lines.

Mr. Bosworth has become cognizant of this fact and has arranged this department accordingly. It occupies quite a prominent position close to the main counter. For the display of provisions to good advantage, there are two display cases. One of these is square-shaped, with four shelves. The bottom shelf holds cheese, while on the others different varieties of smoked meats are shown. The other show case is a smaller one, with three flats, and is used for the display of cooked meats. This line is kept prominently before customers who visit the store, and, being under cover, impresses customers that goods are carefully cared for, more so than if they were exposed.

Uses Meat Slicer.

A slicing machine is another important feature of this department, and is considered as a good investment by Mr. Bosworth. "One of the advantages," he says, "is the quickness with which meats can be sliced. With this machine four or five pounds can be sliced while one pound is being cut by the old method. This means a great deal on busy days. It allows customers to be served much more quickly.

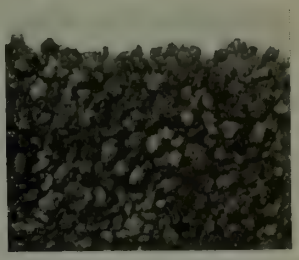
"We get to know just about the exact number of slices it takes to make a pound of each kind, so that it does not require so much running back and forth from the scales to obtain the desired weight."

There is also another advantage to which no little importance is attached, namely, the much better work which is done by the machine. Most people want their meats sliced thin, and this the machine does to perfection. If there is a customer who wishes thicker slices the machine may be adjusted to the thickness desired.

Just at the present time there is a big demand for cooked ham for sandwiches and for this purpose it is desirable to have it sliced thin. In fact, customers demand it thus, and this is where the value of the machine shows up.

The season for cooked meats, and smoked meats as well, is now just nicely getting under way. Grocers would do well to give more than usual attention to these lines during the next couple of months. They will be in demand, and the dealer who boosts them is the one who is going to get the trade.

A RIVAL OF COFFEE "KOFFIO"



Have you heard of the new sensational coffee filler or substitute now being marketed under the trade name of "KOFFIO?"

It is the latest thing in the coffee world, and well warrants your close investigation. It is named "KOFFIO," because it looks, tastes, smells and weighs the same as good coffee, and has a similar qualitative chemical composition. It is a Pure Cereal product, and contains no chicory. Manufactured under a special process by trained artisans, and in "style" and "cup" there is no chicory or other substitute to compare with it; has good body. A rich, delicious flavor and aroma that will improve the drink of any harsh type of coffee. Sold from one end of the United States to the other and exported to two foreign countries.

WE ARE JUST ENTERING THE CANADIAN MARKET, and cordially invite criticism of this material from experts or anyone interested.

We have local representatives and local stocks at Montreal and Winnipeg from which practically immediate deliveries can be made.

The Hot Weather Brings Increased Business

It is perhaps a little unfortunate that people in the Grocery trade have to work much harder in the summer than in any other time of the year, but the conditions cannot be altered so that the only thing to do is to minimize the work as much as possible and pile in and be thankful that we are in a business that does sometimes, if not always, keep us busy. Consumers are less inclined than ever to do any summer work that can possibly be avoided; result—they look to the grocer to supply them with canned and preserved fruits, jams, jellies, pickles, sauces, ketchup, vegetables, etc. To a certain extent they have been educated and thereby led into this condition by firms such as H. J. Heinz Company, who, putting out the highest standard possible to be attained by brains, backed up by an unlimited supply of money have captivated the palates of consumers with their luscious goods. Can it be wondered at then, that the Grocer is looked to for a great deal of the product that would otherwise have to be put up in hot kitchens in the holiday time? Women won't do it–and the sooner you grasp the fact that you are to be the principal medium provision accordingly, the more money there will be in it for you.

The Heinz Main Plant is built around a series of open courts, affording unlimited admittance of fresh air and sunshine to every part. Its kitchens are clean and bright. Its employees are uniformed. No home kitchen could improve upon their surroundings or methods.

Their establishment is open to the public every working day and welcomes more than forty thousand visitors annually; thereby affording opportunity for the most critical housewife to satisfy herself of the quality of materials, skill and care which enter into the preparation of Heinz Foods.

The Canadian factory at Leamington, Ontario, is worked along the same identical lines as the main plant at Pittsburg.

Heinz 57 Varieties are Winners all along the line.

Not an Enterprise for the "Quitter"

¶ "If there is one enterprise on earth," says John Wanamaker, "that a 'quitter' should leave severely alone, it is advertising. To make a success of advertising one must be prepared to stick like a barnacle on a boat's bottom.

¶ "He must know before he begins it that he must spend money—lots of it.

¶ "Somebody must tell him that he cannot hope to reap results commensurate with his expenditure early in the game.

¶ "Advertising does not jerk; it pulls. It begins very gently at first, but the pull is steady. It increases day by day and year by year, until it exerts an irresistible power."

Why Don't You do Like Him?

H. J. Buckley of Moberly, Mo., who bought a No. 84 Kingery Corn Popper with Peanut cylinder extra for $94.00.

He writes that the machine is doing fine. I pay $40.00 per month rent and have four people employed and machine pays rent and help.

Now to get at his profits in this little, big business, let's do a little figuring. Rent $480 per year. Four clerks at $5.00 per week each, $1,040, total $1,520 or 15 times the cost of his machine. Did you ever add anything to your business that beats it? In some cases they have earned more net profit than that of the business of the entire store. Furthermore its attractiveness turns the eyes of passersby upon your store. Often it is the agent of sending them in. It helps the business in the store. The Kingery Peanut Roasters and Corn Poppers are of many kinds and styles—Steam, Electric, Spring and Hand Power. Ranging in price from $8.50 to $350.00. Sold on liberal instalments.

You should have Kingery's Book of Possibilities and Catalog No. 39. They are free.

How Many of Your Customers Know the Flavor of Real Vanilla?

Literally thousands of people do not know the flavor of real vanilla extract—

Shirriff's True Vanilla

They have simply been buying vanilla in name only. They have not known that a bottle with a vanilla label might contain a chemical imitation of the real thing. Lately, many progressive grocers have been pointing this fact out to their customers, and telling them the advantages of using the real vanilla extract of Mexican Vanilla beans. Housewives always feel under an obligation to grocers who show them how to improve their cooking. And Shirriff's True Vanilla certainly does improve the flavor of puddings, cakes and sauces, much to the housewives' delight.

There is good profit for grocers in getting their customers to use true vanilla extract. A list of selling points that have proved successful in increasing the retail sales of Shirriff's True Vanilla will be sent to you on request.

Delicious with Fresh Fruit

The Sweetheart of the Corn

The Food for Body and Brain

Canada's Popular Breakfast Food

There is nothing more delicious for breakfast through the berry season than Kellogg's Toasted Corn Flakes and fresh fruit; and it is becoming known widely for the rare treat this high-grade cereal and berries put up. Every atom of food and every vestige of sweetness in the corn are reproduced in crisp, creamy, nutritious form in

KELLOGG'S Toasted Corn Flakes

You need not fear of a shelf of unsold cereals if you stock Kellogg's. It sells fast the two main reasons are that it is a good quality to stock; and that it is well advertised—we all know that advertising creates desire, causing readers to wish for well-advertised goods.

You get the business with a stock of Kellogg's on hand. See to it to-day.

The Buyers of Quality

Have a particular desire for Thistle Brand fish—they serve the appetite with such delicious satisfaction that to "try" even to sell another brand to one who has already tasted Thistle Brand would be useless.

CANNED WHERE CAUGHT

The "Thistle" Brand of Canned Haddies, Fancy Lobsters, Kippered Herring and Herring and Tomato Sauce, are canned right where they are caught—at the water side. How better could you preserve the natural and delicate flavor of the fish? IMPOSSIBLE.

But that is not all, because Captain Austin has the unequalled skill of a lifetime of experience. THERE IS NO DIRT OR SLIME—NO UNCLEANLINESS TO BE FOUND IN THE "THISTLE" BRAND. The reputation of the foremost fish curer in the country is at stake under the label of "Thistle" Brand.

VALORIZATION OR NOT—

HIGH COFFEE IS HERE TO STAY!

BESIDES—THE PRICE OF COFFEE has advanced less during the "high cost of living" period than any other food commodity used for general consumption. That's commercial history—not an opinion.

There has been 47 per cent. more filler or substitute used in coffee this year than last, and the demand increasing.

Everybody's doing it—including the best houses in the trade. If you are not, you're behind the times. Substitutes are necessary to allow making a decent profit on some business.

KOFFIO, the new filler, possesses actual food value practically equal to the coffee it displaces. (See official analyses in FREE booklet, showing carbon-hydrates in KOFFIO 67.71, as against 70.22 in high grade coffees.) That enables you to give the ultimate consumer an honest deal.

KOFFIO looks, smells, tastes and "draws" like good coffee, and will tone down strong Mexicans or soured types to a sweet palatable cup.

You can use double the amount of KOFFIO over any other filler or substitute on the market, and at the same time furnish a satisfactory beverage.

Guaranteed under all Pure Food laws as a pure wheat product and absolutely immune from spoilage by age, dampness, heat or vermin. Keeps perfectly winter or summer—in any climate. Stands ocean shipment, and does not "cake up" like chicory.

The exceptionally low price of KOFFIO (less than one-third the price of cheapest coffee) will allow you to make good money on institution business. Used extensively in all large railroad and construction commissaries, lumber camps and mining communities. Restaurant, boarding house and small hotel trade now demanding it.

A new booklet, "Facts about KOFFIO," giving (confidential) important information, together with samples and prices FREE on request. Write nearest representative—(See list below.)

MUCH EASIER TO DO THAN YOU MAY THINK

No article that you sell will so well repay you for a little extra effort as 40c Red Rose Tea.

We doubt if there is anything sold in the grocery store that is so fully worth to the consumer the small extra cost as 40c. Red Rose, while at the same time giving the merchant a much better profit.

Within a very few months nearly any merchant could, by a little but persistent effort, change his 30c. tea trade to 40c., and when once changed he will only wonder that he had ever sold any tea but the 40c. Red Rose.

It is a very easy way to make a little more profit in your business this year.

Preventing Complaints from Occurring

Montreal Dealer Finds it Easier to Do This Than to Smooth Out the Difficulties When They Do Happen—Standing Offer to Take Back Unsatisfactory Goods—Makes Specialty of High Quality Goods — Educating Customers to Carry Home Parcels—In Business for Thirty Years.

"Thirty years at it and not yet tired." These few words sum up the length of time Wm. Currie, Guy Street, Montreal, has been in busines, and his present attitude towards it. His business methods will undoubtedly prove of interest, but a few words about certain changes he has noticed in Montreal must deserve notice.

In earlier days Mr. Currie was part owner of a store on McGill Street, which was then partly residential and partly a marketing centre, but to-day those acquainted with the city know that McGill Street is no longer residential, but forms a road through the largest wholesale section of the city

Just as labor follows capital, so the retailer must follow trade, and Mr. Currie soon found that if his business was to show a satisfactory increase yearly, he must pitch his tent further uptown where the good families were camping. After remaining in partnership for a number of years on Bleury Street, he decided, on summing up the probable growth of the city in various directions, that the west end must grow and he now has no reason to regret having broken loose and starting on his own account on Guy Street.

"Yes, I have customers at the four corners of the Island, and a number on my books at present who gave me my first orders when I opened up on McGill Street, and I am holding their accounts simply because they have faith in me." There is quite a lot in that little word faith, and Mr. Currie knows just what it means to have the confidence of his customers. "I never give anyone reason to complain, and if there should be any ground for an argument, I always let the customer win; because I want her orders. I let her think she knows it all. It does me no harm."

"The dearest and best goods are the cheapest in the long run." This is another of our subject's mottoes, and so strongly does he believe in the trade-pulling power of good goods, that he has no hesitation in telling a customer who is somewhat doubtful about a new line, that he is willing to refund her money if, after trial, she has a reasonable complaint to make. This straightforward way of dealing is bound to secure confidence, and what is a more valuable asset?

Creates Demand Himself.

"No, why should I wait for people to come to my store after seeing an advertisement for a good line?" Such was Mr. Currie's remark when asked about that too common reply given to the traveler, "Oh! Create a demand first, then we'll put in a stock." He realizes that waiting for a demand means an admission of inability to sell, and consequently he puts in a stock of all the leading lines, instructs his clerks to push them, and by their selling talk they manage to build up a good business whether the goods are above the average price or not.

Likes the Customer in Store.

A customer in the store is worth two on the phone, to vary an old adage. Mr. Currie, amongst others interviewed, believe that it is well nigh impossible to swell an order over the phone to the same extent as when taken in the store, and no grocer should allow any customer once in the store to go away with only one package. "Make them look ahead," says Mr. Currie. "Once you get a woman in the store who cannot reach you by phone, tell her that she may have a call from friends, and that you have a nice line of biscuits and fresh cake. Or perhaps it will be raining to-morrow and she will not want to come down again for another supply of goods."

The window connected with this article, though somewhat spoiled by reflections from buildings opposite, will give a good idea of what Mr. Currie thinks of the value of well-dressed windows, and he is particularly fortunate in this respect, as in W. Deane he has a man of ideas. Mr. Deane does not get into the window and spend half a day thinking out an idea, but plans ahead, perhaps while he is making up parcels, and then when time comes he is in a position to simply arrange the goods artistically with the maximum results in a minimum of time.

A Bookkeeping System for Retailers

First of Series of Articles Going Deeply Into the Question—Books Should be Kept Simply But Accuracy And Sufficiency Are Imperative—Regularity and Systematic Work Cannot be Dodged.

*By Henry Johnson, Jr.

I have the following letter:

W———, Alta., June 15, 1912.

Henry Johnson, Jr., Canadian Grocer,—

Dear Sir:—Have always read your teachings with great care and interest, come to you for a little advice. As we are about to take up stock and wish to start a new set of books, would like you to give us an outline for a simple and safe system. One that does not take an expert to keep them. Hoping to hear from you at an early date,

C. H. G.

It is really impossible to give anybody an "outline" for a set of books unless that person is already an expert; for only an expert would understand an outline. The amateur must have the entire system laid out. To do that here will take the space of several articles; yet I am inclined to write up my entire system, because I believe it will prove valuable to a number of readers.

Again I am sorry that I could not reply to this communication before now. I simply do the best I can, handling each letter in rotation. I hope that my friend has not yet taken his inventory, for I should like to have him use his old books until he has digested the new idea. If, as he reads, he will be sure he understands, and if he does not, if he will immediately write for fuller details, I shall be able, I hope, to do him some good. But if he starts out without full knowledge, he will probably not be very well pleased with his results. So I urge him to "go slow."

Must Have Accurate Information.

Note carefully this point: A system for the retailer should be simple as possible; but it must first be sufficient. That is, we are after full, accurate information about our business. That, we must get from our books, or we had better not bother to keep books at all. So let us make up our minds to start with the understanding that we shall have to think of this as a serious matter and study it accordingly. We must be ready to do the necessary work to get our results; and, while the system does not require more than 20 to 30 minutes daily on the part of a rapid worker, yet to begin with it will probably keep the head of the firm busy for one or two hours. He must be willing to put in that time until he has mastered all details, until the details mean something to him, or he might as well save his time for some other work. If he is not ready to begin on this plan, he has not a fair conception of the great value of accurate accounting to his business; and if that is the situation, he will not go very far as a bookkeeper anyway.

An Expert or Failure.

Another thing that occurs to me as I look back over his letter. That is the question of what is an expert? Is he not one who knows his subject thoroughly? If that is so, then the man who, in his own business, undertakes to keep accounts, must be an expert or he will not succeed. For until those accounts are actual, living things to him, and not mere rows of figures, his work will have little value to him. He must UNDERSTAND what he is working at. He must know the WHY as well as the what. He must be able to see ahead and know just what he is working toward each time he writes a figure, or his work will be valueless. Thus, so far as his own bookkeeping goes, he is an EXPERT, or he is a failure—there is no middle ground.

I make all these points preliminary to the discussion because it is only right that the merchant realize that this is a portion of his work which is just as important as his buying and selling and making margins. In fact, the best results cannot be obtained from the rest of his labors unless he has good books and keeps them. Hence, some would say this is the most important of all his work. I do not go so far as that, because many men have made money who did not keep any books at all. But those men took tremendous chances—like other men who risk fire without insurance, and never burn out; and it is not good business to take chances which are avoidable and the avoidance of which tends to security and peace of mind.

Accounting Appliances Used.

My accounting machinery consists of a cash register, run in the usual, proper way; my check book and bank book; a small memo book wherein is daily entered the details of cash on hand; a common counter book in which are pasted the register slips to serve as an original record of petty payments, all totalled up for entry in one daily sum; my Journal, with six columns to the page; and my ledger. To indicate how the final figures are boiled down to simplicity, I may say that my ledger, now in use, contains 136 pages, has been used for all my records for 15 years, and is good for perhaps 10 years more. Yet in that little book I have the entire history of what I have done in the business during all that time. That surely is simplicity. The time required is, as stated, 20 to 30 minutes daily. That certainly is not much time. But it is not much time and it is sufficient to produce results simply because it is done regularly and carefully every day.

The Division of Accounts.

It is usual to divide business accounting into a series of principal accounts, called controlling or cardinal accounts. I call them cardinal. These are cash, merchandise, expense, discount, barn, advertising, bills payable, capital, furniture and fixtures, proprietor or partners, loss and gain.

Again, if you own real estate, whether occupied by your business or not, an account should be kept of each parcel thereof. Also, if you do as I do, lay aside money every month as business insurance, putting that into outside investments, an account must be kept of such investments in one form or another. I call this account surplus so long as it is simply money waiting investment in the savings bank; and I change that into separate accounts as I put it into various definite investments, such as stocks, bonds, etc.

Business Standing Always Known.

This very simple bookkeeping of mine enables me to care for all these various matters with accuracy, telling me all the time just where I stand, with the least expenditure of the time and the greatest flexibility. The most satisfying thing about it is that it allows nothing to "get away." Everything is right there, where it can be found and where it is in tangible existence at all times.

It will be seen that several of the accounts are really only divisions of expense, such as advertising, barn, wages. These are kept thus divided so that we may know just what each is costing us. We can readily compare one period with another in this way, to see whether we are doing better or worse, or just keeping about even on our expenses; and we can trim sails to meet altering conditions very promptly. If it were not for these subdivisions, we should not be able to act as promptly, nor could we be kept in such constant touch with our business.

Next week I shall take up the various accounts and show how they are operated in the actual working of the business.

*The writer of this article is one of the most successful dealers on the continent. He has spent almost 30 years in the retail grocery business and is well equipped to answer questions and smooth out difficulties with which others may have met. If a special request is made names of inquirers will be omitted when their letters are printed for discussion.

Buying Agency to Cut Out Retail Grocer

Citizen of Canadian Town Asks a Large City Wholesale Grocer for Price List and is Courteously But Firmly Rebuked — The Correspondence Published Herewith — Why Citizens Should Buy at Home.

Below is printed some interesting correspondence for the perusal of retailer, wholesaler and manufacturer. A private citizen in a Canadian town asks a wholesale firm for its best quotations on foodstuffs, with a view to forming some sort of citizens' agency to cut out the retail grocer. Here are the letters:—

Wholesale Grocers,

Gentlemen,—Kindly mail me your advanced catalogue of wholesale prices as a number of citizens are joining together and are going to buy and form an agency.

Awaiting your favor at an early date, I remain,

Yours very truly,

The Wholesaler's Reply.

Dear Sir,—Your favor of the 28th ult., has been duly received, requesting our catalogue of wholesale prices, as a number of citizens have joined together to purchase from the wholesale trade as a buying agency.

While we would not, for a moment, question the right of your combination of citizens to buy your groceries at less than the regular retail prices, we hardly think the policy is a wise one, and could not, therefore, become a party to it, or such a proposal, by complying with your request. We trust you will pardon our refusal, but we feel that the retail trade is an essential element in the prosperity of business points like ————, and that the practice of sending for supplies to larger places is the chief cause of the want of prosperity in a great many small towns all over Ontario. The failure of the retail trade is the sure precursor of the ruin of such places and in our opinion, is a most suicidal policy for the citizens to adopt.

We feel further, and we speak with some knowledge of the question, that the general consumer, being absolutely dependent upon the retail merchant for the necessaries of life, should encourage the retailers of their own town and enable them to cater to the wants of the community with the utmost efficiency, instead of sending away for their most profitable articles, thus lowering the character and standing of their home stores on whom they depend for their everyday wants.

We are, of course, deeply interested in the retail grocery trade, which we offer as our excuse for answering at such length, but we feel sure we can faithfully guarantee that there is no class of citizen, who gives as close attention to business, with as meagre compensation for his strenuous efforts, as the retail grocer, and we would like to see the community properly appreciate the invaluable service he gives to the people.

Hoping you will accept the views we have expressed, as a reason for not giving you wholesale prices, we remain,

Yours truly,

"Todhunter & Mitchell's spice mills, Nos. 130 and 132 Adelaide st., Toronto, took fire a few mornings ago. The damage about $1,000 is fully covered by insurance."

"Items having appeared in the paper cautioning the public against forged $10 notes of the Ontario Bank, the manager of that institution authorizes the statement that there are no known counterfeits of the $10 notes now issued by the bank, which are of a reddish color, dated June 1, 1888, and payable in Toronto. A forging of the $10 notes issued by the bank, Nov. 1, 1870, payable at the Ontario Bank, Bowmanville, and of a light green, almost white, color, has been in circulation for almost fifteen years, but as the bank has been withdrawing bills of that date from circulation since the counterfeit was discovered, there can be very few genuine bills of that issue unredeemed by the bank."

Edit. Note.—That was twenty years ago. To-day the Ontario Bank is not in existence.

SOLD MORE BERRIES BY PLANNING AHEAD OF RECEIPTS

How St. John, New Brunswick, Dealer Arranged to Satisfy His Customers When Fruit Was Cheapest—Took Orders Ahead —Will Try Same Plan With Later Fruits.

St. John, N.B., July 18—(Special)—A local dealer in spite of the light receipts of strawberries managed to supply his customers better than some others, because of his foresight. He realized that Tuesday or Wednesday of last week would be the days when the largest supplies of strawberries would be brought down river and he advised his customers that those would be the best days to buy. He warned them not to defer later if they wished to procure any fair quantity for preserving.

On Friday, when orders were being taken for the Saturday delivery, he asked his customers as to the quantity they would want for preserving, telling them what he expected would be the price on Tuesday or Wednesday when he hoped to be able to procure all required. Orders came in most promisingly. By Monday morning he knew just about how many crates he would need and before Tuesday he had arranged to get them. This was the day when they were cheapest and most abundant, and there were many disappointed on the following days when the stock began to decrease and prices advanced.

Because he had been careful enough to arrange for his supply well beforehand, he was able to furnish the berries at a profit, and fill his orders. He says he sold more than he otherwise would have, and the idea worked so well that he plans to try it when the rush of raspberries and other preserves is on.

OPENING PRICES ON CANNED GOODS.

From the opening prices of strawberries announced in our market columns, it looks as if quotations on small preserved fruits would be fairly high this season.

In Ontario f.o.b. prices on 2's are $2.15 per dozen for Group A and $2.12½ for Group B. Those dealers who gave their orders for canned goods before May 1, will, of course, get a discount of 2½ per cent. The percentage of delivery will be about 60 per cent.

Last year the opening prices were $1.77½ and $1.80. The advance was anticipated by the trade in view of the shortage due to the drought of last season killing off many of the runners. The long winter also had an adverse effect, and the crop was somewhat shortened by the hot spell of a couple of weeks ago.
if any from the recent hot weather, and present prospects

Tomatoes and corn in Western Ontario suffered little are bright for good crops in each case.

Peas were injured by the prolonged hot sun, but recent rains helped them considerably, so that the yield is expected to turn out fairly well. The prices on peas have not yet been given out, but may be expected soon. They will depend largely on the size of the pack, as the larger the pack, the smaller the expenses of labor.

FOUNDING AN ACCOUNTING SYSTEM.

To know exactly how the business stands compared to other years ought to be the aim of every retail dealer. It is only the merchant who knows what he has sold every day, week or month of the year, what those goods cost him and what it cost to sell them, who can systematically eliminate the business leaks.

Beginning in this issue, Henry Johnson, Jr., will tell how he has perfected a bookkeeping system that gives him definite knowledge of the ups and downs in profits from time to time. He has had some thirty years' successful experience in the retail trade, and can speak with authority on this subject. In starting out with the series on bookkeeping problems, he makes the declaration that an accountant in a retail store is either an expert or a failure—so far as his own business is concerned. His reasons are given.

These articles are just what a large percentage of the trade have been looking for. They will lay the foundation of a tested and proved accounting system, if properly assimilated. Every grocer should read the series.

GOING AFTER THINGS.

We get by giving. In the case of a retail assocation, the members get results by giving their time and energy.

This is well exemplified by the change in the by-law in Toronto governing the privileges of street peddlers. Hitherto peddlers have been allowed to call out their wares all over Toronto, even to the extent of going into exclusive residential districts where the grocer is not permitted to locate.

Many of these peddlers offer inferior goods, and call them out like braying donkeys to get the people from their houses. They pay almost insignificant licenses into the bargain.

The Retail Grocers' Association took the matter in hand and inside of three weeks had the by-law changed or practically a new by-law drawn up. A deputation called on the Legal Committee which in a few minutes endorsed the grocers' suggestion that peddlers should not have the privilege of calling out their wares. It was then passed on to council, where the by-law was changed. After January 1, 1913, the practice will have to be discontinued.

The grocers gained their point because they went after it. "Watch and wait" is a poor motto when something is wanted.

MEANING OF PURE FOOD CAMPAIGNS.

There is an exceedingly strong sentiment all over Canada in favor of purity in foods. In all the large cities and towns campaigns are being waged by medical health officers against "food unfit for human consumption." Reports reach this paper every week of articles intended for food having been destroyed by order of the health authorities. In such centres as Montreal, Saskatoon, Winnipeg, Moose, Jaw, Edmonton, Toronto, etc., the arm of the law has reached out to gather in offenders and put a stop to trucking in impure foods.

None of us will dispute the consistency of these condemnations. People must eat to live, and because health is the great sustaining force of any individual or nation, the people must have foods that will not injure their physical natures.

It is because of this growing sentiment that grocers should look to the future. They should endeavor to meet it more than half way, because the tendency is more and more apparent that goods of the highest quality and stores run under the most sanitary conditions are going to be the chief attraction for new custom.

The Grocer would emphatically advise dealers to purchase goods of known purity and quality. If they have the knowledge they should have about them, they can in various ways easily sell them in compeition with those merchants who handle inferior classes of goods. Instance after instance has been given in these columns to prove this assertion.

A dealer can usually, if he so desires, purchase cheaply inferior goods in almost all lines carried. But he is not looking into the future. He is not business building.

Importance of the Retail Dealer

WE publish on another page of this issue correspondence between the representative of a number of citizens, joining together in a country town to buy goods at wholesale prices, and a wholesale grocery house. The wholesale firm refuses to send a catalogue or sell to a combination of consumers associated together for the purpose of buying goods at wholesale prices, and takes the ground the the retail merchant is necessary under the conditions of modern commutual life, and that the consumer, ordering goods from a distance, impairs the standing and usefulness of the local trade.

The position take by the firm is, in the opinion of The Canadian Grocer, sound, and we would like to impress it forcibly on our readers. If the foundation of a community is really commutual or reciprocal, as the name implies, then the members should carry out the principles and conditions which bind them together as a community. The doctors, lawyers, dentists, clergymen and other professional men, as well as mechanics and officials and those who may have retired into private life, get their incomes, as a rule, entirely from the locality in which they live. Should they not reciprocate by spending that income among the people of the community from which they receive it?

Even the farmer, under advanced modern conditions, gets his revenue, if not all, certainly the most profitable part of it, from the community in or near to where he lives. These are the parties that send away from home for their most expensive things, and in this way so impoverish their local merchant that he cannot afford to keep the best class of goods, and consequently the character and usefulness of his business is greatly impaired, and he is forced to charge more for the goods his customers are obliged to buy from him.

There is certainly nothing commutual about this. When these same parties want a pound of nails or a spool of thread or a pound of sugar, or perhaps a rake or hoe, what a panic there would be if there were no retail stores to go to! The retail merchant is, unquestionably, a necessity, and it is equally true that when he is put out of business the place goes to ruin. The heaviest taxpayer ceases, and the municipal corporation will look in vain to the large stores where her wealthy citizens send their money for supplies. Every community should take a pride in itself, and the members should loyally support those institutions that give character and stability to the place.

The business activity of a town or village is the best evidence of its importance. Prosperous business means a prosperous place, surrounded by prosperous farmers, and establishes a standard of values that give a conscious feeling of importance and satisfaction to every surrounding. In such a place the retired farmer, or citizen of whatever class, would prefer "to husband out life's taper at the close, and keep the flame from wasting by repose," instead of leaving as they do, a wretched looking town or village for the turmoil of a large city.

The town or village where business is stagnant and where the citizens send away for the cream of their requirements, is dead. Dead socially, financially, intellectually. The citizens lack confidence and interest in each other. They do not co-operate. They do not reciprocate. They cease to be enterprising; overlook the rights of their neighbors, and neglect to look properly after their own; in short become slovenly and careless and degenerate into conditions in which no person of taste, refinement, culture, enterprise or ambition would care to live. Who pays their taxes; keeps up their churches; manages their Sunday schools; arranges their social entertainments; visits the sick, helps the needy or looks after the poor? Certainly not the big concern at a distance, to whom they send their money.

No individual or institution can be healthy or prosper if starved. Starve the retail trade and you weaken and destroy the most vital essential in the life of a community. Starvation does not necessarily mean the absolute stoppage of all sustenance. The process can be carried out by degrees, and by sending away for their most profitable goods, the citizens of a town or village can gradually starve to death the retail business and destroy the life and prosperity of any community.

THE CLERK AND THE TRADE PAPER.

One or two of our representatives have recenty run across the unique experience of retail dealers not allowing their clerks to have a look at The Canadian Grocer.

During the past week clerks in a Western Ontario store stated that when The Grocer came in, there was a scramble for it. Everybody was anxious to see the contents, and they found many pointers of value in each issue.

Recently, however, the store proprietor has given instructions to the bookkeeper to hold the copy of The Grocer in the office, and he takes it home the first night of arrival. Now the clerks never see it.

It is natural to suppose that a grocer would encourage his staff to read the trade paper, and no doubt most dealers do. If clerks are anxious to see it for the benefit they derive, it is a big asset to the store. The Grocer does not believe there are many stores where the clerks do not read the paper, but nevertheless considered the matter of sufficient importance to call attention to it here.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

One is equal to three, is the way the New Zealand dealer puts it, referring to automobile delivery and horses.

You can't make things come your way by waiting for them. You get what you go after rather than what you wait for.

When the woman who came to loaf remains to buy, the dealer has probably made the sale through some attractive interior display.

Health authorities are helping Canadian dealers to sell pure foods. Take advantage of this "lift" by buying pure goods only. Then you cannot sell anything else.

This is picnic week in Ontario. Hamilton, Brantford, Toronto, Paris, Dundas and Burlington grocers with their wives were out with their lunch baskets on Wednesday.

Some women are real scientists, chemists and everything else simply by instinct. A Montreal woman says certain canned goods which made her ill had been carried too long. She knows in a minute what will take chemists probably several days to discover.

Association Wants Help From all Members

Words of Advice to Those Who Did Not Join in Agitation to to Prevent Pedlars Calling Their Wares—Wholesalers Selling to Consumers—Grocers Anxious to See By-law Governing Fruit Displays Outside Stores Enforced.

Toronto, July 19—(Special)—That the unanimous support and active interest of every member of the association is needed to secure desired legislation, was one of the points emphasized at the monthly meeting of the Toronto Retail Grocers' Association on Monday night.

The question was swung into prominence when Wm. Miller presented the report of the Legislation Committee regarding the amendment secured to the pedlars' by-law prohibiting them from calling their wares on the street. Although the amendment had been passed he regretted the small number of grocers on hand to press their claims at the third reading of the by-law. "It is in the interests of the trade as a whole and every grocer should take an active part," was his comment. Neil Carmichael also protested against so few of the members having to do what the whole association should assist in.

The Wholesaler Selling Direct.

The association have not yet carried out last month's resolution as to writing wholesalers regarding the question of them selling goods direct to the consumer. The Legislation Committee is to give immediate attention to this matter.

"A man told me the other day," stated one member, "that he could buy from one to five pounds of tea from any wholesale grocer in the city. I don't think that is right."

Objection was taken to this statement by another who contended that such could not be true unless the man was a traveler or connected with a wholesale house. "I bet you $100 to $5," he declared, "that if that man can buy that quantity of tea he is connected with a wholesale house."

"I got some goods from a certain wholesale house the other day," broke in another, "and on looking over the driver's book I saw a bag of sugar, 10 lbs. of tea, and similar quantities of other goods for delivery to private houses."

Thanks To The Mayor.

On motion of Wm. Miller it was decided to send a letter to the Mayor thanking the chairman of the Legislative Committee and members of the Council for their support of the recent amendment to the peddler's by-law.

On motion of D. Bell and W. S. Hall, it was decided to send a letter to chairman of Board of Health endorsing that body's action in sustaining by-law re covering of fruits.

Jno. Craig of Vair Produce Co., Spadina ave., M. E. Bush, College St., T. Parke, College st., and J. B. Stephens, Dufferin st., were proposed for membership.

Medical Health Officer Hastings says that his policy in the future regarding the covering of fruits will be even more aggressive than in the past.

RAISING PEDLARS' LICENSES.

London Grocers Make Move to This End —To Ask Co-operation of Other Associations.

London, Ont., July 18—(Special)—At the last regular meeting of the Retail Grocers' Association a committee was named to wait on the Hon. Adam Beck to lay before him the facts in regard to pedlars, and if possible to get him to bring in a bill to raise the pedlar's license to one hundred dollars, which is considered by the trade little enough when the taxes merchants pay into the coffers of this country are considered. The association will also ask the co-operation of Toronto, Hamilton and Brantford associations to take the matter up with their respective members.

E. J. Ryan who has retired from the grocery business, and was at the last meeting made a life member of the Retail Grocers' Asociation, was presented with a handsome scarf pin, set with pearls. Thos. Shaw in a few well chosen words made the presentation. President John Diprose also eulogised Mr. Ryan for the good work he had done ever since the organization of the society.

Mr. Ryan was taken completely by surprise. He thanked the members for their expression of good will, and for the handsome present.

TRADE NOTES.

The 26th annual excursion of the Winnipeg Caterers' Association will be held on Wednesday, July 24, at Winnipeg Beach. This is one of the big events of the year for Winnipeg grocers, confectioners, travelers, etc.

Vancouver, B. C., will receive a sample shipment of six cases of apples from New Zealand. Last season the latter country received apples from British Columbia and a reciprocal trade during their respective apple seasons may be worked up to the advantage of both.

A Worker on the Executive

It is now evident that the Ontario Retail Grocers' Association, when it organized in Hamilton on Good Friday last, made no error in selecting J. D. Wisdom of Allandale, Ont., as one of its executive members.

Almost any Barrie grocer will tell you to go over to Allandale (just a mile distant), and talk to Jack Wisdom if you want news about association work. But now the Ontario R. G. A. has reason to refer one to Mr. Wisdom for association news of the North. Wm. C. Miller, secretary of that body recently received from the Allandale executive member one of the first accounts of his stewardship. The Barrie grocers are going to join the Ontario Retail Grocers' Association. "A meeting was called last week at which nine were present, all becoming members," reports Mr. Wisdom. Geo. C. Brown was selected as secretary treasurer. "He will send you the dues at an early date," adds Mr. Wisdom; "we are trying to get all the grocers to join before remitting."

J. D. WISDOM, Allandale, Ont.,
Member of Executive of the Ontario Retail Grocers' Association.

At the same time the northern executive member is interesting the Collingwood grocers in the new organization and he hopes to report favorably in this connection in the near future.

Opening Prices on Strawberries Out

Higher Than Last Year—Prices on Other Early Berries Should Soon be Issued—Salmon Has Taken on Firmer Tone at Some Centres—Sugar is Firmer But Rather Uncertain.

QUEBEC MARKETS.

POINTERS:—

Strawberries—New prices out.
Sugar—Firm.
Rice—Going up.

Montreal, July 19. — Wholesalers are finding trade in all parts in highly satisfactory condition, collections being better, while there is a general disposition to place good substantial orders.

The opening price for strawberries, group one, is fixed at $2.15, which is much in excess of prices asked last year. The increase may be explained best by the fact that farmers have been asking about 50 per cent. more for fruit this year, owing to short crops.

Rice is still on the upward move, but from all reports it seems that the corner in the Far East has been practically broken.

SUGAR.—An unexpected advance in raw beets in Europe took place last week and New York changed quickly in sympathy. The advance is hard to explain away until we have definite news from Europe, nevertheless it certainly cannot be put down to any likely shortage in sugar, as Cuba's crop will be phenomenal, while conditions are also favorable for a splendid yield on Continent, while the same may be said of beets on this side also.

Prices may be firm for some little time now. Preserving is now going on, perhaps more so than last year. Refiners are busy and are having bother filling orders promptly. They realize that they will have big business if they increase the price, and big also if they lower it, and from various news expressed, it seems that they will follow a laissez faire policy, and leave things as they are.

TEAS. — Situation continues steady, there being good demand from the country. Formosas have been firm and active for some time past, and considerable interest is being focussed around this particular market. Low grade Japans are moving a little more freely, and it is expected that the second crop will be about 20 per cent. short.

The total Ceylon crop so far is about equal to last year's but quality is by no means as good, and little fine tea has been offered.

SPICES.—Market on whole is active, chief business being done in black and white peppers, cloves and nutmegs being also well looked after. We may say that prices show an upward tendency, as there is a marked scarcity of all lines of general demand. Gingers are a little easier, but will firm up again shortly. Considerable speculation is going on in nutmegs.

DRIED FRUITS.—Continual dullness in Californian fruits is the order of things just now, but in future raisins there is some unsettlement amongst buyers, as there are reports extant that offerings from all quarters will not be as large as anticipated. Apricots are firmer than they were last week. New crop peaches are said to be offered pretty reasonably for shipment from the coast, but there is little activity showing. Prunes are slow to move as usual, but firmness in the market is looked for shortly.

RICE AND TAPIOCA.—Further interesting reports are to hand from the East. Japan advices say that Government actions have been complete failure, and severest distress prevails amongst the poor. The Cabinet there is now considering the abolition of duty on foreign rice, and a departmental report has been ordered on the matter. But a further advice states that sales have had a further downward tendency as a result of heavy imports from Rangoon and good crop prospects. Farmers are said to be unloading freely, and it is believed that the corner is ended. Next week's news will,however, decide the veracity of one or other of these reports.

Market in Burma has presented considerable activity of late, and prices have advanced. A large business has been done for Japan buyers in latter country, paying higher prices for each successive shipment.

ONTARIO MARKETS.

POINTERS—

Strawberries.—Prices on new pack out.

Salmon.—Advanced.

Sugar.—Rather uncertain.

Toronto, July 18.—Prices on new pack strawberries are out, being $2.15 for group A and 2.12½ for group B as against $1.77½ and $1.80 last year. Prices on other lines are anxiously awaited. Those on early fruits and vegetables should soon be out.

Salmon is one of the lines to show advancing tendency, especially in the better grades due to small stocks held. Little is heard regarding new pack but prices are expected by end of month.

Sugar is showing a brisk movement now. Most dealers have been pursuing hand to mouth policy. Market is difficult one to size up at present.

There is said to be some talk of an advance in matches but there is nothing definite as yet.

SUGAR.—There are times when the sugar market is a difficult one to size up. We have one of those situations at the present time. Middle of last week market had quite a weak feeling but raws have since stiffened up considerably to such an extent that New York refiners advanced prices 10 cents per cwt. on Monday. On June 27 beet sugar was quoted at $4.25 New York. To-day it is $4.79, an advance of 54 cents per cwt. In face of these facts there are those dealers who believe possibility of a further decline has been removed and if speculation keeps on, it may result in an advance.

Bullish opinions are not expressed by all sugar men. It was pointed out by one man that conditions in regard to beet crop still continue favorable and that strength has been brought about by desire on part of short sellers to cover their contracts. "I admit," he stated "that if speculation keeps up, there is a possibility of an advance, but I am inclined to believe that things are being overdone unless there comes bad weather in Europe to support it."

DRIED FRUITS.—There are few new features to spot dried fruits. Trade is inclined to quietness and stocks quite liberal enough to meet demand. Prunes are in sufficient supply.

There has been some buying in California futures but business has rather experienced a lull of late. Some brokers report considerable doing in seeded and seedless raisins. "Both these lines," said one local jobber this week, "are at a reasonably low price and a lower figure can hardly be expected."

Currants have shown some signs of strength in primary recently due to continuous drought in Greece. Another firming factor is higher ocean freight rate now being asked. Reports regarding raisins in Spain are not rosy by any means but Sultanas are reported a good crop in Symrna. A yield of 50,000 tons is predicted, which is double that of last year. However last year was an exceedingly poor year.

TEA.— Local tea situation continues steady with fair amount of business reported. An English tea house in their monthly circular say:—

"The restricted offerings and the large supplies within the Port of London that are ready to be put upon the market whenever the labor questions are settled present a position of difficulty. Buyers have latterly been carrying fairly liberal stocks for fear of strikes and have therefore shown few signs of being inconvenienced by the short supplies. There is some danger of prices being forced down should holders attempt to realize the accumulations too rapidly. It is to be feared that from both Ceylon and India there are large quantities of very inferior quality tea to come on sale and that there may be, in consequence, some quotations of price made distinctly lower than any recently current. It is a satisfactory feature that in all markets here and abroad, although there is a demand for cheapness, there is a limit of quality below which buyers seem disinclined to go and the producers of "undesirables" in either leaf or liquor may find it difficult at times to obtain buyers."

COFFEE.—The New York coffee market is easier both in spots and options, although local situation rules unchanged. Brazil is somewhat easier which seems strange when, after maintaining a strong front in face of big receipts from plantations, it should now suddenly wheel around the other way when according to all reports the Santos crop now coming to market is both late and small. Brazil apparently holds the key to the whole coffee situation and must be watched for market tendencies.

SPICES. — There is an appreciable trade in general lines of spices, not only for immediate wants but in anticipation of the pickling trade which is gradually approaching. Lines showing firmness include black and white pepper, particularly the latter. Cassia and cloves just at moment are fractionally easier on New York market. Cables from Jamaica state that pimento crop has been damaged somewhat by drought and prices for early shipment have been marked up. Nutmegs maintain a steady to firm tone.

RICE AND TAPIOCA. — Rice is steady at last week's advance of 15 cents per cwt. Trade is fair as rice is an excellent summer food but it is feared that high prices will check business.

The Burma market has been excited and prices have been moving upward but an improvement is shown in the acute situation in some sections of the far east. For instance, prospects in India are reported good for extra spring and autumn crop but prices are generally high and stationary. Shanghai also reports China a little easier though scarcity is still considerable.

A cable from Japan says:—"Provincial sales have had a further downward tendency as result of heavy imports from Rangoon and good crop prospects. Farmers are unloading freely and it is believed that corner in rice is broken."

CANNED GOODS.

TORONTO.—The first opening prices on this year's pack of canned goods have been issued, but they only include one line, namely strawberries. From reports as to this year's crop of strawberries, prices were naturally expected to be higher than last year. In Ontario f.o.b. prices are $2.15 per dozen for Group A and $2.12½ for Group B, which is virtually $2.10, as most retailers booked early enough to get a 2½ per cent. discount. The percentage delivery will be about 60 per cent. A shortage this season was anticipated, as drought last season shortened the acreage considerably. Some berries were even brought in from across the line for canning purposes, but quantity was not large.

Last year a considerable quantity of U. S. fruit was used by some canners and the same thing will be done this year including raspberries, plums and pears, some of which have already been contracted for.

Different reports are received from different canning centres and different canners regarding prospects. However, it cannot be denied that growth was late in getting under way this year, and the sudden warm weather that came on top of it, was not altogether beneficial.

One canning concern state that they do not think that tomatoes and corn have suffered at all from the dry weather, but are getting pretty much what they require. Peas, however, were beginning to suffer, and it may have some effect in shortening crop.

This week there appears to be a considerable difference in ideas of values on salmon. Quotations on sockeyes rule all the way from $2.55 to $2.80 on ½'s from $1.55 to $1.75, on Humpbacks from $1.25 to $1.40, and on cohoes from $1.85 to $2.10. The truth of the matter appears to be that salmon is getting pretty well cleaned up, especially on better grades, and with general small stocks quotations vary considerably. However, situation is generally firmer and higher with a good demand being experienced. "It is coming to the point," said one dealer, "where people will have to buy the salmon, which, while it may be a little off in color, is of good quality, but cheaper." There is an increasing demand for ½ lb. tins.

New pack lobsters are quoted at $1.75 for ¼'s, $2.90 for ½'s, and $5.75 for 1's.

NEW BRUNSWICK MARKETS.

St. John, July 18.—Market locally remains quiet in almost all lines, and there has been little activity of especial interest. There are practically no changes in quotations except in canned salmon which is slightly higher owing to advices sent out by packers that the catches have been small and there is little prospect for drop in price. Stocks with local dealers are fairly good, but demand has been lowered owing to supply of fresh salmon being on for past several weeks.

Business with local dealers is reported encouraging, and a brisk demand for picnic supplies is spoken of, there being a ready sale for articles in these lines.

Owing to the recent advances in many lines of raw materials, some local manufacturers have advanced their prices on biscuits, and consequently retailers will have to ask more for their goods in order to retain their profit. The manufacturers say that within past few months there has been a sharp advance in lard, fruit, cocoa, etc., as well as an increase in wages of laborers, and in order to make biscuits at a fair profit it has been found necessary to advance price.

Weather an Important Flour Market Factor

For Next Couple of Months Weather Reports Will Sway Markets—Sentiments Rather Bearish at Present—Big Yield Being Predicted In Canadian West—Flour and Cereals Unchanged.

For next couple of months weather and weather reports will form an important factor in swaying grain markets and exerting an influence on trend of finished products. Of late there has been little in the news to stimulate buying. Sentiment continues of quite a decided bearish character based principally on the crop and weather reports from the spring wheat sections.

Just this week we have an example of the effects of optimistic crop and weather reports, which have resulted in a break in prices at most Canadian centres as well as at Chicago. Markets have eased under pressure of splendid weather conditions. Excellent weather for crops prevails throughout the Western States and Canada and has prevailed for some time. From farmers, dealers and experts come generally the same optimistic outlook for a bumper crop under average conditions for rest of growing season. Winnipeg market on Monday sent word that the three northwest provinces could be counted upon for a yield of 250,000,000 bushels of wheat and showed faith in the report by lowering quotations. However, it is yet rather too early to predict with any degree of certainty what the Canadian yield may be.

Trade in flour is normal for season according to reports from different centres but naturally so close to a new crop dealers are not inclined to load up. Cereals are running along in even lines with business inclined to quietude.

MONTREAL.

FLOUR.—Stocks of flour at outside points must have dwindled considerably as orders reaching millers call for prompt shipment. This may be due to the fact that certain developments were expected and so buying was of a hand to mouth order but lower prices have not been announced so that there is quite an improvement in the demand. Millers, far from giving any encouragement to those hanging back, have no hesitation in stating that prices should go the other way as present values for raw material are pretty stiff.

A fair volume of business is being transacted.

FLOUR.—There has been no change in flour prices, same level being maintained as has ruled since April, namely $5.70 per barrel for 1st patents. Although wheat locally has eased off somewhat, flour is regarded as holding a fairly steady position as there is no overplus of good milling wheat and as has been pointed out before lower prices reached by mill feeds during June has had a tendency to steady market.

There is a normal trade passing for season but naturally at this time of year retailers do not load up.

CEREALS. — It will be remembered that rolled oats last week recovered the decline of 15 cents per barrel which took place the previous week. There has been no change since and market is not regarded as holding any particular firm features. Trade is inclined to quietness while oats have an easy tendency although spot hold up better than futures.

Just at this moment there is something bordering on a famine of cornmeal in the city. As usual in hot weather none of the firms carry large supplies and all have apparently run low at the same time. One Toronto firm had to bring a rush shipment in from Hamilton at first of week.

AN ALBERTA R.M.A.

A Retail Merchants' Association of Alberta has been formed which has for its object the concentration of the influence and energy of the associations of the several cities of the province in the promotion of such legislation and general work as will be thought beneficial to the retail trade. John Irwin, president of the Calgary Business Men's Association was elected president. D. J. Hay of Lethbridge, is vice-president and B. L. Cope, Calgary, is the secretary. The executive officers are:—G. A. Smith, Innisfail; Alderman Livingston, Edmonton; George M. Patterson, Okotoks; C. W. Johnston, Macleod; J. A. Bray, Gleichen; H. J. Montgomery, Wetaskiwin; A. J. Campbell, Cochrane; W. S. Booth, Edmonton, and A. J. Blair, Frank.

New Zealand is showing a phenomenal growth in the production of dairy produce. The New Zealand season for cheese and butter making extends from Aug. 1 to May 15. England imports a good deal. Canada gets some of her butter.

Brisk Trade in Fruits and Vegetables

With Increasing Supplies and Varieties of New Goods — Lemons Selling Well and Firm Strawberries at an End—Raspberries commencing But Will be Short Crop—New Potatoes are Good Sellers.

Fruit and vegetable markets are showing considerable life these days with the increasing supplies and varieties of new goods. Most Canadian markets report business as comparing fairly well with mid-July trade of other years. "It is too warm for best results," complained one wholesaler this week. "New goods will not keep long under high temperature and retailers are afraid to buy the quantities they would purchase under more favorable conditions."

There is one line, however, that the warm weather is helping and that is lemons, which are finding brisk sale these days. It was pointed out some time ago that a high market could be expected on lemons this summer. Already it is making a fair bid to come true, there being quite a firm tendency reported from several centres. November cuts are near end of their tether while stocks of verdelli are not large. Prices moved up one shilling in Sicily and values here are expected to be maintained.

New potatoes continue to move forward freely and are pushing old stock into background. Virginia is coming to a close but Jersey will be starting in now, coming along in bulk and bag. Virginia stock has all been in barrels.

Strawberry season is gone or next thing to it without any really cheap berries being secured. Nor can low prices be expected on raspberries which are now coming in. The crop is generally short and prices will be high. Black currants are scarce. Cherries have probably reached lowest point for season at most centres.

There are still some tomatoes coming from across the line but the amount is dwindling, being replaced by Canadian article. Lower prices are expected to rule on this line as well as cucumbers which are moving more freely.

MONTREAL.

GREEN FRUITS. — Lemons so far have shown little fluctuation but if present warm weather continues an advance in prices must come even if there are good supplies of new ones on the way. Limes are slightly easier while oranges remain steady at prices noted. Strawberries are pretty nearly at an end as the crop has been short and are fetching prices according to quality. Bananas are still keeping up, the demand being as strong as ever. Apples are quoted from $7 per barrel upwards, the cheaper lines being off wholesalers lists.

VEGETABLES .— Canadian grown vegetables are now on market in good variety and are welcomed by consumer as they have a flavor entirely unknown to the United States classes, which have been fetching fairly high prices of late. Beans are now sold in bags at a fairly reasonable figure while cabbage are also a little easier. Cucumbers in baskets are a little larger and of better quality. Onions, that is the Egyptian, are becoming scarce and prices are firm, but the Spanish will be with us soon, and prices are not expected to rule high. Sweet potatoes have been more plentiful of late and marked down, while choice and fancy tomatoes are at zero mark, being replaced by hot house grown at 20c per lb. But there are some crates of four baskets at 75c, the class being termed Mississippi.

GREEN FRUITS.—This is great lemon weather and they are moving out freely. Last week's advanced prices are maintained around $5 per case being asked and a tendency to higher prices reported. November cuts are next to cleaned up and stocks of Verdelli are small.

There are some odd lots of strawberries arriving yet but they are about done. Raspberries are coming in at 15 to 17 cents per box. Low prices on this line cannot be looked for. "Crop will be short and prices high," says the circular of one firm.

"In cherries," it continues, "early Richmonds are over and the Montmorency, a large red sour cherry and good for preserving is now ready. Prices on cherries will not be any lower this season."

There are muskmelons in from Georgia at $4 per case, peaches from Texas in 6-basket crates at $2.50, red currants at $2 per 24-box crate and black currants at $2 per 11-quart basket. The latter are very scarce. Limes are selling well, being quoted from $1.25 to $1.50 per crate.

Vegetables.—There are still some tomatoes being imported but they will soon be totally displaced by Canadian article. The latter are now selling at $1.50 to $1.75 per basket but they are expected to be cheaper in near future as are also cucumbers which are now selling at $1.50 to $1.75 per basket.

New potatoes which have been on downward path are now selling at $3.50 per barrel. They are selling freely and old stock are in less demand and prices accordingly easy. Most firms are said to be pretty well cleaned up in old stock but some firms still have supplies to spare. One instance is given of a firm now holding stock which they had a chance to sell around $2 but held in anticipation of market soaring.

Vegetable marrows are in this week at 60 to 70c per basket.

Fish Trade Varies Little During Summer

Even Tenor Maintained During Hot Weather — Little Variation in Varieties or Prices—Hot Weather Causes More Trouble and Expense in Handling Fish—Codfish is Easy.

There are few spectacular features to fish market during summer months. In spring, trade settles down to even and regular lines and varies little until early fall. There is generally not much change in varieties of fish obtainable or prices quoted. Whitefish, trout and halibut are the most important lines.

Naturally warm weather is not conducive to fresh fish trade as it is more difficult and expensive to handle stock in hot weather. "We don't make much mosey during summer months," said one wholesale dealer. "We just keep things in motnon and reap our harvest during the winter."

The catch of the Norwegian fishing fleet still continues to show up large. It is now said to be over 100,000,000 codfish against an average of 55,000,000 annually for past ten years. With good catches in Maritime Provinces and Newfoundland, cod market is easy.

QUEBEC.

MONTREAL—Considering hot season fish sales have been well maintained and demand for all lines is considered satisfactory. Difficulty, however, has been experienced in landing shipments in good order owing to intense heat, but quality is reported up to the mark.

ONTARIO.

TORONTO. — Fish trade runs along even and regular lines with little change in varieties or prices during summer months. There is practically no change in prices this week. Trout, whitefish and halibut as usual constitute bulk of trade with occasional supplies of yellow pickerel or mackerel available. Fish is a good summer food and its sale should be pushed by the grocer.

NOVA SCOTIA.

HALIFAX.—There is little doing in fish markets at present. Receipts of fresh fish are fair and demand is comparatively light. There is little halibut offering, and lobsters and oysters are off the market. Sales of salt fish locally are small, and the export trade is almost at a standstill.

The only real activity is in light cured smoked fish, such as haddies, fillets, salmon and kippered herring.

NEW BRUNSWICK.

ST. JOHN.—The variety of fresh fish on market seems to be more decidedly reduced as season advances, and at present chief fresh stocks are in salmon and haddock, with halibut only in fair supply. Salmon has been plentiful. Receipts from Newfoundland and the North Shore have been large and prices moderate, comparing well with other years. There have been quite a number of harbor salmon on market but stock of river salmon has been small thus far. It may be said that salmon catch has been far better than during last year. In a fortnight the end of the salmon run is looked for.

Produce & Provisions

Hot Weather Helping Cooked Meat Trade

Housewife Does Not Like to Cook Meats This Hot Weather—Smoked Varieties Find Better Sale Also — Considerable Butter Going Into Storage—Creameries are Also Storing—Eggs Showing Shrinkage.

Although the warm weather has its disadvantages as the grocer knows all too well at the present time, still it is proving beneficial to the provision department, for the sale of smoked and cooked meats is being helped considerably. With Old Sol dispensing the real old-fashioned variety of sunshine, the housewife is seeking to escape cooking meats. This has given the grocer an opportunity to sell cooked meats while smoked varieties always come in for a much brisker movement during warm weather.

The fact that butter is not being consumed as fast as it is made naturally turns the market into rather a speculative one. There has been no general change in situation but recent firmness is maintained. At some centres quotations have again been slightly increased this week. It is usual at this time for some export business to be in evidence but it is lacking this year as prices are above normal for the reasons that have been explained before.

Considerable June and early July butter found its way into cold storage being desirable for this purpose. Now we hear of creamery manufacturers storing themselves. "They did the same thing year before last," stated one wholesaler this week, "but they got nipped on the deal. Last year they stayed pretty well out of the game but seeing the money some firms made during last year, they are taking another try at it."

Pastures are generally reported good, although there may be cause for complaint in some districts. Market from now on depends to large extent on volume of production. One wholesaler referred this week to the large amount of cream used in making of ice cream at this season, especially since the ice cream cone has become a fad. He maintained that quantity used in this manner was much larger than a person on first thought would calculate and has no little bearing on the market.

Eggs are ruling at about same basis as a week ago, but firmness is present at most centres. Recent warm weather is responsible for no little loss through shrinkage. Under the higher temperature the hen is also less industrious and receipts are falling off. Demand has continued appreciable until late hot spell. Few eggs are being stored these days.

MONTREAL.

PROVISIONS.—Trade is fairly active in most lines at generally steady prices and there are no new developments to note. It might, however, be said that stocks in packers' hands have been reduced considerably within last fortnight and unless supplies come forward in good shape market may take a turn. Demand at present is for hams and bacon. Orders both large and small coming along freely from the country. Supplies of lard are large enough to fill all requirements and it is likely that prices will not reach a higher level.

TORONTO.

PROVISIONS.—Past couple of weeks weather has been ideal for sale of cooked and smoked meats, and an appreciable trade has been passing. There is no particular change as far as prices are concerned, even live hogs holding at last week's level although showing a somewhat firmer tendency at moment.

BUTTER.—Last week there was a firmer tendency to butter and quotations were moved up slightly. There has been no further change in prices but there is no weakness in evidence just now.

"Speculation has much to do with prices at this time of year," said a butter man this week, "because it is not being consumed as fast as made. Butter is beyond an export basis at present. It it usual for us to be exporting butter at this time but this year prices are above normal.

EGGS.— With temperature hovering around present high level, it is natural for considerable shrinkage to be present in eggs. This is true and loss through this source is having a firming tendency on prices but quotations this week show no change. Warm weather is also cause of falling off in receipts. Demand has been good since early in season but falling off in consumption is generally looked for around the middle of July. .

FOR TESTING EGGS.

"Eggs," states a retail grocer, "that lie on the bottom of a pan containing almost four inches of water, are fresh. Those that tilt up one end just a little are not fresh; those that stand on end down in the water are bad, and those that float are rotten."

One of the dainty dishes of Australia is kangaroo soup. It is said to be somewhat similar to but richer than our oxtail soup.

Refrigerator's Value in the Grocery Store

An Equipment Which Both Saves and Makes Money—Cooked Meats That Can be Handled if the Dealer Has a Refrigerator—Display Coolers in Use That Help Along Sales.

In hot weather the refrigerator is one of the dealer's best money savers as well as money makers. No grocer can, with any assurance of a profit, stock cooked meats, butter or eggs without being equipped with one of these hot weather necessities.

Boiled ham in the weather we have been experiencing during the past few weeks would last possibly a day on the store counter away from the ice. A quarter of a ham remaining unsold before spoiling would mean a loss, because it is always the last of anything sold that really brings in the profit.

Cooked Meats That Sell.

There is good money these days in such lines as jellied hock, veal loaf, jellied tongue, boiled chicken, bologna sausage, etc. Why more dealers do not handle them is difficult to explain. Boiled ham is, of course, sold by the majority. But the average taste wants a change and the lines above mentioned supply it. When the grocer doesn't stock them, people have to visit the exclusive provision stores and butcher shops.

All that is required to insure profit being made on these summer lines is a refrigerator and care to see that customers know that these goods are stocked.

Refrigerator in the Window.

Some dealers have helped along sales greatly by using the glass refrigerator and placing it where it will be observed. Finlay & Glover, general merchants, Port Stanley, Ont., have one of these glass coolers installed in their grocery window. Just as soon as the hot weather arrives, it is kept filled with cooked meats and other perishable goods and the proprietors say it is a splendid silent salesman. Port Stanley is a summer resort and people naturally purchase such goods in preference to cooking.

Yet even in large towns and cities in the hot season, no woman relishes standing over a hot stove a couple of hours every day. Such a refrigerator would undoubtedly prove to be a money maker anywhere.

A Circular Display.

Some dealers, among them, R. Higgins & Son., Yonge street, Toronto, use circular glass refrigerators in the centre of the store to show goods. These are always kept clean and the goods always appear fresh and tasty.

As a saver of eggs, the refrigerator is invaluable. Egg shrinkage is heavy in hot weather and anything that will allay this condition is a good investment. In fact looking at it from all sides it would appear that the dealer who has a good and attractive refrigerator, has a distinct advantage over a competitor without this equipment.

A HELP TO THE TRAVELER.

Many Requests For Additional Copies of Page Re Half Holidays.

A few weeks ago The Grocer published a page of information for travelers regarding dates of half holidays in Ontario centres. A number of reprints of these were made and sent out to various firms who have salesmen on the road. That they proved to be a help to the traveling man is shown by the large number of letters The Grocer has since received.

The McCormick Manufacturing Co., London, Ont., for instance, write as follows: "In reply to your favor of the 28th, we would be pleased to receive 20 or 25 more copies, if you have that many left, for our travelers.'

The following letter was received from the National Cash Register Co., Toronto: "Kindly send us 40 copies of the attached circular 'Where Half Holidays Are Observed,' and oblige."

The F. F. Dalley Co., Hamilton, wrote: "We beg to acknowledge receipt of yours of the 28th ult., enclosing a list of towns that observe a half holiday every week. We would be pleased to receive about 10 more copies of these."

Another letter says: "We are in receipt of yours of the 28th, enclosing memorandum of closing half days, for which we thank you. We noted this in your last paper and thinking it of a deal of interest to our travelers, we had copies made out for them. Yours truly,

F. W. Fearman Co.,

Several other letters of a similar character have been received. The information was no doubt appreciated.

Diamond Crystal

The name Diamond Crystal in connection with salt stands for the very best article that is manufactured either for table, dairy or cooking uses. The Diamond Crystal factories are models of excellence, and it is safe to say that nowhere is there a plant which is worked in a higher scientific manner than this one. Commencing in a small way it has grown to very large proportions, principally by reason of the fact that they have the raw material of such superior quality that it produces a high grade article. This condition, backed up by the best of management, could hardly fail to give the best results, and it does. The prices are not much higher than the ordinary kinds.

The fame of our immense manufactory has been built around just this one product. Credit Without Risk

The credit customer "we have always with us"—until he gets "in" too deep for comfort.

Allison Coupon Books

not only eliminate the "risk," but they make it a "cinch" to hold the customer, and likewise make it easier to deal with him.

HOW THEY WORK

A man wants credit. You think he is good. Give him a $10.00 Allison Coupon Book. Have him sign the receipt or note form in the front of the book, which you tear out and keep. Charge him with $10.00—no trouble. When he buys a dime's worth, tear off a ten cent coupon, and so on until the book is used up. Then he pays the $10.00 and gets another book. No pass books, no charging, no lost time, no errors, no disputes. Allison Coupon Books are recognized everywhere as the best.

For sale by the jobbing trade everywhere, manufactured by Allison Coupon Company, Indianapolis, Indiana.

For Summer Appetites

In hot weather, when the appetites are just a little off, and there is a peculiar craving for something cool and satisfying, nothing touches the spot like

JELL-O

It is so deliciously cool, so light, so wholesome, so nutritious, so tempting and good every way, that it satisfies the summer appetite as nothing else can.

There is no other dessert worth serving that can be made without cooking and fuss, and in hot weather no housewife wants to cook and fuss more than is necessary.

Consequently, Jell-O is one of the few articles that sell as well in hot weather as at any other time.

Protection from the Summer Heat

This is not an advertisement of a summer resort, but a straightforward talk to grocers who are not observing the best method to big cheese profits.

Summer heat, flies and insects go together—all are destructive to cheese and deteriorating to its value. This is the remedy.

THE PERFECTION CHEESE CUTTER AND CABINET

It is the only properly sanitary and absolutely practical device for retaining cheese in a store in summer; a glass covering keeps it displayed, and at the same time affords perfect protection. The board of the cheese cutter may be lifted off instantly with the cheese on it, and placed in the ice box over night, without disturbing or changing the setting of the cheese cutter.

Write us to-day for further convincing proof of the PERFECTION CHEESE CUTTER as a summer guardian of your cheese.

Decide NOW

to save $100.00

"Get your money in"

Yes, and you will save many a hundred dollars. You will save it in your collections just as one merchant has reduced his account from $3000 to $500.

You will save it in losses through mistakes in bookkeeping and in the time and worry that is inseparable from working with the old Day-Book-and-Ledger system. And you save the tedious and unsatisfactory way of sending out monthly and semi-monthly statements.

With the old Day-Book-and-Ledger system, and the monthly and semi-monthly rendering of accounts, you actually hinder your customers from paying their bills, for they do not know how much they owe you until the end of the month. Most people do not want to run bills that they cannot pay, but many people do so unthinkingly because they do not know their bill is so large. The Barr Register System will keep these bad and undesirable accounts off your books.

The Barr Register keeps your accounts always posted to the minute. When your customer makes a purchase, by just one writing your customer is given a bill of his current purchase, your customer receives a statement of the account to date, and without another penstroke all your bookkeeping is done.

That the Barr Account Register System will save any retailer hundreds of dollars is unquestioned. It is clear without a moment's thought. Then why delay? Is it wise to neglect to save money.

Make use of this coupon now. Ask for further particulars. Give us a chance to prove all this to YOU. Mark and mail this coupon NOW.

BY ROYAL APPOINTMENT

CARR & CO., LTD. CARLISLE, ENG.

Follow us, Brother Grocer, every day into thousands of smiling stores throughout Canada—big stores, small stores, and middling. And you will learn—

That the flour that sells best is the flour that suits best. We have watched since 1888 the keen, alert, progressive dealers ride on to fortune. Always the foundation has been the Satisfaction of the Buyer.

Look through the stocks selected by the big leaders in the trade —no matter what other brand or brands they carry, you will find FIVE ROSES flour there—

Five Roses Flour

Bleached Not Blended

L C Harkness (D R)
34 Royal Bank Bldg

If you aspire ... big flour sales some day, you must start at the bottom.

Build the base right.

Establish your business on such a firm foundation that it will be impossible for any competition the future may bring forth to steal away its prestige.

If the past does not prophesy falsely, Brother Grocer, FIVE ROSES flour and the LAKE O' THE WOODS connection will afford you a base as solid as a rock.

It must have many elements of success to have forced the sales expansion from 800 barrels in 1888 to 10,500 barrels a day with a still further increased capacity in sight.

Don't build on the shifting sands, Brother Grocer; don't YOU stock what progressive grocers are casting aside.

You can stock FIVE ROSES in any size or package to suit your trade.

WE SHOW THE WAY

The market price of white beans is going up---it now is $3.00 per bushel ---but Simcoe Baked Beans (family size) cost no more than when beans were $1.80 per bushel. It is possible for us to do this because we bought in immense quantities when prices were low.

What do these facts signify? The gigantic proportions of our concern and our optimism in the future popularity of Simcoe Baked Beans.

We have been repaid by steady and large sales, and still have on hand a stock to supply your demand.

There surely is no question of quality of Simcoe Baked Beans in your mind, is there? A small trial stock will soon convince you of the genuine popularity. Get the little extra benefit, the Family Size---a larger tin at a smaller price.

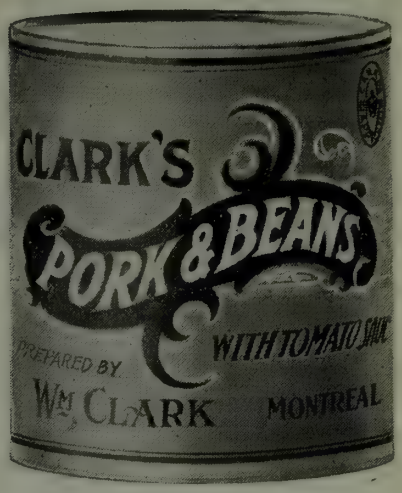
PLAIN CHILI AND TOMATO SAUCE

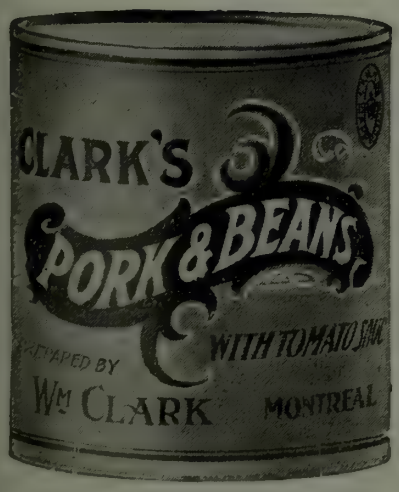
each in six different sizes



QUALITY, DELICACY AND CONVENIENCE are the most necessary attributes of prepared foods, and to CLARK'S PORK AND BEANS these attributes pertain in a marked degree.

The QUALITY is as near perfection as the most careful selection of material and the most up to date method of preparation can make it.

The DELICACY of flavour is the result of years of experience, the use of only the finest ingredients in the sauces, and the retention of the full flavour and nutritive power by the CLARK process of cooking.



The CONVENIENCE needs no demonstration. There are sizes for all sizes of families. A few minutes' immersion of the can in boiling water is all that is required, as compared with the hours necessary to prepare such a dish in the ordinary kitchen.

Purity-Cleanliness-Freshness

AFTER years of experiment in the proper making of jams, Chivers & Sons are now the recognized leaders of the preserved fruit industry in the Old Country. Exhaustive investigation by the world's best critics has pronounced them "excellent."

PURITY—Cleanliness—Freshness—these three, are the hall-mark of this world-famed make of food products. Starting in a very small way with a mere handful of employees, Chivers & Sons have developed into a thoroughly organized concern employing thousands of people.

Chivers & Sons' Fruit Preserves

have a flavour that is unequalled, being composed of the choicest fresh fruit skilfully prepared. This delicious flavour may be attributed to their method of preserving and packing, almost immediately after the fruit is gathered. This is an advantage obtained by Chivers' factory standing in the midst of thousands of acres of orchards in the finest fruit-growing district of Cambridgeshire.

A feature that you will find as a selling point is the careful packing in tins or bottles. By a special process all the tins are prepared so as to prevent the possibility of any detrimental effect on the fruit.

You safeguard your reputation, Mr. Grocer, by stocking foodstuffs of perfect purity and quality—tried and tested. You will find it the means of bringing many repeat orders—at good profit.

THE TEST OF SERVICE

Few electric coffee mills develop trouble in the first year of their service. To the new owner, enthusiastic over the beauty and convenience of his new mill, what is out of sight is more than likely to be out of mind.

But to the level head buyer the value of foresight in what is out of sight needs no explaining. He knows that on these parts depend the life and service of his mill. Many a COLES mill is to-day, after three or four years service, giving just as good satisfaction as when it came fresh from the factory. Is this kind of service worth anything to you?

He writes that the machine is doing fine. I pay $40.00 per month rent and have four people employed and machine pays rent and help.

Now to get at his profits in this little, big business, let's do a little figuring. Rent $480 per year. Four clerks at $5.00 per week each, $1,040, total $1,520 or 15 times the cost of his machine. Did you ever add anything to your business that beats it? In some cases they have earned more net profit than that of the business of the entire store. Furthermore its attractiveness turns the eyes of passersby upon your store. Often it is the agent of sending them in. It helps the business in the store. Gentlemen We have had one of your Registers in use for two months and are thoroughly satisfied that the system is all that you claim for it.

We find that the carrying forward at each transaction of any outstanding balance does away entirely with the leakage from small accounts left unpaid through a customers negligence - formerly a mutual source of trouble with us; we are sure that this alone is quite sufficient to justify the installation of the system

Another feature that appeals to us is that we can compile an absolutely accurate total of our outstanding credit account in less than ten minutes at any time, without any previous posting or preparation being necessary; a feat hitherto impossible to us.

We shall be pleased to allow any interested person to inspect our Register at any time on receipt of a request from any of your representatives.

THE IMPORTANCE OF FRESH TEA

The flavor of tea is contained in an essential oil. With age the oil decays. This affects the flavor and is quickly detected by the consumer. Tea keeps better when not exposed to the air, but it deteriorates, more or less, under any circumstances. Fresh tea is as necessary to a successful tea trade as fresh butter to a successful butter trade. No retailer should keep a pound of tea in his stock for more than four months, and he should be sure that wholesalers are not supplying him with old goods which they have had on hand for years.

In Ceylon, tea is picked every week in the year, and you always get it fresh and fragrant in "SALADA."

If any retailer—anywhere—at any time—has any "SALADA" in stock that is over six months old, let him ship it back to us—freight collect—and we will refund the full purchase price. We back up our belief in the paramount importance of fresh tea by this sweeping guarantee.

Samples of show-cards made by a clerk in an Allandale, Ont., grocery store. These cards have been reduced from large cardboard size.

Turning Stock Over Ten Times a Year

Grocer With Stock of About $5,000 Expects $50,000 Turnover This Year—Some of His Methods for Quick Turnover—Buys Mostly in Small Quantities—Sells Large Quantities of Cakes—Value of Show Cards in Calling Attention to Special Occasions.

"The turnover's the thing." So thinks many a retail dealer who buys strictly with a view to rapid turnover. No one will dispute his opinion as long as a fair profit is being made on the investment, and reputable people, and not deadbeats, are buying the goods.

Retailers generally aim to turn stock over from four to six times a year. A few may probably make it seven but cases are rare where turnovers are made nine and ten times.

One of these comes from Allandale, Ont. J. D. Wisdom, of that town carries an average of from $4,500 to $5,000 stock. The annual turnover amounts to from $40,000 to $45,000 while this year plans are set for $50,000.

Buys in Small Quantities.

Mr. Wisdom attributes the rapid turnover in goods particularly to carefulness in buying the right goods and buying them in small quantities. The right goods means those he knows he can sell his trade. They include many fancy lines as well as every-day sellers, which, in his large floor area, he can display to good advantage.

Apart from canned goods and a few other lines, goods are purchased for immediate requirements rather than for the future so that at no one time is there an extensive capital invested. A number of side lines are handled to attract the people into the store and once inside, other goods are sold them.

Big Sales in Cakes.

"We sell from 50 to 75 dozen cakes, pastry, etc., every day," states Mr. Wisdom. "On Saturdays these sales run up up to 150 dozen. So you see here alone is a fairly large turnover in a year, the stock moving out the same day as received."

The same applies to fruits and vegetables. Fresh fruits are hurried out as soon as purchased so that no losses will occur over spoiled goods. An ice cream parlor off the store also contributes to rapid turnover. At the same time people who come to purchase any of these lines are, in majority of cases, influenced by personal conversation, display or other suggestion into buying other lines. For instance there may be an inviting display of pickles of various kinds around a pillar in the centre of the store or of meat sauce on the counter which will make a sale.

Clerk Writes Show Cards.

A feature is made of show cards in this store. It is fortunate in having a young man, George Hill, who is much interested in this work and cards tacked up here and there about the store are among the first things observed on entering.

"These cards are certainly noticed," Mr. Wisdom claims, "and I feel they are a splendid help in making special announcements."

Whenever a special holiday is coming along Mr. Hill arranges a card suitable for the occasion. The three reproduced above indicate their character. At first glance it might be supposed considerable work was spent on them but such is not the case. The illustrations in the centre and right cards were secured from a magazine. They were simply cut out and pasted on card board and the lettering added.

For Special Announcements. . .

Mr. Wisdom claims they are well worth while, as scores of people are observed looking them over every day. When a holiday is coming along it isn't possible to remind everybody, but a show card like the centre one, not only suggests that customers purchase for a day ahead but amuses them as well.

This young show card writer is encouraged in his work. That he will be an expert in a few years if he sticks at it, is easily believed, for this is the way card writers begin.

As pointed out in last week's issue, Mr. Wisdom is an Association man. He is one of the active association workers in the north and an executive member of the Ontario R.G.A. He believes in co-operation with his fellow men because of the ideas picked up from time to time that help out in the daily work.

Fifteen Thousand at Grocers' Picnic

Grimsby Beach Attracts Immense Throng on Occasion of Hamilton and Brantford Grocers' Annual Outing—Great Variety of Sports on the Programme—Four Thousand Pails of Tea and Coffee Given Away—Some Impressions of a Guest.

(Staff Correspondence.)

Grimsby Beach, Ont., July 24.—The combined supervision of a field marshal and his auxiliary officers would scarcely be adequate to control the movements of 10,000 men—and women—fighting a dozen different battles at the same time. So they must take off their hats to the officers of the Hamilton Retail Grocers' Association and committee who controlled the destinies of the biggest picnic of Western Ontario at Grimsby Beach last Wednesday.

Few picnics are superior in size anywhere in Canada to that of the Hamilton and Brantford Retail Grocers' Associations. It was estimated that trains from the Ambitious City carried at least 8,000 people to the Beach, while 800 or 900 more came from Brantford. In addition to this the radial line added another three or four thousand; hundreds came by boats and farmers and their wives and sons and daughters drove in from miles around to swell the numbers. There were easily 15,000 visitors on the grounds.

A Good General.

But grocers know how to handle the public. Under the generalship of J. A. McIntosh, chairman of the Picnic Committee, miniature bloodless battles were fought here and there during the day with the utmost precision. One member of the committee for instance was assigned control over foot races; another superintended quoiting matches; a third the ball games; a fourth, and by the way it was actually a Forth, John by name, supervised the dispensing of free liquid refreshments; a fifth the water sports, etc.

So the picnic proceeded like a well-oiled machine with events so varied and widespread and following in such rapid succession, that the day to everyone of that 15,000 souls wore away all too soon.

The strong may say that "nothing is impossible." But they are all wrong. Let any one journalist among them attend the Hamilton and Brantford Grocers' picnic and attempt to record even the official proceedings of the day, and see where he comes off at. Not even the versatile "Bay" Hill with all his facilities for being twice in the one spot at the one time, and at the same time it not being Bay at all, could begin to follow or describe the intricacies of the great picnic! What hopes then are there for the ordinary, every day journalist?

Becomes Unwritten History.

The majority of the details of the day will, therefore, perforce, be numbered among the unrecorded events of history. Suffice it to say that there were races, ball games, quoit contests, trap shooting, baby shows, guessing contests, a balloon ascension, hunting for eggs, a minstrel show, fireworks display and Venetian

AT THE HAMILTON GROCERS' PICNIC.
Geo. Cann may be seen on the left. W. Waters is holding the megaphone, and J. Kirkpatrick standing on the right.

parade, in addition to the hundred and one permanent midway attractions of the Park.

The races were many and varied. From boys and girls but a few years out of their mother's arms, to farmers and gardeners and their wives, and fat men, did the running contests go. There were three-legged races, shoe races, backward races for married women, grocers' association events, etc., etc. Many a youth and maiden, young and old met their Waterloo.

Geo. Cann was the chairman of the Games Committee. George Can and did look after the proceedings with a will. He answered more questions throughout the day than the inquiry editor in a woman's magazine would in a year. He was certainly a bureau of information for the picnickers.

Ed. Hazell, the president of the Hamilton Association, had a busy day receiving guests and keeping a general supervision over everything.

Were a Thirsty Lot.

It was a busy day for John Forth. During the day, he and other members of the Refreshment Committee handed out 4,000 small pails of tea and coffee, 160 gallons of milk, 150 gallons of lemonade and orangeade. It took 100 lbs of tea, the same of coffee, 300 lbs of sugar and half a ton of ice to satisfy the throng. No doubt Mr. Forth can any day get a position as commissariat to the Canadian navy if we have one.

All Were After Him.

Secretary "Bay" Hill was of course present. He was possibly the most searched for individual on the grounds—not by the police but by picnickers who were after a $10 gold piece which Bay had in his pants pockets. He was the mysterious Miss Ter E. for an hour or two, passing himself off as a young widow, until finally captured by a lady resident of the Beach.

Harry Eckstein, a Hamilton woman impersonator of renown, was on the grounds in the afternoon and under the prosaic name of Miss McGinnis, was introduced to the boys and was always found among them.

Where the Woman Shone.

Many grocer travelers were on the grounds during the day. One of them conducted a novelty contest—throwing balls into a barrel—open to women, who stood some six or eight feet distant. It goes without saying that few balls got inside the barrel. Had the women taken the precaution to aim somewhere else, at the traveler for instance, much better results would undoubtedly have been realized.

Members of Committees.

As noted above J. A. McIntosh was the chairman of the Picnic Committee. The following committees worked under him to make the outing the success it was:—

Refreshment.— J. Forth (chairman), Jas Lawrie, A. Ballentine, W. Water, Henderson Bros., W. Beswick, Geo. Dawson, A. J. Bain, G. Lyne, O. W. Robbins.

Transportation. — J. O. Carpenter, (chairman), A. G. Bain, J. Forth, Jas. Kirkpatrick.

Printing.—W. Smye (chairman), J. M. Semmens, F. H. Soules, Jas. Lawrie, John Knox.

Games.—Geo. Cann (chairman), J. M. Semmens, E. Henderson, John Knox, J. L. Brown, E. H. Young, W. Beswick, J. Clendenning, M. Cummings.

Entertainment and Reception. — H. Taylor (chairman), Jas. Main, W. Waters, B. Crysler, M. R. Hill, C. H. Peebles, W. Smythe.

Note and Comment.

It rained in both Brantford and Hamilton early in the morning, but Captains Mellen and Hazell are every day leaders and brought big crowds along.

Jas. Burns, of Brantford, is a bowler. It was difficult to get him past the Hamilton green.

The reputation of the Hamilton and Brantford grocers' picnic brought Ed. Ryan and Tom Shaw all the way from the Forest City. They do like to see a good ball game such as Hamilton and Grimsby, or Detroit and Chicago.

Geo. Cann may not be a fast runner himself but he can see to it that the races are conducted in a hurry.

Free tea, coffee and lemonade! That in itself is a big attraction at any picnic.

Jno. O. Carpenter, if our friend Shakespeare would now admit there is anything in a name, was the natural solution as chairman of the transportation committee.

It is said of "Rosy" Furniss, a traveler, who attended the picinc, that he is a dancer of some duration. But there is a limit to all things.

Chairman McIntosh can at any time qualify as an organizer for big picnics.

The Hamilton grocers now regret the fact that J. M. Semmens was not included in the Olympic contestants.

There are few men who can handle a megaphone. Count W. Waters as one.

Grocers at Niagara Have Eventful Day

Call of the Big Cataract Answered by Large Crowd—Fun Galore From Start to Finish—Grocers Defeat Drummers in Spectacular Ball Contest—A Duel Forms One of the Biggest Attractions of the Day—Races Reveal the Sprinting Grocers.

Staff Correspondence.

Niagara Falls, Ont., July 24.—Wednesday, July 17, was the one big day of all the year for the Toronto Retail Grocers' Association, when, with their full staff from delivery boy to head clerk and accompanied by wives and children as well as friends and friends' friends, they cast business worries to the winds, donned their running shoes and ice-cream caps and went forth to enjoy in earnest one long glorious and eventful day.

Victoria Park, Niagara Falls, was the stampeding grounds of the Queen City sugar dispensers this year in their 27th annual excursion which proved equally or more successful to all those successful ones that have gone before.

'Twas a Poet's Day.

It would be omitting an important item to pass over the event without some reference to that feature upon which a picnic stands or falls. Reference is made to the brand of weather that was handed down for the day's outing. It was one of those perfect days which gets the poet's fancy. Nevertheless there was little outward evidence of any grocer getting real poetical, except it was Bob Davies who, in taking part in the quarter mile stampede declared "pace" to rhyme with "race." However if the government bluebook on the day's sport is referred to, it will be found that the race was too long and the pace too slow to be worked into a real lyric. However all day long Old Sol beamed forth with radiance that bid fair to outdo even the renowned smile of Bailey Snow. Last year, Providence was none too kind to the grocers, and this year an attempt was apparently made to atone for past misbehavior. True, early in the morning about the time grocers are accustomed to wash off their pavements, gentle drops of rain pattered down; but that was all.

AT TORONTO GROCERS' PICNIC.
Principals and attendants at the big duel attraction.

Caught the Early Boat.

It would have taken rain, and then some, to keep the grocers home. Pleasant remembrances of past years flared up vividly in their minds and when the first boat pulled out for Niagara Falls at 7.30 a.m. it carried a goodly contingent who had tucked away in their inside pocket a strip of pasteboard which allowed a landing at Lewiston, a trip up the Gorge route to Niagara Falls, N. Y., a transfer to the scene of action at Victoria Park and a return ticket down the Canadian side with privilege of stopping off at points of interest all along the route. Later boats brought additional excursionists to swell the crowd.

We will not stop to review the "high jinks" that took place in the grocer's camp as the good ship plowed her way across Lake Ontario. Let us shift the moving picture machine onward to the main scene of action.

There Was a Ball Game On.

The tall timbers which surround the park and which down through the years have gazed upon varied array of sights from Indian war dances to the revelries of enthusiastic picnickers, probably have never, at least in recent years seen such a weird, yet interesting spectacle as the stellar attraction of the day—the baseball match in which the drummers attempted to put it over the grocers. Yes, "attempted" is the correct word to use, according to the grocers. However the travelers regard it otherwise and declare that the only fast man in the grocer's line up was Swift. He played centre field.

It was a great game anyway. So declared one of the grass cutters at the park (not the kind that Dick Matthews knocked out), and he ought to know, because he once saw Port Credit, his home town put it all over Oakville right in their own back yard.

Had Control of Something.

Davies, who did the heaving for the counter hoppers, had perfect control—of his temper, not the ball. McKeown who learned the game with the Toronto Front Street Fishing Club was on the mound for the travelers, and for him it may be said that he gave Forbes his own catcher, some first-class wallops on the jaw. Most of the late sporting extras of the Niagara Falls' papers gave the honors by a 14-6 margin. Constable Wes Williams found the following guilty of taking part in the fray:—

Grocers.—Davies, P.; Hall, C.; Thorne, Caufield, Drumn, Canfield, Mathews, Nicholl, Swift.

Travelers.—McKeown, P.; Forbes, C.; Dean, Prowse, Raper, Weston, Garland, Portous, Lane.

Britannia Rules the Waves.

Let us refer once more to the neighboring tall timbers which have seldom at any one time gazed down upon so many nationalities as were gathered together to see Uncle Sam Alias Billy Miller fight a real duel with John Bull, whom Bailey Snow undertook to impersonate. To see our great forefather cooly stab Uncle Sam with an ancient sword he had borrowed from the national museum

WAKING UP THE TOWN COUNCIL.

Retail grocers in every town and city should see that the streets are properly taken care of in the dusty season. In some places the health authorities will not allow merchants to dry sweep the sidewalks, but at the same time, the councils who appoint health officers do not sprinkle the streets properly. A little gust of wind will drive the dust through an open door or window, and this kept up all day long means a dirty store interior.

The Grocers Section of the Toronto R.M.A. have protested against this nuisance by forwarding the Mayor the following resolution:—

"That the Grocers' section of the Retail Merchants Association of Canada, Toronto branch, again places itself on record as being in favor of the by-law which compels the covering of all fruits which do not require to be peeled, and which are exposed for sale so as to protect them from the dust but it is also our opinion that before this by-law can consistently be enforced and made of any value to the consumers, that the city council should to their duty by watering the streets in a proper manner, and also prohibit the civic street sweepers from the dry sweeping of the streets. In our opinion, the streets of Toronto are in a more dusty condition to-day than they have been for some time, and it is therefore impossible for us to keep the dust from settling on goods that are exposed on the outside."

If the dealers in every centre were organized, much good could be done in a similar manner by getting after the men who are supposed to keep the streets in a clean, sanitary condition. Waken them up and put them on the water wagon.

MOCHA COFFEE DEFINED.

The Chicago spice firm charged with misbranding coffee, contrary to the regulations of United States' pure food department, was found guilty and assessed the nominal fine of one dollar.

As has been explained in these columns before, the defendant concern put a coffee on the market labeled Mocha and Java. The pure food authorities claimed that because the "Mocha" had come from Abyssinia and not the Yemen district of Arabia it could not be so labeled. The defendants admitted that the coffee had been grown in Abyssinia, but that according to custom it was commonly known as Longberry Mocha.

From the evidence adduced it transpired that there has been no coffee shipped from the port of Mocha—the origin of the coffee name—for more than 200 years, as that port had been closed during that period of time. So that, as a matter of fact, there was no coffee entitled to the strict geographical name of Mocha. The Arabian coffee of that name is grown in the Yemen district and shipped through the port of Aden.

The Judge of the District Court ruled that in order to distinguish the Arabian and Abyssinian coffees the former should be designated "Arabian Mocha" and the latter "Abyssinian Mocha." The latter is grown just across the Red Sea from Arabia, and as far as cup quality is concerned, experts agree that the difference is slight, sometimes in favor of one and sometimes the other. The judge took the view that each is of the Mocha type, but should be qualified by the geographical names of Arabia and Abyssinia.

The suit will no doubt be considered a precedent in the United States so far as numerous other articles are concerned. Geographical names will have to be affixed to clearly designate these articles.

PROGRESS OF WESTERN CROPS

The crops through the West have made great improvement during the last three weeks, since the welcome rains and cooler weather. The wheat crop is in head or coming on fine, and everything at present indicates a good harvest.

There have been some hail storms, but the areas visited by them are narrow. Crop experts are beginning to figure the yield at 25 bushels per acre on an average. Of course, there are contingencies yet to meet, but the outlook is favorable. With the continuance of present conditions the harvest will be much earlier than last year, and already some anxiety is being felt about the supply of hands for the saving of the crop. It is estimated that the number required will be much larger than ever before.

Where this extra help will come from is a problem requiring serious attention. It is quite evident that the Western farmer will be dependent upon a large influx Eastern labor; for, owing to the great activity in railroad construction and building operations in the Western cities, there will be few men available for harvest hands from the present supply of labor in the West. There will, no doubt, be large numbers brought in by the railways from the Eastern provinces, and probably a quota from the western and south-western States; but the rather unsatisfactory experience of many of those who came last year may cause a decline in the amount of the supply from above sources.

Another question that is being actively discussed in the West is the old chronic one of transportation. If present indications are realized, there will be a tremendous amount of grain to go East this fall. Should the harvest be a month earlier, as it at present promises, and the weather conditions remain favorable, there will be a vast improvement upon last year. Coupled with this fact, railroads have added largely to their equipment, which ought materially to relieve the situation. However, upon the other hand, it must be borne in mind that there is a large increase in acreage over last year, and the crop promises a much larger yield.

It is doubtful if the increased equipment of the railroads is any greater, if as great in proportion, as the added acreage sown, so that if present expectations materialize there is abundant cause for serious consideration of the transportation problem.

In some parts of the West, particularly Western Alberta, it is fondly hoped that the opening of the Panama Canal will give great relief, and that the wheat of the province will find its way to the markets of Europe by that route. In the opinion of many, however, this much cherished hope, is, in the language of the old Puritans, a delusion of the devil. The wheat crops of the West will never go that way, they say. That the hot climate of the tropics will destroy the grain is their contention. Otherwise, why wouldn't the Mississippi be used to carry grain from the Central States to the seaboard?

The solution of this problem of transportation is awaited.

FRUIT CROP PROSPECTS.

Strawberry season has come and gone and prices were never very cheap. In Eastern Canada they netted the growers from $2 to $2.50 per crate of 24 boxes, which is from about 8½ to 10½ cents per box. During one day of the season, from some misunderstanding among the growers, there was a glut on the Toronto market, strawberries selling at 5 and 6 cents, whereas, in some other Ontario cities they were as high as 12 and 15 cents the same day.

Raspberries are on the market now, but we cannot hope for any large crop or low prices. The drought of last season, the cold winter and the two weeks' dry weather late in June and early in July, are responsible for the short crop. After next week, raspberries will be practically off the market, and no cheap prices will have been realized.

In cherries many kinds of sweet varieties have been short, and on the whole, this fruit has not been the crop expected. In British Columbia, crop of sour cherries has been heavy, since sweets only medium.

Grapes promise particularly well this year. Concords are reported at 93 per cent. crop, Niagaras at 86 and red grapes at 85 per cent. Almost a full crop is expected from present appearances.

The crop of peaches as a whole will be fair, although in some districts it is poor, owing to the hard winter.

So far as apple prospects are concerned, the "set" does not bear out what the blossoms of last month indicated. Reports from different parts of the country show a heavy "drop," even where the "set" was good. In Nova Scotia estimates have fallen to 52 per cent. of a full crop, but this will likely be increased later on, as the orchards there are pretty well cared for. Taking 100 as a standard or full crop, the average for the Dominion is calculated at 67 per cent.

Tomatoes are coming along splendidly, but serious inroads by cutworms are reported.

WATCHING CEREALS IN SUMMER.

Let the dealer put himself in the place of a customer who has bought a package of cereal or breakfast food only to find it uneatable. What would you be disposed to do?

Would you not lower your estimation of the capabilities of that merchant? Would you not on certain occasions, unconsciously perhaps, advertise this service, or rather lack of service, among customers and probable customers? Might you not on the first provocation transfer your trade to some other dealer?

It is a serious matter for the retailer—this supplying customers with stale cereals during summer months. A short time ago an actual case of where one dealer lost two customers was recorded in these columns. Another has come to hand. The customer purchased a package of corn flakes. The clerk found it at the rear of a shelf, and by the appearance of the package the buyer had doubts of it being in the fresh class. These doubts were substantiated next morning at the breakfast table on the occasion of the first serving. The seriousness of the trouble is illustrated by the fact that the box and its contents were burned.

Here was a case where carelessness on the part of the dealer did him considerable harm. In fact he may never know the extent of it, as from time to time the incident will be repeated to friends of that buyer.

It would appear that there is room for advice on the part of manufacturers to the dealer. Most goods are better sold when fresh, and if this were pointed out continuously, less perishable goods would be held in stock for weeks and months.

TROUBLE IN VALORIZATION SUIT.

When officials of the United States Government took it in hand to break the alleged Valorization Coffee Trust, many came to the conclusion that they would have easy sailing.

But such has not been the case. The Attorney-General began the suit, but it appears he did not take into council Secretary of State Knox, who had been negotiating on friendly terms with the Brazilian Government. His was a diplomatic mission and to have another section of the government step in and attempt to force matters was not at all to his liking.

Secretary Knox is said to have expressed his displeasure in no uncertain terms because of his contention that the matter should be handled diplomatically. On the other hand the Attorney-General contends that people doing business on United States' soil must conform to United States' laws, and so is going on with the suit.

The troublesome flame has been further fanned by the straight statements of the Brazilian ambassador at Washington who is indignant that the United States should meddle in Brazilian affairs, and it looks as if strained relations between the two countries would ensue. Particularly would this be the case if the suit is pushed to a conclusion.

In the meantime Canadians interested, will look on and wonder how long coffee is going to continue its aeroplane flights.

Drummers Enjoy Night and Day of Fun

Snack Club Convenes Once Again at Georgetown in Best Outing of the Twenty —Sleep Forgotten and Fun and Frolic Abound— Concert, Calithumpian Parade, Ball Games and Races Included in the Big Show—New Officers Elected.

Staff Correspondence.

Georgetown, Ont., July 25.—There are times in the life of every man when he doesn't care. Where he sleeps or whether he sleeps at all or not, is of no consequence. The foregoing of a meal seems like an everyday occurrence for aught an onlooker could determine. He simply doesn't care whether sleep or beds were ever invented.

Everyone has heard tell of the Drummers' Snack Club. It was born at Alton just twenty years ago. In another year it becomes of age. Some days prior to the great annual midsummer outing of this body the members of the Snack begin to get wound up. It's all done by inborn enthusiasm. From the moment a drummer sets foot on Georgetown soil the process of winding up rushes to a culmination. A room may be engaged for the night but no head may indent the pillow, at least not until the sun begins to rise up from the underground. He simply doesn't care whether school keeps or not. Fun, he has come for and fun he wants. The mummy sleeps, and the mummy "aint" had no fun for 10,000 years.

A Good Reception.

The crowd arrived on Friday evening 'mid the beating of drums and the blowing of bugles. It was a triumphant entry and the town was captured without much ado. Banners, colored lights, and Chinese lanterns blazed forth a welcome and everybody from the Georgetown small boy to the octogenarian joined in the initial bow.

The curtain raiser to the great show, as usual, was the concert in the park on Friday evening. Music and drama critics in attendance declared it a No. 1 performance. And so it was. Chief Geo. Smye must have been proud of his subjects. In spite of the fact that the air was chilly some 1,600 people sat or stood the concert out with only the canopy of the blue sky above. Stars shone both above and on the stage and melody was wafted out among the trees to the ears of the gatekeepers and citizens of Georgetown.

Colonel Stoneman's Minstrels.

There was a minstrel show put on by the Hamilton drummers to begin the programme, after the Georgetown band had played an overture. Under the leadership of Colonel Stoneman and including the services of such talented artists as Charley Smye, Billy Dore, C. E. Wilson, W. H. Pringle, Harry Eckstein, B. G. Sullivan, Jas. Sinnott and Jas. Mundie, what else could it be but a success? The joke and end men were in fine form and despite the fact that it is said there is nothing new under the sun, they passed out a few that beat the comic paper book-worms. For instance read this: An old darkey was asked how he secured names for his twelve youngsters. He said he was a Bible reada,' and had given them all Bible names such as Hezekiah, Noah, etc., and the twelfth he called Judas Iscariot.

"Judas Iscariot! That's an awful name to give a boy," replied the Colonel, "how in the world did you come to give him such a name."

"Well you see Kunell, I reads m'Bible and it says the'r as it would have been fa' bette' for Judas Iscariot if he'd neve' been bo'n."

Space does not permit going deeply into the merits of the entire show but those interested may be able to digest the various numbers in the next issues of the New York theatre magazines. But the "Charge of the Light Brigade" must not be overlooked. It isn't every day one hears it set forth as it was by Col. John Stoneman. His portrayal of the memorable event was as near as one, other than a soldier, would care to be at such a charge.

Among the visiting talent was Margaret Park Wilson, contralto; E. Jules Brazil, piano monologue artist; Harry M. Bennett, humorist, and a Toronto male quartette. It was assuredly a high class concert. Earnest G. Bowles, of Toronto, and Mrs. B. G. Sullivan, Hamilton, played the accompaniments. Richard Woodcroft, Hamilton, was the musical instructor in the minstrel show.

It was close on the hour of midnight when the fireworks display was shown and as usual it was a brilliant close to a successful evening.

Sleep Forsook Many.

Despite the late hour when events settled down to normal, everyone was on deck early in the morning when the roll was called. Some found a resting place in easy chairs; others might have been seen on Frank Barber's camp stretchers, and slept as soundly on them for an hour or two as they would on the downy couches of the King's palace. One or two individuals slept in the bank within arm's reach of the safe door and dreamed of being within easy reach of riches. But the wiser heads didn't go to bed at all lest some of the fun should slip through their fingers. Their cups were running over with joy and why should they?

The New Officers.

The big events of the morning were the annual meeting and the Toronto-Hamilton ball game. President Geo. Smye was in the chair at the former and the business was gone over with as much precision as possible. The election of officers resulted as follows:

President.—Wm. Meen, Toronto.
Vice-Pres.—Chas. Syme, Hamilton.
Hamilton Secretary.—Russel Smith.

Who says England and Germany are not good friends? This is Col. Jno. Stoneman and John Wildfong, at the great picnic.

Toronto Secretary.—Geo. Campbell.
Home Secretary.—J. A. Willoughby.
Gen. Sec.—Treas.—P. McIntosh.
Hamilton Executive.—Harry Eckstein, P. Somerville, W. J. Dore, Chas. Wilson, J. Sinnott, W. J. Ballantine.
Toronto Executive. — Chas. Silver, Wm. Mill, C. A. E. Colwell, Sol. Walters, Walter Madill, Wm. Shaver.
Executive-at-Large. — Hugh Rennie and J. D. Abraham, London; Geo. Griffith, Milton; O. Wilder and Bert Groskurth, Orangeville; W. J. Moody, Berlin.

AT THE SNACK OUTING.

Those who know will recognize in this picture the following drummers:—Col. Jno. Stoneman, Jno. Garvey & Co., London; Charles Smye, Balfour-Smye & Co., Hamilton; S. J. Wyllie and J. L. Aitken, Davidson & Hay, Toronto; C. E. Wilson and G. Mince, Lumsden Bros., Hamilton; G. A. Griffith, R. Simpson Co., Hamilton; H. D. Elliott, T. Kinnear & Co., Toronto; E. O. Zimmerman, F. F. Dalley & Co., Hamilton, and Sol Walters, with the Macdonald Tobacco Co.

Auditors.—W. G. Reid, Robt. Algie.

The following committee was appointed to consider advisability of having the Snack Club incorporated:—J. H. Wildfong, Walter Madill, M. Malone, P. Somerville and P. McIntosh; the latter to be chairman.

Ball Game Cut Short.

The baseball game between Hamilton and Toronto devolved into a pitching duel between S. J. Wyllie and Bob Asher. It would not look well to tell all about the support these mound artists received. However, after Toronto's third baseman, a la Fitzpatrick, split his finger and Sol Waters came to the rescue there was a marked improvement in support from the acre of sward about that third sack. No ball could get past. It was two o'clock, Orillia time, when the third innings had been concluded with Hamilton 10 and Toronto 8. Here to the disgust of the fans who hadn't had the privilege of seeing a good game since a year ago, time was called to allow the players to get a snack and jump into the Calithumpian parade.

One Grand Parade.

To use the language of the street gamin, this was "some" procession. It might be compared to the promenade at a masked ball but for the introduction of automobiles and other horseless carriages. John Wildfong, in elaborate Chinese court costume, with an Indian princess at his side, led off that grand procession. The English language really lacks sufficient superlative adjectives to describe its magnificence.

But all things have an end, and the end of this parade was an automatic transportation vehicle with the cart before the horse in reality.

The Afternoon Games.

But we must pass on. The scene changes to the ringside where the indoor-outdoor ball game proceeds; where the baby show is held; where the races are run and prizes are distributed.

Sol. Walters captains an indoor baseball team which is overthrown in the first session by that of Russel Smith. Sol directs the proceedings from the initial sack—and he covers that sack comfortably—but all to no purpose. He meets his Waterloo; but he is philosophic and before the umpire has time to declare the score he is in the ringside looking for other worlds to conquer.

The broom ball game between the six married and single ladies reminded one of the Regina cyclone. The Gladiators met on the dusty race track in front of the grand stand and it doesn't require any elastic imagination to realize the result.

Easy for Married Men.

A man with a family has always the biggest chance of winning an early call race. He has had some experience. And so it happened here. Michael Malone came home with the bacon. But Michael after coming through two-thirds of the boxing-in barrel contest all covered with glory, succumbed to Billy Dore in the final heat.

Col. John Stoneman directed the movements of the field from the judges' stand. George Smye handled the megaphone as long as his voice lasted when this duty was concluded by Frank Barber. C. A. E. Colwell was clerk of the course, and the judges were Sol Walters, Capt. W. G. Reid, R. Archer, R. A. Somerville, W. J. Mills and R. Rennie.

NOTES ON THE DAY.

The Boy Scouts of Georgetown for their assistance were presented with bugle cords for their bugle band.

Sol Walters was the heaviest man in the ball game. This does not refer to his capacity as a batter.

"How do you sells eggs?" the 20th century grocery clerk was asked. "Just as quickly as possible," was the reply. (From sparks from the minstrel show.)

Geo. Campbell probably handled a bigger variety of groceries, dry goods, cut glass, etc., in giving out the prizes than he ever will again.

A prominent banner expressed the wish of everyone present. It read:—

"Backward, turn backward, oh time in thy flight,
And make me a boy again just for to-night."

Mike Malone is certainly the real white hope. The way he disposed of his opponents in the barrel boxing contest was enough to make Jack Johnson turn white.

The ball game had all the ear marks of a big league contest. One of the players split his finger.

From a distance the broom ball match looked like a repetition of the Regina cyclone. When the dust had settled they counted all the players to see if any had been covered up during the fray.

Another scorcher of the minstrels that got Colonel Stoneman:—"If pig is pork and cow is beef, is Mutt'en Jeff?"

W. J. Ballantine's suggestion to provide caps for the drummers next year was accepted without a dissenting voice.

Jack Wildfong's son arrived too late to enter the baby show. Jack was greatly disappointed.

Although Mike Malone reached the turning post first in the "early call" race, he galloped home in front with his boots laced perfectly.

H. L. Wallace gives a fireless cooker to the drummer selling the most buttons next year. Some wife will have a lucky husband.

"Remove the key" puzzles, distributed by J. W. Powell are about as difficult to solve as the problem of finding the keyhole sometimes proves to be.

Ode to "Passing of the Cyclone Cellar:—

The cyclone cellar is now no more,
The Snack Club boys have closed the door;
But do not weep, my dear Malone
They still have left the ice cream cone.

There was a great commotion from the grand stand when "Bay" Hill and his partner won the pick-a-back race. They ran right out and turned around and ran right home again.

You could hear this sad refrain floating over Georgetown as the trains pulled out Saturday evening:—

When we came last night
We were wound up tight,
As we leave this town
We are all run down.

Must Be Concentration in Advertising

The Writer of Good Advertisements First Makes a Study of Subject Before Attempting to Teach it to the Public—Better to Feature One Line at a Time or Associated Lines—Tea Advertisement Used as Illustration.

*By Henry Johnson, Jr.

One grocer asks: "In advertising does it help more to advertise one or two articles at a time, or many?" And the answer is: Advertise one thing at a time; or at most, a few things from kindred lines.

It is all right to list several Spices in a special ad. devoted to your Pepper, because the general line of spices is harmonious with and kindred to Pepper; but do not quote pepper and Kerosene in the same ad, for these are so diametrically opposed to each other, and the impressions and thoughts created by the mention of either are so dissimilar and so widely dissociated, that the mention of either will detract from anything you might say in favor of the other.

May Use Associated Lines.

It is good business to fill your window with a display of what are called household goods—washtubs, wringers, clothes lines, brushes, dusters, mops; also to add, even soaps, though it were still better if you like, bath brick, soap-powder, and to confine your display to the lines listed before bath brick, reserving all those scouring materials, soaps, etc., for a later display.

I have failed to make any impression on you if I have not successfully indicated to you that advertising is a big, serious, deeply educational undertaking; and that it is educational to you, through the teaching and to your readers through the learning from what you teach. This is most certainly so.

Must be Systematic.

Then, inasmuch as you would not seriously set about teaching anything without carefully studying the subject and mapping out a definite course to be followed, you must follow something like that system in your advertising, to get the proper results. The first thing, then, that you would do if you were going to teach something else, would be to subdivide it into captions, departments, or, if you please, chapters; teaching a division at a time, so that your pupil might absorb the subject bit by bit, digesting your teachings progressively. And that is just the way with advertising.

Subdivide. Take one or two things at a time. Write out all you know about those things, going into the fullest detail. Then prune what you have written, cutting out every word that can be spared without obscuring the sense of what you want to tell. Then you may find that you have so much solid information that you will have to use three, four or five ads to say it all; and this is right—for the public is not like the class of the ordinary teacher, but has lots of things to think about. The class may be held down to concentrate on an entire section; but your public cannot be held except as you interest it, and your chance of getting that interest is vastly increased if you make your lessons short, pithy, interesting, and of such obvious value that further lessons will be followed with increasing interest.

Teaching Should be Thorough.

For instance, take Blank Brand Ceylon Tea. Here is what you may write the first time:

"This Tea is grown on the peninsula of India and the Isthmus of Ceylon, all climatically the same. The genus of the plant is identical and curing methods do not vary throughout the entire territory. It is all machine cured, hence hygienically handled—a great advantage over the usual Asiatic growths. The finer grades of all growths are made from the smaller, more delicate leaves, with a sprinkling of the little, delicate buds. But a still greater influence comes from the altitude at which the plants are grown; the higher altitudes producing much the finer-flavored teas. Hence no teas can be judged by the eye; for a tea composed of large, coarse leaves, which is the product of high altitudes, is finer in flavor than the prettiest, most dainty-looking tea from the lower lands along the coast. Cup quality is the only true test; and experts of long experience the only reliable judges of true quality."

The Story Subdivided.

Obviously, you cannot put all that into any ad unless you are printing a booklet or price-list on teas. So you had better figure to run a series of tea ads about like this:

1. Blank's true Indian and Ceylon Tea is what you will like. Cured hygienically by machinery—no handling. Delicate flavor; but pungent, hence economical. Try at our risk; 70 cents a pound.

2. Blank's India-Ceylon Tea is not only true to name, but grown in highest altitudes where delicacy of flavor is developed. You'll like it—or "money back." 70c a pound—economical because extra strong.

3. All Teas from high altitudes are good—providing they are properly cured; but the more delicate leaves are best. Blank's India-Ceylon is such tea. You will say you never tasted such delicacy. Saving, too, because full-flavored and really cheap at 70c a pound.

4. Experts select Blank's India-Ceylon Tea and it costs us enough to warrant its unusual cup-quality. You take no risk—money back if it does not suit, and no charge for what you may have tried. 70c pound.

And thus you can go on, developing the subject, step by step. It all leads to education both of yourself and your customers, to the great advantage of all concerned. Soon you will have a reputation for fine teas—providing always that you are honest enough to really deserve the reputation, and if you are the right kind of a grocer, you will deserve it. Otherwise, as you surely know, you cannot deserve much of any success whether you advertise or not. Which is perhaps about the most valuable lesson of all.

Use Cards in the Window.

If the advertising to which you refer is window-dressing, then these directions will all be changed so far as your written "dope" is concerned; for here you can make up signs carrying the utmost detail, conveying all the information you like about the articles on display. Only here you will best subdivide your signs into a number of short, suggestive bits of information, each about one particular point concerning the character, or treatment, or growth, and curing of the article, so the reader will not be discouraged by the apparent length of any one sign, but will be led to read first one, then another, and thus absorb your entire message unconsciously.

Verily, this matter of advertising is the most exhaustive of all the special studies we must make to properly develop our business to its full possibilities.

Summer Advertising That Gets Results

Value of Giving Hot Weather Holiday Hints Through Columns of Newspaper—An Ad. That Brought Splendid Results to a Vancouver Dealer—The Use of Rules.

Everyone has heard the reason why the hen's egg is more popular than the duck's. When the hen surrenders her egg she cackles over the feat. She announces it to all within hearing distance But when the duck sets down her blue shelled burden, she simply waddles off as if nothing momentous had happened. In other words the hen advertises and the duck doesn't.

The moral from this little illustration from the bird-world is that the man who has something to sell, must announce the fact to prospective purchasers if he wishes to dispose of it quickly. He must advertise in some form or other. It is an impossibility to sell an article unless someone else knows you have it or are likely to have it.

Hot Weather Hints

E. C. Matthews

257 Parliament Street

A timely ad., with a good heading. Reduced from double column.

To the folks who are prospective buyers, but who do not visit the stores frequently, the best means of advertising in the average town or city is the daily and weekly newspaper. That it pays the advertiser is beyond contradiction, if—notice the if—the dealer uses good, sound judgment and common sense in his advertising.

Right Copy Gets Business.

In a letter received by The Grocer the other day containing copy of an advertisement the dealer wrote: "This ad. certainly got us business to-day. Kindly return it for our file."

This is but one of many expressions of the value of newspaper publicity. The great reason why some dealers do not get returns is because of the nature of their copy and its setting.

As with dry goods and hardware, grocery advertising must be seasonable to attract the greatest attention. Advertising window screens or ice cream freezers in mid-winer is waste of money. The same applies to summer drinks. But reverse the order and give them publicity in the hot season, good results can be obtained with the proper copy.

The ad. of E. C. Matthews, Toronto, reproduced on this page exemplifies timely advertising. Nothing is required more just now than "Hot Weather Hints." The ad. includes references to such goods as pork and beans, sardines, canned herring and finnan haddie, jelly powder, lemonade and orangeade, etc., catsup, Worcester sauce, coffee essence, maple butter and a recipe for iced tea.

The heading of this advertisement could not well be improved on for appropriateness. Criticism, however, might be made of the way it was set up by the printer. Had smaller type been used it could have all been set in one line so that the sub-head, "just the goods you need for the hot weather—and save fuel," would have had more room. White space is always a good feature about any ad., but it should be properly used. In this case it is not. In an ad. where prices are quoted, the usual custom is to have them in a blacker type than name of article. This makes them stand out prominently and leads a reader to the belief that the dealer is not afraid of his prices being too high for the quality of the goods. The recipe is a splendid feature of the ad. It should insure it being clipped out by some housewife and saved for reference.

Good Dominion Day Ad.

It was T. F. McDowell, one of Vancouver's modern merchants, who is quoted above as getting good business from the ad. enclosed. It is herewith reproduced in diminished size. The heading is certainly sufficiently attractive to catch the attention of readers. They are asked to prepare for Dominion Day at McDowell's grocery. A number of timely suggestions follow for the lunch basket, such as cooked chicken (Mr. McDowell makes a specialty of poultry the year round), cooked ham veal loaf, cooked and tongue, pickles, vegetables for salads and fruits. Few better lines could be suggested, and no wonder the advertisement brought results when hundreds of people were figuring out what that lunch basket should include.

The last half of the ad. talks to those who "remain at home" on the holiday and includes suggestions in poultry, fish, pickles, sardines, lime juice and cooking bags. This ad. includes lines that naturally will be asked for once the consumer has his or her attention called to them.

It might be stated in criticism that rules are fast disappearing from all kinds of advertising. If the rules were

We were proud of our accomplishments at that time, as we served re in parts of Illinois, Michigan, Indiana, Wisconsin, Minnesota and Io shown by the map in the small circle on the upper right.

We increased our field of usefulness as we learned by experience. We began our business in a small building and not very long ago moved into the great structure which now houses a part of our activities.

At first, we were jobbers only. But we discovered the impossibility of securing uniformity and high quality in many lines and were forced to manufacture as well as job.

It was the idea of providing retailers—and through them consumers—with the best to be obtained at any price, that gave birth to Richelieu, Ferndell and Batavia brands.

Market Rising in Jams and Preserves

Both English and Canadian Brands Higher Than Year Ago—Prices Expected Soon on New Peas—Sugar Market a Little Weaker—Firm Situation in Most Spices—Salmon Expected to be High.

QUEBEC MARKETS.

POINTERS—

Sugar.—Steady.

Valencia Raisins—Down.

Tea.—Firm.

Canned Strawberries.—Advanced.

Montreal, July 25.—Midsummer trade is good and country orders are better than expected at this time of year as farmers are busy in the field. Collections are also reported better and wholesalers have not had to give as much time for the past month as in the earlier part of the year.

Canned strawberries have advanced to $2.40, which is rather startling news as the opening prices have only been announced at $2.15. The shortage in crop has no doubt brought about this 25-cent. increase.

As reported earlier in season the crop of new maple syrup was disappointing and prices are now advancing. Price lists showing the amount of advance will soon be circulated.

SUGAR.—The present firmness in raw market is due literally to speculation in London, and the sudden advance of two shillings followed by a reaction of one shilling shows just what speculation will do. The pretence for the rise was that a few more days of drought might cause damage to the growing European beet crop.

On the average the crop looks good and there is no cause for any alarm. The business passing locally is large and prices are steady.

SYRUP AND MOLASSES...Molasses trade is satisfactory for the season and is still remaining among the few cheap foodstuffs. It was estimated some time ago that the production of Barbados for this season would fall considerably behind last year's but it now happens that it is a couple of thousand puncheons ahead which will probably kill any possibility of immediate high prices.

DRIED FRUITS. — Nothing of unusual interest has developed lately but it is reported that some Oregon prunes are offering for October shipment from the coast at prices above those asked initially last year.

Apricots are still dull there being little activity owing to fact that it is generally agreed that bulk of the crop has been contracted for.

Currants are firmer in the primary market but there is no change in price. The latest advice from Europe states that weather continues fine but is rather too hot for the proper development of the grapes. It is believed that unless the country is favored with some rain the size of the crop will not even reach that of last year, which amounted to over 21,000 tons. The vines, however, are in a forward state and a good quality is anticpated.

Dates are in better demand, there being an unusual call for carton packed goods.

The market in Greece continues strong and it is estimated that old crop currants will be used up just about time that new fruit is moved out. The output has been estimated at not over last year's as some damage was done recently by storms. The local market is more active than usual and a fair business is passing.

It will be noticed that Valencia raisins have gone down owing to accumulation of stocks, the drop being an appreciable amount.

TEA.—Tea market is steady and the trade at present are buying for needs mostly.

Reports from London relative to qualities of teas offering are not favorable to Ceylon varieties—"the quality has shown a further decline and it would appear as though during the next month or two there will be a good deal of the less desirable sorts on offer." New crop Indian teas, though there is not a large amount offered so far, have sold at high prices. The quality is good, the leaf being carefully made so that the liquor shows more color than is usual in new season's Indian teas. Good Indian teas are in strong demand.

Considerable interest is also shown in Japans. which as previously reported are of a good quality.

COFFEE.—Trade seems to be getting back to the hand-to-mouth order again, there being little interest shown. It is claimed that the high price of coffee at present has given a good opening to producers of "fillers" and a large amount of business is reported as passing in the substitutes.

ONTARIO MARKETS.

POINTERS—

Jams.—Higher this year.

Strawberries.—Held at Premium.

White Pepper.—Firm.

Toronto, July 25.—Travelers for Ontario wholesale grocery houses are this week and next enjoying a well earned holiday. However, business is fair for season, a good volume of orders coming in by mail and telephone. General lines are in demand, picnic and summer goods coming in for steady call.

Movement of sugar is reported rather disappointing by some jobbers, reason assigned being that amount of fruits available for preserving purposes is relatively small. Stocks of sugar are acknowledged to be low.

Canned strawberries are held at a premium by some houses. Strawberry jam, both English and Canadian pack is higher this year than last.

SUGAR.—Sugar as far as quotations on refined are concerned has shown no change. The two shilling flurry in beet raws reported last week was followed by a reaction of about half that amount. Speculation was cause of advance, pretence for rise being that a few days of the dry weather noticed might possibly be continued until damage to crop became noticeable. There are various opinions expressed but confidence is not strong in the continuation of manipulation of markets for any length of time.

"There are different opinions," said one sugar man this week, "but I believe that while market may hold steady temporarily that there is easiness ahead."

Last year at this date sugar was $5.05 per cwt.

DRIED FRUITS.—There are no outstanding features to spot dried fruit trade. As usual at this time trade is quiet.

Interest is being directed to this year's goods. While it is a little early for accurate predictions on Valencia raisin crop, late reports have not been very reassuring. California raisins are ruling fairly steady. Quotations were slightly easier on future prunes at cost although growers in some sections continued firm holders at values above parity of present quotations.

TEA.—There is no material change in local situation in tea. London reports that quantities coming forward still continue to increase upon those of last year, the excess sent from Colombo to London having fully realized the estimate of 1,500,000 lbs., while a further increase of 2,750,000 lbs., is estimated for July. "With regards to future," says one report from London, "indications are that market will be firm for all good liquoring descriptions and producers of both Ceylon and Indian teas of character and flavor may look forward to a good average in prices."

COFFEE.—There is no change in local quotations on coffee but market continues steady. Trade is reported as normal. "We are not anxious for business and are getting a good deal more than we want," was the statement of one coffee man this week.

"Situation is getting no better. In fact it is getting worse. We cannot increase our price in accordance with increase we have to pay, so that we are making no money out of coffee."

It was asserted by one dealer that there was considerable unfair competition in branded coffees by manufacturers who refused to raise prices, maintaining old quotations by reducing quality. This was unfair to those firms who maintained quality as before.

SPICES.—Pickling spices are moving well in anticipation of pickling season. There is general steadiness present. This is perhaps most marked in white pepper, and cloves. One local dealer who has been holding white pepper at 26 to 29 is advancing it to 28 to 30 cents. He quotes nutmegs at 25 to 30 cents. Some fancy grades bring higer prices as for instance 60's sell at 45 cents per pound. Cream tartar market is steady while celery seed still holds at its record price.

RICE AND TAPIACO.—Rice being a good summer food has been finding a ready sale and advance in prices has apparently had little effect on checking consumption. Market continues steady. Although market in East is reported easier, it is pointed out by one jobber that prices here have not been increasing in same ratio as those at primary points.

CANNED GOODS.

TORONTO.— No further prices have been named on canned goods but those on early lines should soon be forthcoming. Strawberries which opened at $2.15, and on which delivery is only 60 per cent. are being held at a slight discount by some firms. One jobber quotes $2.25, pointing out small pack and fact that they have come on a bare market.

Prices that have been issued on jams this year are higher than last year. This is the case in both Canadian and English jams and particularly of strawberry, pack of which is small in both countries. For instance one English firm is delivering only 50 per cent. at 6 cents per dozen higher for 1's and 25c. dozen higher for 4's.

Canadian jams are also generally higher, one firm quoting strawberry in 1's at $2.30. In preserved fruits, one Ontario canner quotes strawberries at $3.60 as against $3.25 last year and raspberries at $3 as compared with $2.85 last year, while cherries are about the same.

New peas are on market and prices are expected soon. California asparagus pack has been completed and prices are slightly lower than last year. "They are lowest in eight years," said one jobber, "and tips that we charged $3 for last year, we are now selling at $2.40." Another dealer stated that brand he sold was only about 5 cents per dozen lower.

Salmon prices are expected by end of month but so far there has been little information forthcoming as to run or pack. However, this is a lean year and pack is not expected to be large and general opinion along the street is that prices will be above last year's opening figure, which were themselves exceedingly high. One dealer thought pinks might rule about the same.

There is a temporary scarcity in pint catsup reported by a number of jobbers.

Jams.—New season's coming in.

Winnipeg, July 24.—A great number of retail merchants from country points have been visitors to city during exhibition, and it is admitted that the aggregate of business done since the fair opened has been large. Consumptive demand throughout country promises to be large when crop now ripening is on the market.

Weather continues most favorable for harvesting of crops and Western Canada stands to gather in an average crop of above average quality.

Eastern canners are now announcing opening prices of strawberry and raspberry jams, 72 cents per 5-lb. pail being price quoted. Canners announce opening prices of strawberries in heavy syrup at from $4.58 to $4.63 per case.

SUGAR. — Sugar market in New York is reported firmer. There is as yet, however no change in local markets. Demand is brisk as the wild fruit crop now being gathered is exceptionally heavy. Preserving fruits of all kinds are expected to be plentiful and cheap.

NEW BRUNSWICK MARKETS.

St. John, July 24.—Fine weather last week proved material aid to sales with local grocers, and there was a particularly heavy run upon camper's supplies and outing lines. Through the city the business kept up well, but in country districts farmers are beginning their haying which as usual, means a slackening of business for a while.

Sugar market at present bears watching. According to local advices there are prospects of an extraordinarily large beet crop in Europe, but beet values are up and there has been an advance of raws in New York of 15 cents, while refined stocks have gone up 10 cents. Nevertheless, local dealers say sugar will be lower in another fortnight unless something unforseen happens in market. Molasses remains high, but there has been no increase of late, and still no lowering. Reports several months ago from Barbadoes were to effect that stocks there were completely exhausted, and this sent up the prices, although now it appears as if there had been no occasion for fear, for St. John merchants have been informed that there are several thousand more puncheons than was at first estimated.

For some time there has been no move in the flour market and advices are that prospects for a large North-western crop are particularly encouraging. The weather is only essential. St. John merchants are fairly well stocked, and at present outlook is that there may be a decline, especially if fine weather prevails in West.

THE TOP LAYER GOOD.

It is said that the Department of Trade and Commerce will probably take action against certain Canadian dried apple shippers based on complaints received from the Old Country. The nature of the complaints are that dried apples marked "fancy evaporated" have been found to contain seeds and cores below the top layer, which consisted of high-class product.

A RECIPE FOR ICED TEA.

This is the season when iced tea is a favorite beverage. Dealers should not fail to mention it to their customers. Here is a recipe:—

Make tea in the usual way; bring it on the table as if to serve hot. Have the ice cut in chunks large enough to half fill an ordinary glass and pour tea over the ice.

This reduces the strength of the tea and makes a delicious drink. A little piece of lemon added is also popular with iced tea drinkers.

GETTING OVER THE LAW.

Chicago has an anti-noise law which prohibits peddlers from crying their wares on the street. So now instead of "Whoa, Dobbin!" one, it is related, hears instead, "Whoa, Cabbages!" Whoa, Potatoes-" or "Whoa, Banano."

A policeman who mildy suggested to a Greek that he was breaking the law was met with this scornful reply, "I breaka no da law. My horse's name he Banano."

PROGRESS OF MILLING MERGER.

Toronto, July 25.—Of late, according to a number of local grain and flour men, the probability of proposed merger of Western Ontario flour mills becoming a reality, appears more bright.

A Milverton, Ont., man is at the head of the proposition, and there are some 62 small mills west and north of Toronto to be included in the amalgamation. They average about 100 barrels a day, so that the merger, if completed, will have a capacity of about 6,000 barrels.

A committee of five men engaged in the grain and flour trade is now traveling about the province valuing the various mills it is proposed to include in the merger. The promoters, who have English capital behind them, are offering those mills which join them 40 per cent. in cash and the balance in bonds of the new company.

The regulation of prices, which at present are irregular, especially for by-products, is one of the principal things aimed at. The new scheme is also expected by the promoters to make for a reduction in cost of operation, eliminating overlapping. Under the present system, they claim, millers are shipping their products past each other's doors. Under the new plan each mill will be alloted a certain territory.

When a new obstacle arises, don't give up in dismay simply because you have never before met that particular trouble. It will probably prove no worse than others.

GROCERS AT NIAGARA.

(Concluded from page 29)

for the occasion and to see the victim carried bleeding from the field of battle by sorrowing friends, was a ghastly sight. And just to make it appear more real some one uncorked a bottle of red ink on Uncle Sam's wound. As a result there is likely to be a suit in court in the near future against Dave Bell for the price of a new shirt.

Aunt Sally Hard to Beat.

Billy Miller wasn't very badly killed. Not even an automobile could do the trick. He got up and ran away with the second prize in the novelty race in which Fred. Thorne came first in Aunt Sally Array while R. Davies was accorded third.

Prepared for Preserving Season.

There were many races in which, grocers, travelers, wholesalers, grocer's wives and children all had a chance to show their fleetness of foot. R. Davies carried home the bacon, or rather a box of sugar in the 100 yard event for grocers. Even then the Maid of the Mist made three trips while he was completing the last 50 yards. S. W. Hall, R. Mathews, and L. Canfield followed in succession in time to catch the last boat home.

The order of the winners in the ¼-mile stampede over a route varying from 100 yards upward according to which trees the racers selected as turning posts was R. Mathews, S. W. Hall, J. H. Drumn and R. Davies. Several other grocers were also-rans in this event.

T. Harding, in the traveler's race, came in like the hired man going to lunch and carried off first prize.

SPRAYS FROM THE FALLS.

The weighing contest judged on accuracy and time was an important event. D. McLean carried off first honors, J. Blood, second, and Eva Bigley third .

It was a pretty hot day, but still Snow was present. Bailey always is.

The drivers are some sprinters. In their event S. Dallmore came first, W. Watkins second, and C. Call third.

Hall would have won in the three-legged race only he was anchored to a partner who had a gait like a can of worms.

D. W. Clark was starter; Wm. Miller was the megaphone artist, while J. S. Bond, D. McLean, N. Carmichael and H. G. McDonald made competent judges.

"All the nice girls love a copper," sang Wes Williams while decked in his police regalia. His score card shows he arrested one boy unassisted.

Summer Quietness in Flour and Cereals

Housewives Do No More Baking Than Necessary During Warm Weather—With New Wheat Crop Near Retailers Pursue Hand to Mouth Policy—Easier Tone to Oat Market.

The usual summer quietness is present in both flour and cereal trade. With warm weather ruling, there is naturally a somewhat reduced demand for these lines through the medium of the grocer and new crops looming up not far ahead is another factor which works for hand-to-mouth business.

A few weeks ago, it will be remembered, flour was advanced throughout Western Canada by several mills, by amount of 20 cents per barrel. Prices have since been reduced to former level, partly because of non-agreement of other mills and partly on account of wheat situation.

Demand for flour not only for export but domestic consumption as well is rather inclined to quietness. Housewives at this time of year are doing no more baking than is really necessary. Again in some parts of the country, merchants are said to be carrying considerable flour purchased during spring in order to get bran and shorts. This was done to such an extent that one case is cited in which a retail dealer has no less than 22 different brands of flour in stock at present moment purchased in this way. He surely should be in a position to satisfy everybody.

All sorts of stories are being trotted out into the wheat arena by bulls and bears and market fluctuates considerably. Black rust reported in West sent Chicago up 2½ cents on Tuesday. There was also a report of appearance of Hessian fly in Manitoba. However, so far, conditions point to a good average crop of fair quality in Canadian West if conditions continue favorable.

Regarding rolled oats, there is a little easier feeling. Oatmeal for export has recently been reduced about one shilling a sack but exporters apparently are badly in need of business just now. Winnipeg July oats which were 45c on June 17 are now 38½ indicating an easier feeling although it must be remembered that stocks at Fort William fall below those of a year ago.

MONTREAL.

FLOUR.—Cables have been received frequently for new crop spring wheat flour but little business has been transacted as prices were not attractive enough to induce millers to make contracts. There is a great demand both from local and country sources. The market is steady with prices unchanged.

TORONTO.

FLOUR.—There has been no change in flour prices and market is rather listless both in regard to export and domestic trade. Retailers appear to be carrying as heavy stocks as they care to so close to a new crop. What demand there is, is for immediate requirements only.

Ontario flours continue quiet and unchanged. As was pointed out some time ago there was a great deal of winter wheat winter-killed but recent rains and nice cool weather has helped it wonderfully making nice plump heads so that quality should generally be good.

One local miller declared that new winter wheat flour would have to come on market at lower rate if any business is to be done. "Ontario wheat 90 cents before we see daylight," he declared. He expects to see a rush to market new wheat as farmers' finances are low.

CEREALS.—In rolled oats, there is a little easier tone to raw market, but just how much it affects finished product, there is a difference of opinion. Some hold that it may affect rolled oats quotations while others would not wish to predict that. However as natural during warm weather trade is rather quiet and proceeding on a hand to mouth basis.

MILL FEEDS. — During past week bran took on a firmer feeling and sold up to $22 per ton, an advance of $1. Heavy export demand is assigned as a cause. Shorts still hold at $26. Both lines are far from plentiful.

WINNIPEG.

FLOUR AND CEREALS.The market is weak both in rolled oats and flour and reductions may be look for. Some mills have already reduced rolled oats 10 cents per sack and flour 10 cents per cwt. An adjustment of prices in conformity with wheat and oat cash prices is only a matter of a few days.

A good selling fruit and vegetable arrangement in the store of A. Grenier, Quebec City.

Selling More to the Inside Customer

Efforts of Every Dealer Should be to Get Customers Who Come to the Store to Purchase Goods Displayed—An Interior Display of Fruits and Vegetables is Shown by Quebec Grocer—Not Enough Good Interior Arrangement Made.

One does not have to look far afield to account for the popularity of the interiors of some stores. It's all in the display arrangement. There are grocers who have the power to make "inside" customers purchase goods they had not come to buy.

It is a peculiar fact that few dealers know how to make a fruit display inside the store; or if they do know how, they lack incentive to arrange one. It's well to remember that during the summer months fruits and vegetables are strong attractors of trade. They should be shown in the window continually as well as in the store, and instead of the usual promiscuous piling the interior display should be systematically arranged.

Turning Space Into Money.

On the size of the store depends usually the nature and attractiveness of the showing. No large floor should be allowed to go to waste. After plenty of room has been allotted for customers, surplus space should be utilized in showing stock.

A. Grenier, a large Quebec city grocer, takes full advantage of the fact that people buy more readily what they see displayed, and displayed attractively. The accompanying illustration proves this. In fact it is seldom one runs across any more enticing arrangement of fruit than is shown here. It should both secure and hold the attention of women bent on purchasing fruits and vegetables so appetizing to the family during the spring and summer months.

How Display Was Arranged.

A couple of tables of different heights were erected so that the display would take the form of an incline arrangement. In the top-centre may be seen a hamper of green beans flanked by tall heads of celery. A row of pineapples runs in front of that; then come three pyramid piles of oranges, four bunches of asparagus, between which are bunches of radishes.

Tipped sideways against the top table and resting on the second are four or five small baskets of tomatoes with the tissue paper coverings off a few, and squash and cucumbers in front.

From the lower table to the floor on a low platform may be seen a row of berries, followed by radish, beets, cauliflower, etc., with a row of pines on the floor to hide the edge of the platform. On a piece of paper on the lower front of the display is a bunch of large English grapes.

One of the pleasing features of this display is its symmetrical arrangement. This is the principal part of almost every good display, and in a fruit and vegetable window should always be adhered to if best effect is to be secured.

While some dealers might not be able to make such a large showing in the store, this same arrangement could be reproduced in almost any window.

Looking past the fruit and vegetable display, it will be observed that Mr. Grenier's store is in the modern class. It bespeaks care in arrangement, cleanliness and, capability in the giving of adequate service.

Home Grown Goods Now in Prominence

With Larger Canadian Supplies Imported Goods are Being Overshadowed—Stiff Front to Lemon Market—New Potatoes Take on Temporarily Firmer Tone—Strawberry Season at an End.

With exception of lemons and oranges imported fruits and vegetables are being gradually overshadowed by home grown which have for past month been increasing in variety and supply. Latest imported article to be displaced by Canadian grown is tomatoes, shipments from across the line having come to an end. We are, however, importing a considerable quantity of peaches, plums and pears which are selling readily for table use.

Weather is the ruling force in the lemon market. If it had not been that cooler weather which set in last week put somewhat of a crimp in demand for this line, it is probable that prices at several centres would have made a shot upward, temporarily at least. As it is, market generally presents a strong front, primary markets showing an advance of about two shillings with 300's particularly hard to get. Verdelli are only line offering now. One shipper in a letter regretting inability to ship immediately adds, "Prospects are that market will go still higher and that there will not be more than needed for some time to come." This is one opinion of the future. As pointed out before much depends on the weather.

Beginning of this week found a firmer tone to new potatoes. This is due to finishing up of Virginia crop while New Jersey has not really got under way. However, when shipments begin to increase, easiness can again be expected to set in. While Canadian yield is increasing, it has not yet become a factor in market but will shortly.

Strawberry season has again passed into history. Raspberries continue to come along and will for a week or so yet; but prices still hold at a high level. Nor can they be expected to be cheap this year as the crop is below normal. In many sections this is considered the best week for raspberries. A good trade is being done in ordinary preserving cherries.

MONTREAL.

GREEN FRUITS. — Prices have remained steadier this week than for some time back, but the demand for all lines is just as good. Lemons may take a jump if present scarcity conditions prevail while pineapples may also be seen a little higher. Grape fruit is in better demand from the retail trade.

VEGETABLES.—The Canadian vegetables now on the market are giving complete satisfaction and the demand seems to be larger. Cucumbers, as is natural at this time are moving well while cabbage and cauliflower are also well looked after. Egyptian onions are becoming scarce but the Spanish shipments will soon be to hand and will relieve the situation.

GREEN FRUITS. — A good general trade is being done in fruits at present time, home grown goods gradually taking position of prominence. Strawberries are once more a dead issue and attention is now being given to raspberries which maintain quite a firm tone for reasons which have been pointed out before. This is the best week for them in minds of many dealers. They will probably last for week or so more.

Cooler weather that set in somewhat slackened demand for lemons but it is still appreciable. Tendency in primary market is upward with scarcity in 300's. Steady tone exists here with as high as $5.50 being asked by some firms. Stocks consist only of Verdelli now.

Peaches, plums, pears and muskmelons from across the line are moving well at present time as are also water melons.

Black and white eating cherries are less plentiful and some grades bring as high as $1.75. There is a good quantity of ordinary preserving cherries coming along. Harvest apples are selling at $1.50 per bushel.

VEGETABLES.— Cucumbers followed prediction of last week and are cheaper at $1 to $1.10 per basket. Tomatoes have not weakened to any extent, but there is nothing but Canadian stock coming along.

New potatoes were firmer this week selling as high as $3.75 per barrel at beginning of week, due to closing up of one section while other producing sections have not got well under way. New stock are now overshadowing old potatoes which are dragging slowly.

Cabbage is easier, there being a good sale for hampers at 80 to $1. United States onions in 70 pound bags are selling at $1.25. Egyptian onions are well to an end. New crop Spanish will shortly be arriving.

Usual Summer Fish Business Present

Running Along in Even Lines as Usual at This Season — Warm Weather Not Conducive to Trade — Business Mostly Confined to Fresh Varieties.

The usual summer volume of business is being done in fish. Of course warm weather is not conducive to trade as it is more difficult under higher temperature to handle fish and maintain quality at a proper standard. Still in spite of this fact, a fair trade for season is being done. It is comprised mostly of fresh varieties with halibut, trout and whitefish among the prominent lines.

Nova Scotia reports fresh fish scarce on inshore grounds but more plentiful off shore. Welcome news by lobster packers is that new French law regarding marking of canned lobsters does not pertain to this year's pack, so that they are now beginning to ship to French markets.

QUEBEC.

MONTREAL.—There are already inquiries for pickled and salted fish but so far no prices have been given. The feeling, however, is that the prices will be a little lower than anticipated. Codfish is a better supply so far than was generally expected and the fact that the foreign markets are slow to take up dried cod will have a tendency to depress the prices on all kinds of boneless, skinless, stripped, shredded and all lines of fish where cut fish is the raw material.

A good local trade is passing prices being unchanged.

TORONTO.—Usual summer business in fish is in evidence. Warm weather of course hampers trade making it more difficult to handle stock but weather of past week has been somewhat more favorable in this regard.

Business is practically all in fresh varieties. Smoked fish are difficult to handle and Toronto wholesalers have given them little or no attention of late.

NOVA SCOTIA.

HALIFAX. — There is little activity in local fish markets at present time. Movements of salt fish are small and demand from foreign markets is light

Salmon are more plentiful now than they have been for some time. Most of the fish are being cured and they will be smoked and marketed later. Some small catches of mackerel are being made along the coast but most of these fish are being marketed fresh. No salt mackerel are offering.

Nova Scotia lobster packers have received the good news that new French law regarding the marking of lobsters, will not interfere with this season's pack, and dealers are now sending forward their lobsters. Thousands of cases are now being sent to the French market.

Produce & Provisions

Speculation Firming Butter Market

Profits Made Last Year Tempt Many to Store Butter—Even Those Not Connected With Trade Speculating—Warm Weather Firms Egg Prices—Good Call for Smoked and Cooked Meats.

In spite of fact that pastures are generally good and that production of butter should be appreciable, and that butter values are above normal for season of year, market continues to maintain a stiff front. General steadiness is the rule while at some centres it has amounted to slightly higher quotations. While productions in some centres has fallen off to some extent, still we must seek elsewhere for a full explanation of present firm tendency with prices already high.

There is no doubt that speculation is playing no little part in the market, because there is no denying the fact that production is now exceeding consumption. While wholesale dealers are now laying up stores for future use, it seems that others besides them, tempted by the profits made by those who stored butter last year are entering into the game. Creameries in some instances are said to be putting away their own product in anticipation of fancy prices next winter while it was stated this week by a dealer that men not connected with the business in any way are speculating on butter.

A Toronto dealer referred to an easy side to market this week, in fact that a speculative price on New Zealand butter, the season for which commences in September, had been made which was equal to around 28 to 29 cents laid down in Toronto. However, no contracts are heard of in this direction.

Warm weather has to be held accountable for a firmer feeling in eggs causing not only a reduction in receipts, but a shrinkage that has much to do in firming prices. Especially receipts that arrive during real hot weather show considerable loss in process of candling.

While high temperature may be proving rather detrimental to eggs, on other hand it is proving a boon to provision business, causing an increased demand for smoked hams and bacon as well as cooked meats. These are lines that the retailer should push strongly now.

MONTREAL.

PROVISIONS.—A steady feeling prevails for practically all lines, the chief demand being for bacon and hams, and supplies of the latter are sufficient to fill all orders. Lard is a little firmer but prices are expected to remain at present level.

TORONTO.

PROVISIONS.—Most important feature to provision business continues to be the big demand for cooked and smoked meats. While past week has not been so conducive to this trade as earlier in July, still movement is appreciable.

This is not the big season of demand for lard. Some dealers note rather an easier tone, one firm quoting tierces at 13 cents flat.

BUTTER. — "Pastures are generally good and make should be large but still price of butter remains steady," stated one butter man this week who sought an explanation.

It is true that prices maintain quite a stiff front and no concessions are being made although prices are above normal for season. There is certainly more butter being made than consumed, so that speculation is in part at least accountable for present steady tone.

EGGS.—There is rather a firmer tone to eggs this week and quotations on new laid stock are ruling one cent higher at 24 to 26 cents per dozen. As has been pointed out before shrinkage is now considerable, and responsible for strength present in market. Hot weather is curtailing both production and consumption of eggs to some extent.

Displaying Samples of Cooked Meats

Georgetown Dealer Shows Them on Small Platter Near Front of Store—Claims This Display Brings Quite a Lot of Business —Utilizes Surplus Counter Space to Good Advantage—Screens Keep Flies From Windows.

Georgetown, Ont., July 25.—(Special).—Jno. McDermott, a local grocer is selling considerable cold meats these days. He is a strong believer in suggestion and this belief gets him business.

"The more goods one displays," he recently remarked, "the more will he sell."

On the counter near the door where every customer cannot fail but notice it, is a small sample display of cooked meats on a platter. The hot weather of the past month, co-operated strongly with this display to sell these goods.

Had there been no display sales would have been made, but not many. Most people associate meats with an exclusive butcher shop, and if their attention is not called to them in some way, they will probably go to the butcher shop for supplies.

Customers Must Know.

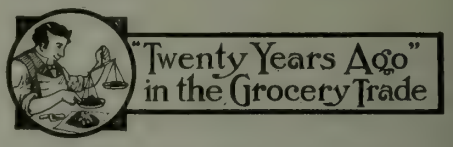
It is Mr. McDermott's opinion that, because he is continually impressing on the minds of customers that he carries cooked meats, he gets a lot of business in this summer line. Supplies are kept in the refrigerator to the rear of the store. This is a large, glass front cooler and is recognized as an invaluable equipment at this time of year.

As pointed out in last week's issue, several grocers use glass display refrigerators for showing perishable goods. Mr. McDermott is himself thinking over adding some such equipment which will not only keep these goods fresh, but display them to best advantage at the same time.

No Waste in Counter Space.

The same policy is carried out in this store with other goods. Where the front counters are not used for wrapping purposes, goods are shown on them. Usually it is just samples of some few lines stocked, which the customer might not ever think of asking for unless suggestions were made. They may include toilet soap, fancy meat sauces, handcleaner, etc. This utilization of surplus display space gets new business and the more it is utilized the greater the amount of these extra sales. Scores of other dealers will bear out the contention of Mr. McDermott in this regard.

The windows in this store are consistently dressed. It is this change of scenery and the attractiveness of display that makes them a power in selling. They are enclosed in the rear with wire screen which prevents the nauseating appearance of flies congregating on the foodstuffs. A door is located in the centre to permit of the passing through of goods when a change is being made.



"J. S. Bond, Gerrard street, Toronto, is one of the grocers east of Yonge street, who agreed to close on Wednesday afternoon, and Mr. Bond closes. In the example of competitors who also agreed to close on those afternoons, but who do not close, he has sufficient provocation to keep his store open on all afternoons, but he prefers principle to retataliation."

Editor's Note.—Mr. Bond is still in the retail grocery business on Gerrard street, and he sticks to principle just the same as twenty years ago.

The Hamilton grocers held their picnic on Wednesday of last week. It is quite a coincidence to find in our old files that the Hamilton grocers held their picnic twenty years ago on the same Wednesday. The chairman of the Picnic Committee was: B. Winnifrith, whose cut appears in the write up in the issue in question.

"The Canada Gazette announces that James Park, of Toronto; Chas. Blackwell, Lindsay; Andrew Park, Toronto; Susan Blackwell, Lindsay; Margaret Thompson Park, Toronto; and Thos. Blackwell, Lindsay, are seeking incorporation as Park, Blackwell & Co., to engage in pork packing in Toronto. The capital stock is placed at $50,000."

Editor's Note.—This company is still in business in Toronto, but not under the above name. A few months ago it joined in the amalgamation of packers now known as Matthews, Laing & Co.

The Travellers are Away for a Holiday

Every year about this time it is now the practice of the wholesale grocery trade of Ontario to take their travellers off the road for two weeks, thus enabling them to have a well earned rest, for although it may seem to some others that the travelling salesman is serving an occupation which is one continual semi-holiday, yet those who are familiar with the work know that on the contrary it is one continual laborious task to the man who is out after the business. In the early days of commercial travelling in this country such a thing as holidays for the men on the road was looked upon as a sort of absurdity, but the keen competition which has been developed since then has wiped out all feelings of this kind, and everybody now recognizes that the travelling salesman requires a holiday as much as do those connected with other branches of the business. This two weeks of travellers cessation from business puts a heavier load on the house, for the sales must which we hope will attract trade, and we solicit orders for any of the lines which you may be able to use to advantage.

DOUBLE YOUR SALES OF MARMALADE

Most of the marmalade that is sold is bought by those who come into the store and ask for it. A little creative salesmanship would easily double the sales of marmalade.

For instance you could double your sales of by instructing your salesman to tactfully suggest to customers that Shirriff's Scotch Marmalade is very appetizing, delicious and healthful. That it is made of selected Seville oranges and best granulated sugar. And has the keen, stimulating tang of the bitter Seville orange blended most deliciously with he sweet of the granulated sugar.

They could suggest that Shirriff's marmalade spread on toast or crisp soda crackers tastes very good at breakfast. And some people enjoy it spread on hot biscuits. Others with pancakes.

They could suggest, too, that marmalade steam puddings, marmalade pies and marmalade tarts are delightful.

Just try the above suggestions and see how quickly you will double your sales of Shirriff's Marmalade. It's to your profit to do so.

PICKLES

There is a certain amount of risk in buying bottled pickles. The moral is:—"Buy by the name."

All brands of pickles look very much alike to the ordinary grocer. Safeguard your stock by getting Rowat's Pickles. The name is widely and favorably known among the particular housewives of your trade.

FACTS

YOU SHOULD KNOW ABOUT

"KOFFIO"

THE NEW [illegible]ER

L C Harkness (D H)
34 Royal Bank Bldg

MR. ROASTER

Don't

MAKE THE MISTAKE of comparing "KOFFIO" with other fillers you have used —IT'S DIFFERENT.

IN THE FIRST [illegible]CE—"KOFFIO" IS NOT a BY-PRODUCT or OFFAL, [illegible] finished article scientifically manufactured under a special pate[illegible]rocess and made expressly for the purpose for which it is used—

IN THE SECOND PLACE—IT DRAWS LIKE COFFEE

KOFFIO is used in most cases in proportions varying from 10 to 30%, in many cases as high as 50%, and some concerns specializing on low priced coffee-compounds, use as high as 80% and obtain satisfactory results.

YOU CAN use double the quantity of "KOFFIO" over any other filler without great apparent change in color, weight, taste, or aroma from straight coffee.

So, YOU CAN greatly reduce costs and at the same time supply the consumer an eminently satisfactory food-beverage.

YOU CAN buy "KOFFIO" in quantities (thereby securing the minimum price) and store same without fear of deterioration from age, dampness or vermin.

YOU CAN'T pot spoil "KOFFIO." Boil it three minutes and it's good. Boil it three hours and it's just as good—but no better.

TWO OF THE LARGEST COFFEE HOUSES IN CANADA ARE USING "KOFFIO" IN CARLOAD LOTS. ITS LIBERAL USE WILL permit you to secure Institution, Hotel, Restaurant, Mining and Construction Commissary business at a good profit.

"KOFFIO" has distinctive neutralizing properties which will turn strong Mexicans and like types into a highly palatable cup.

"KOFFIO" is made in three styles: Type No. 1 is a light color, medium granule; Type No. 2 is a dark color, fine granule; Type No. 3 is extremely dark color, and both coarse and fine granule. The latter makes a very dark cup, and has a fine body, strong taste, flavor and aroma. (So far our Canadian customers have been strongly in favor of Type No. 3.)

The price of each type is the same, the different colors being made entirely for the accommodation of different taste in the trade.

We are represented in Canada by two reliable brokerage concerns, and carry local stocks in Winnipeg and Montreal, from which practically immediate shipment at minimum price can be made.

Houses East of Manitoba should address for samples, quotations, literature and full information,

It is almost beyond human power to keep milk of the dairy in a perfectly fresh state for a day—that is why LAURENTIA MILK is exceedingly popular just now.

Absolutely fresh milk is put through the process of homogenization, which thoroughly mixes the cream and milk so that it can never be separated again and the cream will not rise to the surface. Then the milk is sterilized in air-tight bottles, rendering it free from all bacteria and germ life. Interior view of a retail grocery store located at Athabasca Landing, Alberta. Until recently, goods had to be shipped there by wagon from Edmonton, a distance of a hundred miles.

A Fine Retail Store in the Far North

Located in Alberta a Hundred Miles Beyond Edmonton—Only Recently That It Received Railway Communication—Sells Goods Within The Arctic Circle—Number of Modern Fixtures and Splendid Shelf Arrangement.

Looking at the photograph of the above grocery store, one would scarcely think of hazarding the guess that it is located 100 miles north of Edmonton Alta., or 500 miles nearer the north pole than the international boundary between Canada and the United States.

But such is the case. It represents the grocery department of the Athabasca Grain and Produce Co., of Athabasca Landing. Athabasca Landing is located on the Athabasca river, and while not very large just now, is destined to become an important centre in the near future. Probably the present population would number around 500 or 600 souls.

Wagon Route From Edmonton.

The appearance of this store interior is also the more commendable inasmuch as the stock and fixtures, until recently, had to be transported from Edmonton by wagon route, a distance as above mentioned of a hundred miles. Within the past three months, however, that territory has been invaded by the Canadian Northern Railway, which runs up to Athabasca Landing, and which may likely branch out into the famous Peace River district.

In Business Two Years.

It was at the Landing that the Athabasca Grain and Produce Co. began business about two years ago. Since that time emigration into that district has increased rapidly and the company now tranship goods by water and wagon route to three hundred miles north of their headquarters.

With the co-operation of this firm the goods of many eastern manufacturers are being sold within the Arctic Circle in Central Western Canada.

Feature Confectionery.

A look at the illustration will show among the fixtures a computing scale, a large silent salesman, quarter-cut oak counter, metal ceiling and a neat soap display rack against the pillar. The silent salesman is given up to confectionery and biscuit illustrating the importance placed by this northern firm on the value of stocking and displaying this line effectively.

A glance at the shelving shows neatness and cleanliness. In fact the arrangement of goods on the shelves is much superior to that in many stores in modern eastern towns and cities. Yet here is a store away up in the centre of Alberta, five hundred miles north of the 49 parallel of north latitude with a modern big city appearance. It illustrates the progressive spirit of Western enterprise.

Retailer as Path-Finder.

Such stores as these in new districts exemplify strongly the importance of the retailer in building up communities. Take the retail stores away from Athabasca Landing and a considerable quantity of its vitality is gone. The retail merchant is certainly the pioneer in the opening up of a new country, and he is an absolute necessity in its progress. Up-to-date stores are required to keep out mail-order competition. People will begin to send away for goods which they want and cannot get at home. It remains for the retailer to prevent this occurring in the first place. If he can do this he spares himself a good deal of energy later on attempting to "cure the disease."

The Retailer is Not the Beneficiary

Farm Products Have Advanced to Consumer in Recent Years, But Merchants Have Lost Rather Than Gained—Intimation of a Farm Paper, Which Evidently Has Not Studied Question—How Rentals, Wages and Cost of Business Have Gone Up.

That the "middlemen" are getting a greater percentage of the increase in the cost to the consumer of farm food products, is the contention of a farm journal, which evidently has not given more than a superficial study to the problem. In a recent editorial, Canadian Farm, the paper in question, made the following statement:—

> But, all said and done, it cannot be shown that even at present high prices for food products in our towns and cities, the farmer is getting any more than he is justly entitled to. While prices to the consumer may have advanced 40 to 50 per cent., as compared with a few years back, the price the farmer gets, averaging all things up, has not advanced more than 20 to 25 per cent. Who, then, gets this increased price? Many of our correspondents say it is the middlemen, the men who buy from the farmer, and who handle and care for the product until it reaches the consumer. While the cost of handling all kinds of produce has materially increased in recent years, we do not think this extra cost is sufficient to account for the difference between the increased price the farmer gets as compared with a few years ago, and the increase in cost to the consumer. In other words, the middlemen are getting more than they are entitled to of the increase in the cost of food products in recent years.

Does Not Get Down to Facts.

It will be noted that Canadian Farm does not show, in facts and figures, that farmers are not getting their share of the increase in cost of farm goods to the consumer. Nor does it prove that the "middlemen"—that vague term so often used nowadays by newspapers—are getting more than they are entitled to. If the "middleman" means the retail dealer—and the retail dealer is the man who sells to the consumer—it will require some figuring to prove he is getting more than his share of the increase in prices referred to.

Gross Margin Usually Fixed.

In the case of such articles as butter, eggs, bacon, etc., it must first be remembered that a retail dealer can, in majority of cases, only secure a certain margin per pound or dozen, as the case may be, no matter how much he has to pay for the goods.

For instance, if eggs cost him 22 cents per dozen, he sells them at an advance of 3 or 4 cents. If at 26c he makes a gross profit of 4 cents, or about 15½ per cent. But if eggs cost him 26 cents he cannot sell them for more than 30—a margin of 4 cents—reducing his gross profit to 13 1-3 per cent. If cost is 30 cents and selling price 34, the gross profit is further reduced to less than 12 per cent.

The same applies to butter, lard, bacon and other farm products used every day in the home.

A Comparison of Prices.

The following comparison shows what the retail dealer has had to pay on August 1, Toronto market basis, for produce and provisions during the past 6 years:—

	1907.	1908.	1909.	1910.	1911.	1912.
Butter, creamery prints ..	22 —23	24 —25	23 —24	23 —24	24—25	27 —29
Bacon, breakfast	15½—16	14½—15	16 —17	20	16—18	17 —18
Cheese, large, new	11¾	12¾—13	12¼—12½	14	13	14 —14¼
Eggs, doz., new laid	18	24	22	21 —22	18—20	24 —26
Lard, tierces, pure	12½	12	14¼	14¾	10—10¼	13½

It will be observed from this table that the retail grocer is now paying from 5 to 6 cents more for butter than in 1907; he is paying from 1½ to 2 cents more for breakfast bacon; almost 3 cents more for cheese; 6 to 8 cents more for new laid eggs, and a cent more for lard.

Gross Profit Percentage Declines.

When a retailer sold butter in August, 1907, at 27 cents, which cost him 23, he was making a gross margin of 4 cents, or about 15 per cent. gross profit. For how much must he sell butter now which costs him 29 cents, to make the same profit? The answer is 100-85 of 29, or 34 cents and a fraction. But the dealer cannot get that price; neither can he sell as much butter. When butter advances there is too much competition for him to increase his price to maintain a certain percentage of gross profit—and he loses.

Increase in Rents and Wages.

Look at it from another angle. In 1907 best butter was 23 cents. To-day it is 29. This represents an increase of about 26 per cent. It has already been shown that, as far as the retailer is concerned, he has lost rather than remained even, not to speak of gaining on the increase in prices of farm products.

Let us ask the farm paper these questions: (1) Does the retailer pay more rent now than he did in 1907 or 1908? If so, how much.

(2) Have wages to employes increased or decreased, and how much?

(3) Has general cost of living to him and his family changed?

(4) Is expense of handling farm products more or less, and how much?

Advances in New Brunswick.

During the past couple of weeks The Grocer got in touch with representative dealers in different parts of the country and obtained the following information:

In St. John, N. B., rentals in last three or four years have increased 25 per cent. Increase in wages has been 40 per cent. The cost of living to the merchant has gone up 30 per cent., and expense in handling farm products had advanced 40 per cent.

In the city of Quebec rents are higher by 25, 35, and in some cases 50 per cent. Wages have gone up about 50 per cent., the cost of living 25 per cent., and expense in handling farm products 25 per cent.

Difficult to Raise Margin.

The experience of a dealer on the main street in Peterborough is that rents have increased a third, wages the same, and the cost of living has doubled.

"When butter was purchased for 16 an 17 cents a few years ago," states this dealer, "it would sell for 20; now if we pay 22 cents, we can only sell it for 25. In the past spring we paid 30 cents, and sold it for 33; 33 for 36, and 35 for 38."

This shows a decline in profits as follows:—15, 12, 9, 8½ and 7¾ per cent.

"When eggs were 10 cents, we sold them for 13; now we pay 20 and sell for 23, and in the winter when they are high, we often do not get the 3 cent margin. "A few years ago we would buy potatoes for 40 and 50 cents, and sell them from 60 to 70c per bag. This spring they cost us $1.80 to $1.90, and we had to sell them at $2.00. Everything else is on the same line. We believe profits on farm products are almost half as much as some years ago—while our outlay is double our margin of profits remains the same."

A Chatham, Ont., retailer claims rents are up 25 per cent., wages nearly 50 per cent., and that cost of doing business generally has increased quite 25 per cent. in recent years, thus bearing out what the others have claimed.

In the business centre of Hamilton, Ont., according to a large dealer, rents have advanced in recent years from 50 to 100 per cent. Under present conditions this dealer claims the cost of living to the merchant has gone up from 25 to 40 per cent.

What has been presented above are facts, not mere statements. Canadian Farm is in error if it means to insinuate that the retail grocer selling farm products to the consumer is getting the big end of the deal. Competition is too keen for that.

What surprises one most who studies the question, is the insinuating remarks made by many of our Canadian daily newspapers against the retailer. Under the slightest provocation they will accuse the retailer with charging extortionate profits, whereas the retailer is not fair to himself in not marking up his goods in comparison to the increase in his expense of doing business.

Montreal Grocers Enjoy Splendid Outing

Valleyfield Was the Rendezvous This Year—Were Royally Entertained There—Sprinting Events Keenly Contested—The Banquet Proved a Popular Part of the Proceedings — Sidelights on the Day.

Staff Correspondence.

Montreal, Aug. 1. — Jupiter Pluvius seems to have some regard for the Montreal grocers and their clerks, as he has seldom marred any of their outtrips. At Valleyfield on Wednesday of last week no better weather could have been desired, not too warm but pleasantly cool.

There was quite a welcome awaiting the excursionists at their destination as the grocers of Valleyfield as a whole decided to join them and also cast away business care for one day at least. "Comment ca va? Comment ca va," was the order of things when the train pulled in, and we are safe in saying that the "au revoir" when time for departure had arrived was sincere in every way.

Some Good Racing.

As is customary at picnics, the sports were the chief attraction, and it was quite evident that some of the trade were in pretty good training. It is probable that Canada would have been more successful at the Olympic festival just terminated at Stockholm, if she had sent a few of the R.G.A. members to figure in the Pentathlon.

For example, J. A. Phaneuf in the committee race broke a record for the 150 yards, but the onlookers generally agreed that if A. Laniel could boast of a couple more feet of stature that the verdict would have been a dead heat. However, let us not detract from the glory of the big J.A.P.

The travelers' race was won by E. Daoust (French for dust), the second man P. Langlois (this is not the French translation of Longboat), being considerably hampered in the gallop by the dust raised by the winner who cantered home with a good margin in his favor.

While these two races were being run off the "fat men" were receiving a good rubbing down from their trainers, and the special attention given H. Longtin, who amongst eleven others could boast of more than 200 pounds avoirdupois, enabled him to secure the verdict. The 150 yards was covered in quick funeral time, the winner receiving a set of military brushes for his exertion. We would again state that neither is Longtin the French rendering of Longboat.

J. A. Phaneuf was up against talent in his second encounter, having to contend with sprinters of the J. B. Therien and J. O. Malot type, but his long legs enabled him to reach home once more; the water pitcher he won being generally conceded to be a good container for Barbadoes molasses.

The ladies' race as usual, was a nerve breaker (for the handicappers) it being particularly hard to get the frisky entrants to toe the line. When the barrier did go up it was plainly evident that Mrs. E. Jones would be the winner, as she got off to a good start, and in spite of the weight she was carrying was not troubled by Mesdames O. Fournier and E. Daoust who were judged second and third respectively.

The dancing contest wound up the list, the fairy stepping of Miss E. Bourdoin tickling the judges' fancy, while Miss E. Lapointe was also favorably considered and placed second.

The Banquet.

Here was the surprise of the day. The authorities of the Golden Lion Brewery which has not long been in operation, furnished as fine a dinner as one could desire and certainly gave the Montrealers reason to be pleased with their decision to go to Valleyfield. J. D. Boileau presided and after making the usual "speechless" excuse—he hadn't tasted as yet Golden Lion brew—G. A. Archambault, president of the R.G.A., said a few words and allowed Mr. Herbert, president of the brewery, to address the gathering. Thanks were extended to the Golden Lion authorities for their hospitality prior to the grande finale.

Grocerlets.

When somebody tried to warble Gound's "Where would you go," a Caruso on the platform chimed forth with "Come back to Valleyfield."

Where was Armand Chaput? He's a busy man just now but he must have thought thus, with Tennyson during the day:

Work- work- work!
In my office, can't you see
And I would that my tongue could utter
The thoughts that arise in me.

However, Geo. Duclos was there as his understudy.

Wholesalers are pretty busy these days as friend Demers of Hudon Hebert & Co., Ltd., explained. It was thought that the "Gazelle" would be a sure winner in the hundred yards but this "fleety one" did not start.

J. Ethier smiled nicely for the tin plate artist. Nice tune that — "Thy sweet face haunts me still."

J. D. Boileau's special contest was a teaser. Oh! you girls! Here it is: Box of flowers held by Monsieur Boileau one only of a number having a string on the stem. The fair lady picking out the special flower received a special prize. Secretary Beaudry was quite useful in this event as a number of the ladies were inclined to resort to suffragette methods but Monsieur Beaudry kept them at Bay.

Perhaps there would have been a bigger attendance if the Valleyfield horse race meeting had not been postponed. Some few piastres were brought home from King Edward park last year. You remember who picked the winning ponies. Mum's the word.

Who was it suggested a trip through the Golden Lion Brewery? Now, thirsty one! Don't you remember these words, "Lead us not into temptation."

Megaphonic Lussier was an absentee. Perhaps his lungs have given out. J. A. Phaneuf did the bellowing this year and along with the "Golden Lion" made quite a roar.

To reduce fat—compete with Longtin et autres in the fat men's race.

When little Laniel got ready to start in a race somebody said Toot! toot; This didn't deter him though. He knew his auto was safe in the garage, don't you know?

Let's hope next year's picnic will be as successful.

LOSING MONEY ON SUGAR.

Sugar is undoubtedly one of the big sellers in the retail store. In some stores it represents probably a third of the entire turnover. How many dealers are there who make a sufficient profit on sugar to cover its share of cost of doing business?

Not long ago a retail grocer told the writer that he always made it a point to get a profit on sugar. He invariably sold it at 50 cents a hundred advance on invoice cost. But is this a profit? Let us do some figuring.

Best sugar last September was $5.95 on Montreal basis. At fifty cents advance this dealer would receive $6.45 per cwt. Fifty cents profit on turnover of $6.45 would mean less than 8 per cent. gross profit. Would that cover even cost of doing business?

Supposing the cost were $5.50. Six dollars a hundred would be realized or 8 1-3 per cent. gross profit. If the cost were $5.20 the profit would be less than 9 per cent. Sugar now is $5.05 on Montreal market so that at present figures the gross profit would be only a little above 9 per cent. So far the dealer is losing money by following the 50 cent advance plan. Even if sugar were down to $3.00 he wouldn't make 15 per cent. total profits.

These figures go to prove the folly of figuring at so much advance in cents on first cost. Some merchants have got the idea that 50 cents above first cost is 50 cents clear gain. They forget that overhead expenses are inevitable; that it costs them something to get the goods into the store, to prepare them for sale, to sell and deliver them. In addition to these expenses, the merchant must pay rent, taxes, light and fuel bills, etc., and get a living into the bargain.

A radical change is certainly due in the methods of many merchants so far as figuring profits are concerned. It cannot come too soon for the good of the entire trade.

INSINUATIONS NOT SUBSTANTIATED.

The insinuations made by many daily newspapers throughout Canada that the retailer is reaping the benefit of the increase in cost of foodstuffs to the consumer. In other words they make the claim that the retail dealer is charging an excessive rate of profit—that his net profit is greater than it used to be and greater than it should be.

The increase in cost of farm products is pointed to, but as shown in an article on another page of this issue, the dealer loses rather than profits by advances. He pays from 25 to 100 per cent. more in rents than a few years ago; wages to his employes have advanced 33 1-3 to 50 per cent.; cost of living has gone up from 40 to 50 per cent., and the general expense of operating the business has risen 20 or 25 per cent. At the same time his gross margin of profit remains the same regardless of increase in cost to him. In the face of such advances, the retailer would certainly be justified before any court in the land in getting a higher gross profit than he did when expenses were less.

But he does not get it on staple lines such as farm products. Competition is much too keen for that. It is the luxuries and semi-luxuries on which he must catch up and only the wealthy need purchase these.

No newspaper can prove that the retailer is making an excessive profit on staple lines. On the other hand, as we have shown in the article already referred to, the sale prices lean the consumer's way, considering nothing more than the first cost.

As a matter of fact the whole cause of the increase in farm products is due to short production in relation to population. When Canadian tillers of the soil revert to intensive farming, and when the people learn to remain on the farm, then shall we have cheaper staple food-stuffs.

HONEY PROSPECTS NOT BRIGHT.

Another honey season will shortly open up. The past one has been marked by generally high prices, the result of only moderate production last year and the feeling that all supplies would be needed before another yield was on the market. This has proved correct and supplies have been cleared up to a close margin without any wavering whatever in prices.

Present indications would seem to point to another year of curtailed production and relatively high prices. The extremely cold weather of last winter proved particularly bad for bee colonies and was responsible for considerable loss.

Ontario is an important factor in the honey supply and reports from beekeepers in that province indicate a still further decrease per colony over last year, the average being 48.7 as compared with 50.9 in 1911, which was a short year, and 58.3 in 1910. It is also noted that there is a considerable shortage in eastern counties, heavy loss being occasioned by severity of last winter.

There is no doubt that there is plenty of room for expansion of the bee industry in Canada and some measures should be taken by the government to encourage and promote it. For instance it is claimed that not one quarter of the nectar secreted by Ontario flowers is ever utilized.

THE FLY IN THE STORE.

There are many careless dealers just now driving away trade because of the fly nuisance. Careless is the proper term, because flies could be kept from the store if the proper attention is given to the matter.

In the first place dealers should see that all breeding places in the vicinity of the store are removed. Rotting fruit and vegetables, garbage heaps, stable refuse, etc., are favorite breeding spots. Flies hatch in ten days, so that all that is necessary to prevent breeding is the ordinary care in removing the causes within the ten days.

A certain number of flies will find their way into the store unless screens keep them out. Even then a few pass the sentinels. These must be captured as early as possible. Every dealer carries various fly destroyers, sticky paper, etc., and it doesn't take long to get a few dozen flies. A swatter is a very handy weapon to get them one at a time, providing their number is not too great.

Every dealer must realize the necessity from a business standpoint to rid the store of the pest. Particular customers are every day passing by such places. They want goods in a sanitary condition, and they know they can purchase them somewhere.

WHERE REFORM IS NEEDED.

In last week's issue reference was briefly made to the questionable methods of some Canadian evaporated apple shippers. Fuller information of these methods is contained in the report of J. T. Lithgow, Acting Canadian Trade Commissioner in Amsterdam. He writes the Department of Trade and Commerce as follows:—

"The warehouses of the two merchants in Rotterdam were visited and many barrels of dried apples examined with the co-operation of an assistant, who had had some considerable experience. It was found that in both cases the moisture was excessive and had discolored the barrels. In going into the contents the apples were found to be sticky and matted together. One lot which had been on hand for some little time, was full of mould and could not be used for human consumption and will have to be destroyed. As to the other lot, excepting that there was no mould visible, the condition was not any better. Complaint was also made about the branding of a shipment of fancy evaporated apples in boxes. These were also examined, and while the top layer was in perfect condition, it was evident on going a little deeper that the appearance entirely changed, many small pieces were found together with seeds and cores. This shipment was examined by three responsible merchants in Rotterdam and they unanimously agreed that the goods were not as represented and that the importer was entitled to a rebate. After examining some boxes of this shipment and comparing them with similar goods put up by a firm in Wayne County, New York, I came to the conclusion that the award was entirely in accordance with facts."

This is a serious indictment against Canadian dried apples and certainly should be investigated by the Department of Agriculture or Trade and Commerce. Canada cannot afford to send out such goods to foreign countries. It not only affects our future trade in dried apples with Europe, but the reputation we get for downright dishonesty is bad for shippers of all goods and therefore injurious to the country.

Inspection is evidently needed. The sooner we get it the better.

THE SUMMER SLUMP MYTH

Although the average business man is devoid of superstition, he still harbors a number of myths, and clings to them with singular tenacity. One of the most conspicuous and most dangerous is the Summer Slump Myth.

The idea has gone abroad that trade falls off during the summer months. Business men have accepted it with a credulity never displayed in regard to other matters. The manufacturer takes it for granted that the merchant will find trade dull and makes little effort to find a market for his goods. The merchant in turn, concludes that people are not going to buy as briskly as at other seasons, and "lets up" in his efforts. When men start to act on a false impression of this kind, they inevitably end up by creating the condition, the existence of which was a pure assumption on their part in the first place. When merchants make no effort to create business, the natural result is that business falls off.

The summer slump is a myth, purely and simply. It is a pernicious myth, for it does damage wherever it is accepted; and, unfortunately, its acceptance is pretty general. Although it is quite true that the summer sees a pretty general exodus to summer resorts and holiday points, statistics show that the number of residents who leave a town never exceeds 10 per cent. of the population at any time; and that is partly made up by the presence of visitors. Further than that, people are just as prone to spend their money during the summer months as at any other season of the year. They spend on pleasures and outings larger amounts than the difference between their regular purchases in summer and in brisker seasons. The merchant could divert a share of that promiscuous expenditure to himself if he would keep his store attractive and advertise regularly.

Another point which is generally lost sight of is that, to slacken efforts in the anticipation of meagre results, is to lose momentum. The athlete must keep in condition at all times whether he expects to have an opportunity to display his prowess or not. And it is the same with trade. The merchant who allows himself to drop out of the public sight finds it hard to get back again. He has lost momentum.

Making a Good Start in Bookkeeping

Every Dealer Should Take an Inventory and Know Where He Stands—A Financial Statement Which Indicates Loss in Year's Business—Manager's Salary Should Always be Included in Every Statement.

*By Henry Johnson, Jr.

The following is one of those inevitably-delayed letters which makes me sometimes wish I had more space. Even now, it must go in with the bookkeeping discussion to justify its present insertion. Fortunately, however, its subjecst forms a proper portion of such discussion, for which I am glad.

Winnipeg, Man., June 29, 1912.
The Canadian Grocer:

Gentlemen,—We have had trouble in figuring our inventory and wish to hand you the figures and have you figure out the gross profit, net profit, and increase in net worth and percentage of expense. Of course this is not asking much, but as we have not bothered you before we trust that you will favor us. We will try and make ourselves as clear as possible and give you the complete figures.

To begin with, we wish to say that this is a partnership concern and the writer is the active member, drawing no salary but drawing as his share two-thirds of the profits so that manager's salary does not appear in the expense.

We often times buy goods in a co-operative way, with other stores here and have included that amount as merchandise purchased and also included it in our sales, but have kept it separately and will give you the amount. We also charge all produce to merchandise when received and credit sales with a produce sale when the trade checks are traded out and again credit sales with a cash sale when the produce is sold to commission merchants. We mention this as the result obtained, for percentage of gross profit and net profit may seem low.

Yours very truly,
B—G—F— &Bro.

P.S.—We neglected to state that we purchased a piece of land, from money from the business, amounting to $633.17 which is not included in moneys drawn from the business.

Looks Like a Loss.

There is a lot in that statement that I cannot understand fully. But first, to get down to tacks on results, let us see what we have to-day, compared with what we had a year ago; and I can only see a loss for the year's work.

It is stated that we had, as "net worth" on March 6, 1911, $18,805.91. What have we to-day? The following are all the tangible assets I can discover:

Accounts receivable	$ 3,102.59
Bills receivable	1,508.21
Furniture and fixtures	920.82
Interest on bills rec..	99.76
Cash on hand...	330.45
Stock	11,607.07
Land purchased (cost).. .. .	633.17
Total...	$18,202.07

This certainly looks as if we had $603.54 less of solid net worth, Mar. 20, 1912, than we had on Mar. 6, 1911. Why and how this has come about is what we now must look into—provided it is so. The statement is not clear to me, as stated.

Manager Should Have Salary.

If my conclusion is correct, here is one of the finest possible illustrations of the folly of any manager working without a definite salary. For if conditions are as they appear, this manager's "two-thirds" will not make him very fat; yet he has devoted a year of work to the business. Had he been paid a fair salary, he would have had at least what his clerks and helpers have had—a living wage for his work.

Merchandise bought, including freight and drayage, amounts to $31,890.18. Sales are stated at $44,388,84. This shows a "spread" of $12,498.66. If all other factors were constant, here would be a gross margin of nearly 28 2-3 per cent., which ought to be enough for the most reckless expenditure in any business. Even so, it seems to have been hardly enough in this one, because we have:

Expense	$ 7,636.69
Withdrawals	2,626.24
Withdrawals	1,950.03
Total	$12,212.96

The stock, however, has gone off just about $5,000, so that comparison does not hold. Allowing for that decline in stock on hand, the gross margin amounts to considerably less. With a gross spread of $7,212.96 we show a gross margin on only about 16¼ per cent,; and that is hardly enough for any business these days.

Enormous Expense Account.

Let us take another angle. The sales are stated at $44,388.84. With actual expenses as stated at $12,212.96, here is an expense account of about 28 per cent. —and what business can stand up under that kind of load?

But worse is still to come, for I doubt that figure of $44,388.84. This is because it is stated in the letter that "We

*The writer of this article is one of the most successful dealers on the continent. He has spent almost 30 years in the retail grocery business and is well equipped to answer questions and smooth out difficulties with which others may have met. If a special request is made names of inquirers will be omitted when their letters are printed for discussion.

credit sales with a produce sale when the trade checks are traded out and again credit sales with a cash sale when the produce is sold to commission merchants.'' Here, then, apparently, is a double credit. How far does this go? How much do we have to lop off that $44,388.84 before we get down to actual sales?

If the $2,626.24 stated to be ''included in the above,'' is really in that $31,890.18 of merchandising purchases, etc., then the expenditures drop to $9,586.72; but even so, we have an expense account of upwards of 21½ per cent.

Too Much Stock Carried.

Lastly, with sales of only $44,000, the stock of $16,241.42 with which we started out would be turned only about 2¾ times annually; and the $11,607 with which we end would only be turned about four times—probably about 3½ times on the average. That is not active enough. The business is heavily overstocked.

* * *

Now, things may not be so bad as they look. Probably they art not, seeing we are only about $600 behind this year. But there must be some radical investigation and I urgently advise the employment of an expert accountant to examine into your condition, report fully, devise and install in operation some accounting that will account.'' The trifle of $500 to $1,000 that such an expert's services will cost you will be the best investment you ever made.

Some Pertinent Questions.

Meantime, I should like very much to have some items explained.

Wherein does that ''co-operative buying'' differ from any other buying? Do you not simply get the goods and pay for them? If so, why are such purchases not simply merchandise purchases?

What do you mean by depreciation not included?'' Does that mean that you have not written off any depreciation, or that you have written it off? Same applies to ''delinquents not included.''

How was the ''net worth'' of 1911 made up?

What is that last item, ''Cash on account'' listed at foot of statement? Is that what has been paid you by your customers on their accounts?

List Freight With Stock.

I recommend now, that you immediately discontinue that plan of listing merchandise, freight and drayage separately. Include in the cost of your goods every item that enters into placing those goods in your store or warehouse, ready for sale. Then your stock on hand will be listed at full cost to you —saving work and obviating the great liability to error in your present method.

I shall be greatly interested in hearing from you, even though you do not adopt my suggestion to employ the expert. We all learn from the mistakes and improvements of each—so let us have it.

Winnipeg Grocers at Their Annual Outing

A Dozen and One Varieties of Contests at Picnic of Winnipeg Caterer's Association—Travelers Run for Furnishings— Big Crowd in Attendance—The Men at the Helm.

Winnipeg, July 31.—(Special).—Those are the men to whom the honor of conducting the succesful 1912 picnic of the Winnipeg Caterers' Association, is due:

President.—W. A. Bartram.

Vice-President.—J. A. Campbell.

Secretary.—W. G. Lock.

Treasurer.—Geo. D. Sinclair.

Committee Chairmen.—Transportation, Capt. Harper Wilson; printing, M. L. Dennis; sports, S. I. Penwarden; refreshments, Frank Scott.

The officers in charge of the Winnipeg Caterers' Picnic at Winnipeg Beach.

Sports Committee.—S. J. Penwarden (chairman), Geo. D. Sinclair, R. L. Waugh, J. W. Campbell, J. Congalton, N. J. Lawrie, Wm. Boyd, G. Yost, H. Bartram, P. H. Menlove, M. O'Connor.

Transportation Committee. — Capt. Harper Wilson, H. Holman, Ald. Gowler, D. A. Ritchie.

All kinds of Races.

It was the 26th annual and Winnipeg Beach was the magnetic point that drew the crowd. As with the majority of picnics, the prominent feature was the racing and other competitive events. There were sprinting contests for old and young, feminine and masculine, two legs and three legs; there were starch, rolled oats and soap races; a bun contest; needle and thread, egg and spoon races, water sports, etc., etc., until everyone was almost ''run off their feet.''

Not only these but young ladies and gentlemen entered into competitions to bring to light the most graceful waltzers and two steppers; caterers exhibited their offspring; and travelers, whose lives are one long succession of racing for orders, raced harder at the picinc. In short it was one big, long, round day of pleasurable competition.

In the waltzing competition for caterers J. Ogilvie and his partner showed their prowess on the waxed floor while F. Marples and his auxiliary two-stepped themselves to victory.

There was a soap contest open to grocers and clerks, with prizes worth while, and here is the order of the winners:—Messrs Shipper, D. Richie, and Percy White. The travelers who got the count of one, two, three in their special contest were, J. Congalton, J. Ogilvie, and J. Wheatman. As a result their grips will have a few more neckties or other body furnishings on the next trip out.

The caterers' championship race of 220 yards for a silver cup brought into the limelight Gordon Buchan who holds the coveted silverware for a twelvemonth.

The special handicap 200-yard race open to caterers and employes produced the following lucky quartette: — P. White, R. Bowman, G. Buchan and G. Heppburn.

On the trains going to the Beach a watermelon was passed through to give the picnickers an opportunity of guessing the number of seeds it held.

The event certainly was a most successful one and the caterers in charge have good reason to feel elated over the day. They would still be considered modest.

Lines to Push During Month of August

Camp Goods, Summer Drinks, Spices, Vinegar, Fruits for Preserving, Fly Destroyers, etc., Among the Goods That Will Sell—First Prepared Will Secure the Most Business—Value Attached to Seasonable Lines by One Dealer.

"I begin pushing an article just as soon as it is at all seasonable and keep persisently at it until I think the opportunities for its sale have entirely disappeared.

This is the statement of one grocer, perhaps more aggressive than many in the trade but not more aggressive than every grocer should be.

We have now entered upon another month—a month rich in possibilities to the dealer ready to take advantage of them. If the dealer will take the sentiments expressed in the opening paragraph as his motto and go after business along those lines, he will find that August, a month not always given credit as a busy one, will show sales appreciable in volume and profitable in nature.

Take the Almanac Seriously.

Away back in Sag Hollows and unfortunately in many places more adjacent to the active business world, merchants are found to be ruled strongly and all too much by the seasons. Just because the family almanac says that August is the last month of summer is absolutely no reason why we should relinquish our selling efforts on summer goods. There is yet much of seasonable summer weather before us this year and there is yet to be an appreciable demand for all those goods peculiar to the summer season and it stands to reason that the grocer who maintains his stock and keeps persistently pushing these lines, is the one who is going to get the trade. It is all very well as the season nears an end to clear stocks up to a safe margin, but it does not pay to cut down supplies while demand is still at its height.

Camping Goods Still Sellers.

The season for camping and picnics has yet a considerable time to run and those goods used for these purposes should still be pushed. Canned foods of various kinds are among the stellar lines that will sell easily. Canned milk has an important place in the camper's hamper while olives, pickles, sauces and similar lines should not be forgotten. The same methods as used earlier in season may be brought into play to get this business. The window display is an important selling agent and in this regard the value of an appropriate setting should not be forgotten.

Perhaps the weather this year has not been as conducive to trade in summer drinks as that of last year, but those dealers who have been pushing this line appear quite satisfied with results. Then again, the prophets tell us that the weather man is still holding in store for us a considerable brand of that weather that causes a heavy run on summer drinks. This business the dealer should be prepared for; but it should also be borne in mind that people do not use these articles only when Old Sol is dispensing his strongest rays. Even when climatic conditions are more favorable to the hot blooded person, there is an appreciable sale for certain of these lines. For this reason they should be kept prominently before customers, even when the temperature is only moderate.

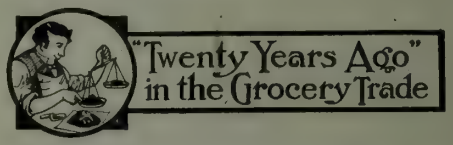
Plan for Spice Campaign.

The aggressive grocer has said, "I begin pushing an article just as soon as it is at all seasonable." Following along this line it is well that the grocer should get his spice campaign under way. The pickling season is now not far distant and it is the dealer who gets started early, who secures the cream of the trade. In past years in many towns there has been no little amount of the spice trade obtained by the druggists, because the grocers did not give enough attention to this line. This is trade that properly belongs to the grocer and he is in the best position to secure it too if he only lays his plans properly so. Perhaps one reason why certain of this trade has been going to the druggist is the wrong impression which has existed in the minds of certain customers that the druggist handled better quality spices than the grocer. Therefore, to overcome this, purity and quality should be made the keynote of all advertising, personal talks and show cards on both spices and vinegar.

The preserving season has been under way for some time, but fruit supplies have been rather light so that the housewife will need considerable fruit to make up the required amount of preserves. Later fruits will apparently be a fair yield and should be featured for preserving purposes, as well as the assorted lines, sugar and sealers.

For the later line the demand is now just opening up. Earlier in the season, the housewife was filling up her old jars but the number of empty ones will gradually be dwindling to the zero mark.

There are other lines which may be pushed to good advantage during this month. For instance, flies increase as the season progresses and fly destroyers will be in demand. The farmer may be rather busy in the harvest field, there may be many people absent from the city, but after all is considered, the live grocer will agree that August is rich in opportunities.



Following items were taken from The Canadian Grocer of Aug. 2nd, 1892:—

"Edmond Denis and Edouard Denis, Montreal, have entered into partnership to do business as the 'Ontario and Manitoba Milling Agency.'"

Here is another coincidence in looking over our file of twenty years ago. The Montreal Retail Grocers' Association picnic report which appears in this weeks issue of the year 1892. S. Demers was president, Thos. Gauthier honorary secretary, and C. E. Bouthillier, secretary, at that time while A. D. Fraser was chairman of the refreshment and railway committee.

"McWilliam and Everist, Toronto, sold by auction a car of California fruit at their warehouse on Thursday last."

Editor's Note.—This is another firm in business to-day, after lapse of years. Selling a carload of fruit at present time is of much more frequent occurrence.

"J. F. Eby, of Eby Blain Limited, Toronto, has ended his holiday furlough, and is back to business with the appearance of a man who had been drinking at a well-spring of health. His partner, Mr. Blain, is now taking his turn and is away to Rosseau for a few days."

Editor's Note.—Curiously enough Mr. Eby has just returned from a holiday this year and Mr. Blain has gone to Muskoka to enjoy a rest.

Editor's Note.—The F. F. Dalley Co. is still in business to-day in Hamilton, not only doing a national, but an international trade.

QUEBEC MARKETS.

POINTERS—

Sugar.—Market heavy.

Dried Fruits.—Dull.

Montreal, Aug. 1.—The majority of wholesalers report an increasing business, and if things keep going as satisfactory to end of year the auditors should report a more than favorable gain.

Rice situation is becoming more deeply interesting daily as it is quite likely that prices will move higher up if some change does not take place. From all reports no relief is in sight. When one considers that the yearly rice crop of Japan amounts from 46 to 52 million Koku and is not sufficient to meet the requirements of the nation it is not surprising to hear of the authorities trying to abolish the import duty on grains.

The French pea crop has evidently turned out a failure as shippers have ordered all quotations withdrawn, one man in particular expressing himself pretty strongly, "Thoroughly discouraging," he says. The cause of course is the bad growing weather and considerable drought.

SUGAR.—Retail demand for sugar is heavy at present refiners being kept on the hop all the time and some large orders have been filled recently, so that even the shrewdest buyers are inclined to believe that steadiness will prevail for some time.

As reported in our last issue, general appearance of European beet crop is by no means unfavorable, the representation that a period of drought experienced would damage it, being made principally for speculative purposes. The effect these statements had can easily be seen from the big jump raws took in London about a fortnight ago, but things have quieted down now and a reaction has brought prices back to practically same level. Authentic reports to hand quite recently state that in Eastern Germany alone drought has been experienced, but in other beet growing districts there is no complaint.

SYRUP AND MOLASSES.—With a short crop of maple this year and prices now being advanced it looks as if a larger corn syrup trade should soon pass, not that there has been any lack of demand for the latter.

Molasses market is dull there being only a normal amount of business doing which is somewhat surprising seeing that local market stiffened up to quite an extent just recently. But warm weather has no doubt interfered with things and a heavier volume of business will be done just as soon as the thermometer begins to descend.

DRIED FRUITS.—When are California dried fruits going to move more freely? At present wholesalers are not at all satisfied with the general aspect, trade in all lines being anything but brisk. Prunes are now being offered freely on coast as holders have evidently made up their minds that a stiffening following on recent reports of a big drop is bound to take place.

Apricots are firmer than they have been recently but prices remain unchanged, peaches being dull with prices nominal.

According to reports the raisin crop will fall short of last year's, while currants are quiet.

TEAS. — The tea market continues firm and some lines, Congous principally, show an advancing tendency. There is good demand both locally and from the country and volume of business being done goes to prove that buying is not altogether to fill actual requirements.

Cables from the Far East indicate that higher prices will soon be asked, so that teas like every other grocery article seem to follow the soaring idea.

COFFEE.—A better feeling has prevailed of late in this market and roasters report an increase in business over corresponding period of last year. This news with high prices all round, would serve to emphasise the strong demand there is for good coffee even during the warmest of weather. The mild grades are comparatively quiet.

SPICES.—Demand for all lines is good and with moderate stocks high prices are still maintained. Yet it is hardly likely that any appreciable decline would be registered even if more supplies were on hand, as the demand from grinders is heavy, though there is not such a speculative spirit shown as at previous periods. Pepper, both kinds, is likely to advance a few more points, while it would seem that cloves and nutmegs also are inclined that way.

RICE.—Prices are still high and there is little possibility of any decrease at present. The distress caused by shortage of supplies in Japan is severe. Throughout the poorer quarters of the capital relief stations are being opened, and retailers have arranged to sell Rangoon rice at these points at bare cost and freight.

Prospects of a good crop, however, in Korea are bright. The rice, thanks to the abundant rain experienced is plentiful and one of the best crops in this peninsula will be registered if weather remains good.

Market in Burma is a little lower, but no large quantities are being offered at the lower quotations, as holders expect to do better by waiting. Local business is good even at high prices; in fact it has been better this year so far than last when prices did not reach such a high level.

ONTARIO MARKETS.

POINTERS—

Spot Prunes.—Further price concessions.

Foreign Peas.—Outlook not bright.

Salmon.—Opening prices awaited.

Sugar.—Scarcity of spot supplies.

Toronto, Aug. 1.—The knights of the grip for Ontario wholesale grocery houses bring their holidays to an end on Aug. 3, and will be back on the road again next week. Even in their absence there has been quite an active trade, general summer lines moving out well. While July is not regarded as a busy month in grocery lines local jobbers have no complaint to make regarding the month's business.

One of the features of the market this week has been scarcity of spot supplies of sugar and wholesalers have not been able to care for all retailers' orders, at least on time. "It has been a regular sugar famine," said one jobber," and retailers have been wondering what was the matter. It is not our fault. We can't get supplies."

Refiners hope to relieve this condition at least in part shortly. Real cause of shortage is that all dealers have been purchasing only lightly and when big consumption set in, there was at once a flood of orders.

SUGAR.—Sugar remains unchanged at $5.15 per cwt., as compared with $5.25 one year ago. There has been some reaction in raws after the speculative upward move. The European beet crop prospects are not as unfavorable as they were represented for speculative purposes.

There is a good buying movement of refined.

SYRUPS AND MOLASSES.— Summer business is present in syrups. This is not the busy seaon but trade during summer months does not fall off as it was wont to do some years ago. Pure maple syrup as has been pointed out before is a scare commodity.

Molasses are rather quiet just now and will be till fall demand sets in. Market is steady.

DRIED FRUITS. — Trade in spot prunes has been quiet and as there are quite plentiful stocks on hand, especially in larger sizes, concessions are being made in prices in order to induce sales. For time of year, prunes stocks are said to be quite heavy, although not so much so in smaller sizes.

Fancy layer figs are impossible to get on local market, while there are practically no bag stock left. There are a few tapnets and 4½ cents is the inside figure on these. Hallowee bulk dates reported as scarce long since are cleaned up. Package dates are available and are meeting with fair sale. A lower figure of 7½ to 7¾ cents is offered on Valencia raisins. Currants are unchanged.

Future dried fruits continue steady with exception of seeded raisins which are being shaded slightly at coast. There has been some little buying of futures for early delivery by local wholesalers. The major portion of buying has not yet been done, however, and jobbers appear to be holding back particularly in prunes. "Evidently, they are looking for better values," said a local broker. "However, when you go to purchase prunes, you find it hard to get any concessions."

TEA.—There is no particular change in local tea situation, nor is there anything in news from producing sections that would indicate anything but a rather steady market ahead.

COFFEE. — Rather unexpected was the easier feeling in New York coffee market last week, buyers having again taken up a waiting attitude. Brazil holds the key to coffee situation, and if Brazil wavers on the eve of a small new crop and shows continued weakness it will depress general markets to a similar degree.

CANNED GOODS.

TORONTO.—That this year's pack of sockeye salmon will have to retail at 30 cents a tin is the prediction of one local jobber this week. He does not expect this grade to open much under $3 per dozen. How near he is correct should be known shortly as prices on new pack are being awaited. Canners themselves have not been saying much as to progress of pack, but local jobbers and brokers appear to be of opinion that this year's prices will rule above those of last year.

Commenting on high price of salmon, one jobber maintained that it was not dear even at 30 cents per tin when compared to prices of fresh meats. He laid emphasis on fact that there was no waste in salmon. There has been a growing demand for ½ lb. tins not alone because of high price but because people especially in city are purchasing now in smaller quantities than heretofore.

Prospects for foreign peas are not bright. English packers withdrew prices some time ago and now some packers in France and Belgium have followed suit. Peas in these countries apparently have not progressed favorably.

As for Canadian peas, things look brighter than some time ago. Early peas were rather discouraging but conditions of late are reported as better. Indeed recent rains and mild weather in Niagara district has helped things generally there. Prices on early pack fruits and vegetables were expected before this. Season is later this year, accounting for lateness in announcing prices.

Cherries are now nearing their close. Tomatoes are ripening and growing quite well. Peaches and grapes are forming well and predictions are that most brand of peaches will give a fairly abundant yield.

There is a fair movement of general canned goods reported for immediate needs. One jobber says corn has been moving well. He is asking $1.05 per dozen. For tomatoes he is quoting $1.65, although there are cases of sales at a lower figure.

MANITOBA MARKETS.

POINTERS—

Sugar.—Market stronger.

Winnipeg, Aug. 1. — Past week has been a busy one for wholesale houses. Rush orders from country points to fill stocks by retailers who have found farmers heavy purchasers has been a feature of business situation.

Crop outlook is excellent. No damage of any serious nature being reported and harvest likely to be general by Aug. 15.

Market values are steady, there being no changes to announce in any staple lines.

SUGAR.—Market values here are unchanged although an advance of a few cents at primary points is reported. An advance of 10 cents at New York is not regarded as anything more than a speculative movement based on visible supply in Europe. Local retail demand is heavy with preserving season in full swing.

NEW BRUNSWICK MARKETS.

St. John, Aug. 1.—The past week has been quiet in local trade circles, although business in general was well up to standard. Market has been rather quiet and few changes of interest have been recorded. Molasses is slightly firmer, but sugar and flour remain unchanged. Most interesting feature of market has been sharp advance in canned salmon due to light pack reported from coast. Some brands are expected to be a dollar per case higher before long, and in fact they are almost that now. Dry cod is also advanced. There is a slight increase in baked beans canned, and strawberries and tomatoes as well.

Last week has seen much wet weather and some kinds of country produce have received set-back. Berries have been softened and spoiled by the continual rainfall, while the ground in lower areas was submerged and caused much damage. In higher sections rain was beneficial.

STANDARD FOR TURPENTINE.

Sellers of Adulterated Article Now Liable to Prosecution.

General merchants who sell turpentine will be interested in the Government standard recently announced. In 1910 samples were secured from different parts of the country and analyzed, the results showing that considerable turpentine contained petroleum. Under the new standard this will be considered an adulteration, and sellers will be liable to prosecution.

The act defining turpentine reads as follows:—

1. When turpentine is sold as a drug, for medicinal purposes or to the order of a physician, it shall meet pharmacopoeial requirements as provided by section 7 of the said act.

II. When turpentine is sold under any other conditions, than for purposes of medicine, as above, it shall meet the following requirements:—

1. It shall be entirely free from mineral oil.

2. Unless sold as wood turpentine, it shall absorb not less than 340 times its weight of iodine (Hubl solution and method). If sold as wood turpentine it shall absorb not less than 240 times its weight of iodine by same method.

3. The undissolved (unpolymerized) residue on treatment of 10cc with 40cc of a sulphuric acid containing 20 per cent. of the fuming acid, shall not exceed 10 per cent. by volume of the sample.

4. The refractive index of this residue shall be not less than 1.495C at 20C.

5.—The refractive index of the sample at 20 deg. C. shall lie between 1.4680 and 1.4730.

6. The specific gravity of the sample at 20 deg. C. shall not be less than 0.860.

7. The initial boiling point shall not be lower than 150 deg. C. under ordinary atmospheric pressure.

8. At least 75 per cent. by volume shall distill below 160 deg. C.

9 The residue on evaporation over a steam bath shall not exceed two (2) per cent.

The Many Uses Ascribed to the Lemon

It is Represented as Not Only a Preventive of Ills But Almost a Cureall of Disease—Some Uses Given It by Medical Men .

We all know at least one important use to which the lemon can be put. Just at the present time it is affording relief to many a dry and parched throat and assisting somewhat in offsetting the ill-effects of the warm weather and scorching sun. Lemonade made from the juice of the lemon is one of the best and safest drinks for any person whether in health or not. It is given credit as being valuable for many purposes besides that of a refreshing drink.

A Preventive of Disease.

It is reputed to be suitable for all stomach diseases, in cases of jaundice, liver complaint and fevers. It is a specific against skin complaints. It not only cures disease but prevents it. Sailors make daily use of it for this purpose.

If a person occasionally rubs his gums with lemon juice, it will keep them in a healthy condition. The hands and the nails are also kept white, soft and supple, by the daily use of lemon instead of soap. It also prevents chilblains. Lemons are used in intermittent fevers, mixed with strong hot coffee, without sugar; also in same manner with green tea.

Must be a Panacea.

Neuralgia, it is claimed, may be cured by rubbing the part affected with a cut lemon. It is valuable also to cure warts and to remove dandruff by rubbing the roots of the hair with it. It will alleviate and finally cure coughs and colds, and heal slightly diseased lungs, if taken hot before going to bed at night.

Its uses are manifold, says one doctor, and the more we employ it, internally and externally, the better we shall find ourselves.

We do not grow the lemon in this country and should assuredly be glad that there is some country that can hand us a lemon—literally not slangily.

The grocer will do well to keep in the mind some of the important uses of the lemon. They should help him frequently to make sales. Now is the time when this line should be pushed strongly.

TRADE NOTES.

Thirty Toronto fruit dealers were fined $10 each this week for violating the fruit exposure by-law.

General indications point to a big potato crop in United States this year. On July 1 condition was 88.9 per cent, of normal, compared with 76 last year and 89.3 per cent. for the ten year average.

The West Siding Trading Co., general merchants, Saskatoon, Sask., have sold their business to Byes Bros., of Grand Forks, North Dakota, U.S.A. The new proprietors took over the business in July.

The amount of both Indian and Ceylon tea taken by countries outside the United Kingdom during 1911, was slightly less than for the previous year. America, however, took an increased quantity of both varieties, importing 23,311,075 lbs. of Indian as compared with 18,631,669 in 1910 and 29,136,939 lbs. of Ceylon as against 25,724,045 in 1910.

Lemons Expected to Continue Steady

If Weather Continues Favorable For Sales—Reports From Primary Points Not Encouraging—New Potatoes Again Take Easier Turn—Markets Generally Active.

The fruit dealer has long since become acquainted with the fact that weather is ruling factor in lemon market. It was pointed out early in season that prospects for lemons at source of supply were not particularly bright and that a relatively high summer lemon market could be expected. This has followed with only moderately good lemon weather. As to what height prices might have risen if we had had a repetition of last summer's temperature, we can only guess.

At any rate, according to reports there is little hope of immediately lower prices. Primary markets report fruit as scarce, particularly in 300's. New York market holds quite a stiff position with most of fruit coming to hand, requiring repacking. It would therefore seem that with weather proving at all favorable, lemons should continue steady.

Fruit markets are generally active. Raspberries of good quality are still coming forward while cherries, currants and huckleberries and other domestic lines are now getting attention. There is also a good movement of fancy imported lines, such as peaches, pears and plums, while grapes have just recently made their initial bow.

New potatoes which were firmer last week have again taken an easier turn. The cause of this has been the larger shipments sent out from New Jersey. Canadian yield is shaping into a more important factor in market. New stock has next to completely overshadowed old.

MONTREAL.

FRUITS.—Prices show an increase this week owing to shortage, seemingly temporary in certain lines. Grapefruit is getting dearer, as high as $9 per case being received by many wholesalers. Lemons, as was expected, have also done some soaring, but it is expected that large supplies are on the way, and a readjustment should soon take place.

VEGETABLES.—In spite of high prices prevalent, demand continues fine and wholesalers report a steady movement of stocks. Prices are peculiarly firm, and some are inclined to believe that the top for practically all lines has been reached, although carrots are not as plentiful as might be. Cucumbers are in strong demand, while shipments of Spanish onions are uncertain.

GREEN FRUITS.—A generally good business is being done in fruits, imported and home grown varieties at present dividing the honors. Some good quality raspberries have been coming along, and prices have been ruling at 13 to 15 cents per box. Red currants are lower at 6 to 7 cents per quart box, but black currants are a scarce commodity and command a high figure.

To the list of fancy fruits, grapes from California have been added, but the price is fancy also. Peaches, pears and plums from across the line move quite freely.

Montmorency, a red sour cherry, are offered in fair quantities, bringing around $1.00 per basket. Huckleberries are selling from $1 to$1.50 per 11 quart basket.

FRUITS AND VEGETABLES.—There is an active trade in all lines especially preserving fruits which are cheap and plentiful. Just as Much Flour Being Sold in Summer

So Asserts One Miller—Not as Much Goes Through Grocer's Hands—Is Grocer Himself Partly to Blame?—These are Dog Days in Flour and Cereals—New Crop on the Way.

These are the "dog days" in the flour and cereal trade, a listless feeling featuring both these commodities at present time. There are of course reasons for this order of things.

As for flour, in first place, the housewife is not so industrious during the period of inflated temperature and production of bread in the home accordingly is curtailed and this is reflected in the flour sales of the grocer. Added to this another crop is now on the way and in face of present promising outlook, there is nothing to induce retailer to take on more stock than they need for immediate requirements.

"It is true that flour trade is quiet at present," said one miller this week, "but it is more the effect of a hand-to-mouth policy being adopted by buyers, than any falling off in consumption."

"There is really little or no falling off during summer months," was his assertion. He contended that people eat practically same amount of bread in summer as winter, although there is less baked in the homes?

"I wonder how much of this is due to the grocer's listlessness," was a question he asked which it might be well for the grocer to consider. Perhaps if the same retailers displayed a little more aggressiveness, there might be more trade in flour secured during summer.

In cereals also, feeling is now rather one of summer quietness with lighter varieties coming in for greater share of attention. Feeling in rolled oats still continues with an undertone of easiness.

MONTREAL.

FLOUR.—There has been no change in prices. Market is fairly steady but trade rather quiet.

CEREALS.—Business in rolled oats continues quiet, demand being confined to small quantities. Prices are steady. The demand for cornmeal has not been so marked of late.

TORONTO.

FLOUR. — Flour trade continues its summer quietude, retailers under approach of new crop making provisions for immediate requirements only. Manitoba flour maintains steadiness and no change is anticipated until something definite in regard to new crop takes place.

It seems rather difficult at moment to get an exact line on winter wheat flour situation. There was an easier feeling noted but some millers appear rather uncertain as to whether it was warranted. Situation is rather complicated for while flour that competes with Ontario in European markets is offered at a lower figure than is possible by local exporters, winter wheat in Ontario is at a high figure and outlook is rather unpromising, a great deal of wheat being winter killed.

CEREALS. — The easier feeling in oats still continues but there is no change in finished product, while market continues listless. "Well, we are at least not looking for any advance," was the answer of one man regarding market.

Dealers are now quoting rolled wheat at $2.80 in single lots and $2.70 in five barrel lots.

Rolled oats, small lots, 90 lb. sacks		2 50
Rolled oats, 25 bags to car lots		2 40

MILL FEEDS. — Bran and shorts show no change, continuing at $22 and $26 per ton respectively. Local dealers appear to be fairly well supplied but export demand is good and apparently the firming feature.

WINNIPEG.

FLOUR AND CEREALS. — Flour situation remains unchanged with a good domestic trade and fair export enquiry. Rolled oats are easier in sympathy with outlook in raw material.

FRUIT WINDOW CARDS.

Three fruit show cards that the Wellwood Fruit Co., Toronto, are running in their window at present are:—

"We do not expose our fruit to the dust or dirt of the street."

"Good fruit is the best summer food."

"We aim to secure fruit of quality rather than appearance."

FRUIT MARKET NOTES.

Good oranges continue strong, conditions on coast not being favorable for shipment of really fine fruit in any quantity. Fruit is running small in size.

Accumulation of limes in New York has made market there dull and tone easy.

Bananas continue fairly active, but less so since domestic fruits began to come along.

"There are a good many failures in the grocery business," says an old groceryman. "The reason there are so many of these is the same as why so many fail as insurance or book agents—they take it up after they have failed at everything else."

Appreciable Trade to be Had in Fish

By Those Dealers Who go After The Business—Fish Considered Good Summer Food—Difficulty of Handling Stock Detrimental Feature Now—Fair Supplies on Hand.

To those dealers who go after it, an appreciable trade is to be had in fish even at present time. True, it is that weather is rather a detrimental feature making it more difficult and rather more expensive to handle stocks than at other times of year. On the other hand competition is much less keen while fact that fish are acknowledged as a good summer food should spur dealers on to handle them.

Supplies of fresh halibut are liberal, trout and white fish are in fair supply, while at coast points, haddock and fresh cod are plentiful.

QUEBEC.

Montreal.—Dealers are beginning to prepare for the big season ahead and are even now noticing inquiries for salted and pickled varieties. Haddock at present is plentiful, there being a good demand, as prices are reasonable. Lake trout is scarce, while dressed perch also are not over plentiful. Cod is moving freely, while new Gaspe salmon is also called for.

NOVA SCOTIA.

HALIFAX.—Owing to the hot weather fish is in light demand at present time. Market is now bare of fresh mackerel and few salt mackerel are offering. Good haddock are plentiful, and fresh cod is also in good supply. Market is well supplied with fresh halibut, also fresh salmon. Smoked fish are in better demand than the fresh stock, haddies (light cured) being the leading seller.

Owing to high price of canned lobsters, sales are comparatively small. Canned clams are in demand, also sardines. Good new July herring are now on market, but there is only a fair demand for them. A little later on the sales will be heavier.

In other lines of salt fish there is little doing. The shipments to foreign markets are light, and home consumption is practically nil. Reports from vessels now on the banks are not encouraging, the catches being small. On some of the inshore grounds fish are more plentiful.

MANITOBA.

As Temperature Goes Up Their Sale Increases — Considerable Butter Being Stored—New Zealand Expects to Increase Shipments to Canada—Steadier Feeling in Eggs — Shrinkage is Quite Large

To a certain extent at least, the retailer can gauge the trend of the temperature these days by the fluctuation in his sales of cooked meats. Accordingly as the thermometer mounts upward, the housewife's desire to stand over a hot stove preparing meats dwindles off, with result that sales of grocers' prepared meats increase. Smoked meats are also good sellers during summer months, and sales in these two lines have been appreciable for some time and still continue considerable.

There are without doubt certain interests in the butter trade who expect this commodity to again follow last year's example and soar upward. While it is evident that values next fall and winter will by no means be low, whether they will mount to zenith reached last year, only time will tell. There is at least one thing true and that is that present values are above normal, with no wavering in general prices, although dealers at some centres regard market as possessing an undertone of easiness. Export trade is lacking and there are reports of accumulations at some centres. There is evidently considerable storing of butter, even manufacturers tempted by last year's high prices taking a hand in the game.

There is, however, a factor looming up in the trade to which some importance must be given, namely, supplies from New Zealand, which are becoming a more important feature each year. During season of 1910-11, while New Zealand only sent 9,197 boxes to Canada, 44,431 boxes were received during 1911-12, and butter shippers hope to still further increase this trade.

Warm weather has been proving detrimental to eggs right down the line. To begin with under high temperature, the Canadian hen has been lagging in her duties, resulting in decreased production. Then shrinkage, always a prominent feature at this time has been helping to firm prices. Although the demand is hardly so strong, nevertheless general feeling is firmer.

BUTTER.—The market has shown a firmer feeling since last week and prices have worked up, but it is a question whether high level will be maintained as there is practically no export business being done and stocks are accumulating. For this reason therefore, dealers will do well to follow closely the movement of butter as far as export end is concerned.

EGGS.—The demand for eggs has been better than usual but that is not saying that there was any slump in business recently. High prices are general rule owing to the marked decrease in supplies coming forward. We quote as follows:

POULTRY.—A heavy demand from the West is reported and large shipments have been made by local wholesalers. This has left the Montreal market pretty bare and prices are likely to go up unless some large supplies come to hand early net week:

TORONTO.

PROVISIONS. — Smoked hams and bacon continue to find a good sale, these always being stellar lines during summer months. Cooked varieties are also moving well, for reasons that have before been explained. Lard as usual for this season is not particularly brisk. There is no change in commodity prices but they maintain a steady tone.

Stronger feeling noted in live hogs last week has developed into a total advance of 35 cents per cwt. under weight of good demand.

BUTTER.—Butter prices continue to hold at their high level but here and there some dealers rather regard market as possessing a somewhat easier undertone. Fact of matter is that while dealers have realized that prices were above normal and that make with good pastures should be appreciable, still they have not been able to force any concessions from manufacturers. Market across the line is easier and according to one dealer on lower level than local prices.

EGGS.—Shrinkage in eggs is scarcely so large as earlier in July, nevertheless it is responsible for no little amount of firmness which has been ruling in eggs. There is again another increase registered bringing fresh stock up to 23 to 24 and new laids to 25 to 26 cents

HONEY. — Last winter's extremely cold weather did not prove well for bee colonies and from present indications honey prices this year are likely to continue their high level. NOVA SCOTIA MARKETS.

Halifax, Aug. 1.—Business continues excellent in wholesale grocery lines. Collections are fairly good, and fully up to expectations for season. Jobbers report a heavy demand for sugars, due principally to preserving season. Prices are firm, and there is no indication of any immediate change.

Local dealers have placed large orders for canned goods this season but the packers cannot deliver more than sixty per cent. on strawberries. There may be some improvement later, but present outlook is not favorable for any increase.

There is a heavy demand for cheese and as a result prices have advanced 1½ cents per pound. Best quality stock is now going to trade at 15 to 15½ cents, and prices may go still higher. Eggs are becoming scarce and prices are higher. New laid stock is bringing 24 cents, and as receipts are falling off more rapidly dealers say there will be a further increase before very long.

Magnitude of the Shrinkage in Eggs

Wholesalers Claim Loss From This Cause Averages Two Cents Per Dozen in Hot Weather—An Actual Sample Shipment Showing Loss—Circulars Sent Out Re Care of Eggs.

Country merchants who ship eggs to commission men or wholesalers in the city frequently, and more especially during the summer months, wonder at the rather wide range between the price they receive and price quoted to retail dealers in the city. On the other hand city retailers draw a comparison between country prices and the price they have to pay the wholesalers.

There is an explanation forthcoming as to this wide variance, which is particularly marked during warm weather. In the first place there is the freight, a certain percentage of breakage as well as shrinkage—and it is the shrinkage which is largely responsible for this order of things at the present time, because the loss to the wholesaler through this source is particularly heavy during summer months .

Half of Them Bad.

"Fifteen dozen discarded eggs out of a 30 dozen case," was a particularly bad case cited by one wholesaler to the Canadian Grocer representative. While this is, however, an outstanding and unusual case, it shows in the language of the street "just what the wholesaler, city retailer and consumer are up against."

It is an extremely difficult problem to arrive at the exact average loss in shrinkage. It varies according to season, district eggs come from dealers who ship them and several other items. Opinion as to average loss varies from 1 to 2 cents per dozen.

Shrinkage Heavy in July.

Of course there are instances which go below this and cases where it is much larger. For instance during warm weather of early July percentage of shrinkage was much larger than usual. Here is how the loss worked out on a case of eggs received by a Toronto wholesale house this week and which was regarded as an ordinary or average case:—

9 rotten eggs	17c
4 doz. No. 2, less per doz. 4c	16c
5 doz. small and dirty, loss per doz. 4c	10c
3 broken eggs	5c
Total	48c

Loss Averages Two Cents a Dozen.

Thus in this case the loss runs over 1½ cents per dozen. "But," said this wholesaler, "the loss is often much larger, there being more rotten, No. 2 and broken eggs. I should judge that with us, it would average up about 2 cents per dozen, and with ½ cent for express, eggs which we paid 22 cents for in the country really cost us 24½ cents." in lies the difference between quotations in the country and in the city.

Campaign of Education.

If it could be eliminated, it would be better not only for them, but country and city dealers and consumers as well. Realizing this, many produce firms are advising retailers how eggs should be handled to guard against loss, while retailers are themselves being urged to educate their customers to proper handling.

The wholesale dealers in Toronto have this year been particularly aggressive in this regard. They have sent a little circular to retail dealers regarding care of eggs and are also supplying these circulars to country merchants for distribution among customers.

The Rules Set Down.

The circular is headed "Do you want more money for your eggs? If so, observe the following rules":—

1. Provide plenty of clean, dry nests for your hens.
2. Gather the eggs daily in cool weather and twice a day in hot or rainy weather.
3. Do not wash eggs. Use the dirty, small, very long and grass stained eggs at home.
4. Keep eggs in a cool, dry place, which is free from odors.
5. Market your eggs twice a week if possible.
6. Don't sell eggs which were found in a stolen nest.
7. Keep the eggs out of the sun when taking them to town.
8. Don't keep eggs near oil, onions, etc., as they readily absorb odors.
9. Don't sell eggs known to be bad or which have been in an incubator. It is dishonest.
10. Male birds should not be allowed with hens, except for breeding purposes. After that period, kill roosters, save feed, and improve your egg product.

Then endeth the exhortation:—"The carrying out of the above rules will ensure more money for your eggs and an easy conscience."

Retailers should do their part in eliminating the loss in eggs by following these rules and also urging those who brings eggs to them to do so.

Back to Work Again

Our travellers will be home from their holidays on Saturday, and out after business again next week. They will be in better fettle for work and you will be more pleased to see them than if they had been working instead of holidaying the past two weeks. We have this to say to you now, that we are sending them out equipped with samples and prices that will well pay you to see before placing orders. During their absence we have collected a number of good things that will positively be worth while, and we bespeak for them that you wait and hear what they have to say.

It is Wasteful to Retail Oil With a Common Measure

you admit that, don't you? Then why do you continue as a salesman of oil to carry on oil business at a loss? It is a loss on the good profit of oil and a loss by deteriorating the value of the goods that become tainted through the odor of this waste oil.

The Bowser Self-Measuring System

saves money; because it eliminates the use of measures; it is guaranteed evaporation proof; it gives accurate, guaranteed measure directly into the customer's can, and with our Anti-Drip nozzle shuts off the flow of oil as soon as the pumping ceases. The whole operation may be performed with no danger of soiling your hands.

The Bowser way is the only way to keep oil and sell it to get the whole profit. Send for particulars. Book No. 5.

Credit Without Risk

The credit customer "we have always with us"—until he gets "in" too deep for comfort.

Allison Coupon Books

not only eliminate the "risk," but they make it a "cinch" to hold the customer, and likewise make it easier to deal with him.

HOW THEY WORK

A man wants credit. You think he is good. Give him a $10.00 Allison Coupon Book. Have him sign the receipt or note form in the front of the book, which you tear out and keep. Charge him with $10.00—no trouble. When he buys a dime's worth, tear off a ten cent coupon, and so on until the book is used up. Then he pays the $10.00 and gets another book. No pass books, no charging, no lost time, no errors, no disputes. Allison Coupon Books are recognized everywhere as the best.

Not an Enterprise for the "Quitter"

"If there is one enterprise on earth," says John Wanamaker, "that a 'quitter' should leave severely alone, it is advertising. To make a success of advertising one must be prepared to stick like a barnacle on a boat's bottom

"He must know before he begins it that he must spend money—lots of it.

"Somebody must tell him that he cannot hope to reap results commensurate with his expenditure early in the game.

"Advertising does not jerk; it pulls. It begins very gently at first, but the pull is steady. It increases day by day and year by year, until it exerts an irresistible power."

Follow us, Brother Grocer, every day into thousands of smiling stores throughout Canada—big stores, small stores, and middling. And you will learn—

That the flour that sells best is the flour that suits best. We have watched since 1888 the keen, alert, progressive dealers ride on to fortune. Always the foundation has been the Satisfaction of the Buyer.

Look through the stocks selected by the big leaders in the trade —no matter what other brand or brands they carry, you will find FIVE ROSES flour there—

Five Roses Flour

L C Harkness (D H)
34 Royal Bank Bldg

Not Bleached Not Blended

If you aspire after big flour sales some day, you must start at the bottom.

Build the base right.

Establish your business on such a firm foundation that it will be impossible for any competition the future may bring forth to steal away its prestige.

If the past does not prophesy falsely, Brother Grocer, FIVE ROSES flour and the LAKE O' THE WOODS connection will afford you a base as solid as a rock.

It must have many elements of success to have forced the sales expansion from 800 barrels in 1888 to 10,500 barrels a day with a still further increased capacity in sight.

Don't build on the shifting sands, Brother Grocer; don't YOU stock what progressive grocers are casting aside.

You can stock FIVE ROSES in any size or package to suit your trade.

Place Two or Three Bottles on Your Counter

Said an enterprising grocer to us: "While I make it a rule to keep my counters as free from goods as possible, so that customers can be waited on more easily, still I've found it a good plan to place two or three bottles of on the counters. The counters being free from other goods, the attention of customers is attracted directly to Shirriff's True Vanilla. A large percentage of them take a bottle up in their hands, or make some remark about extracts, or ask a question about Shirriff's. This gives me the opportunity to tell the advantages of using a real vanilla extract like Shirriff's, and I seldom fail to make the sale."

On request, we will be pleased to send you a list of selling points that have been found effective in promoting the retail sales of Shirriff's True Vanilla.

Not an Enterprise for the "Quitter"

¶ "If there is one enterprise on earth," says John Wanamaker, "that a 'quitter' should leave severely alone, it is advertising. To make a success of advertising one must be prepared to stick like a barnacle on a boat's bottom.

¶ "He must know before he begins it that he must spend money—lots of it.

¶ "Somebody must tell him that he cannot hope to reap results commensurate with his expenditure early in the game.

¶ "Advertising does not jerk; it pulls. It begins very gently at first, but the pull is steady. It increases day by day and year by year, until it exerts an irresistible power."

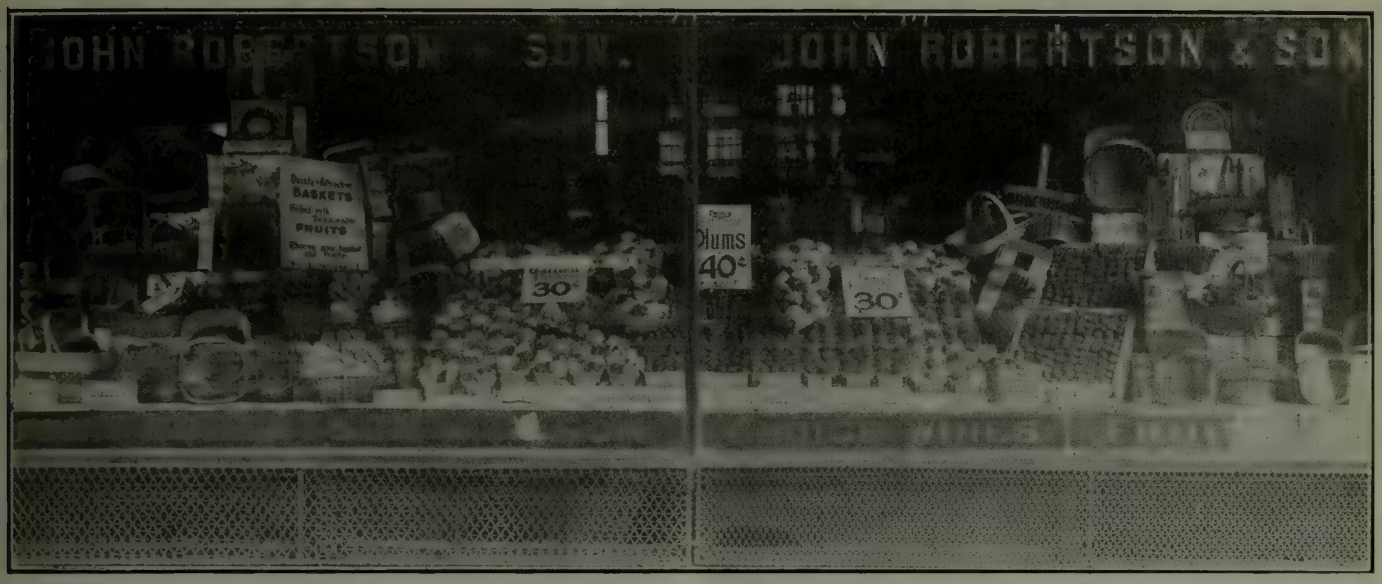
MONTREAL—CARDINAL—TORONTO—BRANTFORD—VANCOUVER



Fruit window shown by a Montreal dealer. Note the use of fancy baskets and show cards.

A Store Where Customers Do Not Wait

Service Made One of the Main Business Getting Features — Quality Goods Only are Pushed—Seasonable Window Displays Get Splendid Results as Silent Salesmen—Fancy Baskets Used to Show Fruit.

"Started in business over forty years ago." That John Robertson, head of the firm now doing business as John Robertson & Co., on St. Catherine St., west, Montreal, has seen a number of changes both in the city and in the general get up of goods during his business career, no one will doubt, and while a full history would prove interesting, yet space prohibits anything further than an expression of some of his ideas on the way to find the path that leads to success.

Quality and Service the Key.

"Found your business on quality and service. Never let your customer take away any goods unless you are absolutely certain that there can be no reason for complaint." So says Mr. Robertson and close adherence to this principle has placed him high up among the most influential grocers of Canada.

"Keep Your Clerks on the Move.

" I set a good example to my clerks, as I am continuously on the hustle myself." and certainly the first thing that strikes the visitor is the bustle all around the store. One would think that each clerk had only two minutes to get an order filled and get it off by train, so busy are they always and so quickly do they work. Surely this anxiety on the part of employes to be on time with every order must prove an eye-opener to those who have patronized other stores and who have been kept waiting unnecessarily long without being attended to.

Salesmanship at Its Highest.

Any manufacture, placing a new line on the market, and who is assured of its quality may count on a fair share of business once he places it in the hands of John Robertson; for his experience of forty years and more has created in him a self-confidence which has developed fully the powers of salesmanship, and his clerks—they are salesmen, too, always anxious to add a few articles to the orders they receive.

A demand for any line is naturally appreciated by the retailer, but waiting on a demand is waste of time because, as our subject believes, the ball can be set rolling by a selling introduction over the counter from men who have the confidence of their clientele.

The Window Thoroughly Valuable.

"The window itself can market goods," said Mr. Robertson, when reference was made to the illustration shown above. The splendid pulling power of his displays is reflected to no small degree in the daily receipts. What could be more appropriate for the warm weather than rich fruit as exhibited above and what strength was added to this window by that show card referring to the sick friend in the hospital. These little ideas form the perfect cogs of the business wheel.

Now it would seem that considerable time is spent on window dressing and that one man's time is continuously occupied in this department. But, as The Grocer has always advocated, it is a splendid thing to work ahead, as far as displays are concerned. In other words, make up the window in your mind's eye as you work at the counter and then when time comes round for dressing same, you will be in a position to place the goods there in a minimum of time and produce the maximum results by putting a finishing touch to it later on.

Use of Fancy Fruit Baskets.

Special mention should be made to the use of fancy baskets in displaying fruit. They give an extra favorable appearance and should be utilized by more dealers than now have them. One of the show cards in this window reads: "Dainty and attractive baskets filled with seasonable fruits. Choose your basket and fruits. We do the rest." Such a card would undoubtedly get business for any grocer who has clean, solid, rich looking fruit displayed attractively in the window. Summer is still with us, but it is passing, and merchants should make the most of such lines as fruit when it is easiest to sell it.

One of the features of John Robertson & Son's display is its regularity. The fancy baskets appearing at either end are arranged somewhat similarly. They are connected up appropriately with the fruit in the centre.

Beginning Business With $135 Capital

Newmarket, Ont., Dealer Who Commenced Business First With Pork Products—Bought Ten Ton Bacon at 6 Cents Once And Sold it at 13 Cents—Careful Student of the Markets—Methods He Believes to be Business Builders.

The self made man always inspires admiration. The man who starts in at the bottom of the ladder and mounts upward has more reason to be proud of his accomplishment than he who was up several rungs at the beginning. Thus we are always proud of the man who starts with little or no capital, and attains even a fair measure of financial independence.

Began on $135 Capital.

It was twelve years ago that C. H. Knowles started in the grocery business in Newmarket, Ont., or at least he commenced what later developed into a grocery business. The capital on which he started amounted to only $135, and that he has met with a fair share of success is shown by the fact that he now owns the building in which he does business and lives, and which he has just recently enlarged. Added to this a trade, which was of necessity on account of limited capital, small on the start has since developed into a business which runs close on $2,000 per week.

With such a small capital, progress was of course slow at the start. At first he was a local transient trader, maintaining his store as headquarters. It was mainly pork products that were handled on the start, but gradually groceries were added and eventually peddling was given up and a grocery business commenced in real earnest in Newmarket.

One hundred and thirty-five dollars is a small amount with which to open up a business of any kind, especially when it is necessary to purchase a team of horses and wagon on the start. It requires fine financing to float a business on such a small capital. In this case the $135 bought one horse and wagon. On the strength of his ownership of a horse and wagon, he was able to get another horse to complete the team on credit—for which he gave his note. It was on the strength of what he expected to do that his first small stock was purchased.

Progress Meant Hard Work.

Progress was slow—Mr. Knowles admits that, but it could not be otherwise under the circumstances. It has, however, been gradual, which shows that it was being built on a good, solid foundation. It has required a great deal of hand work—this, Mr. Knowles also admits. Those who would woo success must follow the same hard road.

Asked as to the chief things he considers have helped him to build up his business, Mr. Knowles enumerated good buying, good location, good goods, and good service. These four "goods" work for a strong combination.

Studies the Markets.

"One of the things I consider the most important," says Mr. Knowles, "is good buying. By following the markets closely, goods may be purchased at the best time. I find that I make a great deal through this item alone.

"I find the Canadian Grocer of great value in following the markets so as to buy at the right time," added Mr. Knowles.

"A great many grocers are afraid to take a chance. I am not afraid to buy when I think the purchase is going to turn out to my advantage," he continued. "The second year I was in business I made a good deal by not being afraid to buy when my judgment told me that the time was ripe."

Big Bacon Purchase.

" I purchased ten tons of long clear bacon at six cents per pound one time. This I was able to do by a fall in the market which I felt would come to retail at 13 cents per pound."

A good location is another point on which he lays stress. He selected a town that gave promise of progress, and the correctness of his judgment is shown by the fact that Newmarket has nearly doubled in size in past dozen years. His location is quite good also. Situated somewhat away from the business section of the town, but on a street which people must use to reach the central portion, he has a good residential area to draw from.

Three Important Lines.

The store has three special departments which are given considerable attention and which, besides the sales produced in themselves, act as a magnet to attract other business to the store. Provisions, fish and confectionery, are these three departments. It is argued that the customer who comes for a pound of bacon or some fish may, perchance, see something else which she desires and purchase it as well.

Provisions being the line in which he first commenced, considerable attention is given to this department. There is a special counter devoted to it at the rear of the store flanked behind by a display refrigerator. It is realized that there is a considerable waste in slicing meat, so that a higher rate is demanded when sliced than when a whole piece is taken. The exact difference of sliced over unsliced runs about 3 cents per pound.

Sells Fish All Summer.

Shipments of fresh fish are received each Thursday morning. By getting it on Thursday, he finds good sale on this day as well as on Friday, the regular fish day. Of course they are kept on ice. Coming in regularly once a week, people become aware of the fact and know when and where to look for supplies.

Confectionery is shown in drums, arranged on the shelves behind the counter and tilted up so as to display the goods to advantage. A small showcase is also used, but it is intended to put in a silent salesman in the near future.

Believer in Good Fixtures.

Mr. Knowles is also thinking of other improvements. He has recently made an extension to his store and put in a metallic ceiling. He is now considering the remodelling of the front of his store and has an eye on his fixtures for the interior. He has just added a new closed in delivery wagon. He believes that all these things help to increase business.

OUR NEWFOUNDLAND LETTER.

St. John's, Aug. 5—(Special).—Newfoundland's dull month, July is past and dealers are looking for a brightening up of trade now. The weather has been poor, and fish could not be cured, but with a change of weather some new produce will be along shortly and put some money in circulation.

Vegetables will be a scarce article in Newfoundland the coming fall. Nearly all the farmers have reset their crops and have had them destroyed, and the only thing that shows a sign of growth is the potato. Aready—an unusual thing—we have been importing turnips in bunches from Canada. One firm had quite a lot and they sold readily at a fair price.

A few cases of lobsters reached the city last week, but packers are not anxious to sell as they anticipate getting higher prices later in the season.

MANY HAPPY RETURNS

Eckardt & Co., wholesale grocers, for some years.

Observations Show Up Shortcomings

Attention Should Be Paid to Wrapping—Encouraging Customers to Take Small Parcels—The Use of Scoops in Handling Bulk Goods—Have Regard For the Delivery Horse—Reducing Its Work Through System.

By O. S. Johnston

It is easy to be a critic. We can always point out faults in others even if the proverbial mote has not been removed from our own eyes. Still criticisms help us in many ways, and afford a splendid means of inscribing on a tablet of the mind many "Things we shouldn't do."

It falls to the lot of the writer to be in a number of retail stores every day, and while he seldom gets an insight into the warehouse, yet he has noticed a number of inexcusable shortcomings on the part of clerks and even employers, so that the front counter has provided material for a number of "warnings" which ambitious clerks should heed, if they are to become what some proprietors term decided acquisitions.

Wrap Parcels Neatly.

We may be justified in attributing the desire of the housewife to have all parcels delivered to that comprehensive phrase, "advanced ideas," but we are certainly safe in saying that a number of small parcels would be carried away by customers, if only mere attention were paid to careful wrapping. The smaller the number of trips the driver has to make, the more opportunity will the dealer have of impressing on customers that he is in a position to pay full attention to orders phoned in from a distance.

But would any woman carry home a parcel if wrapped in the following manner: A quantity of sugar was ordered and the clerk while tying it up broke the string twice in an effort to make the parcel look shapely. On the third attempt everything looked alright, but the string was too tight and broke through the bag with results which are apparent. Instead of using a new bag, the clerk handed the parcel to the customer in spite of the fact that sugar was falling from it. She, of course, politely asked to have it delivered, and thus carelessness caused a trip which could have been avoided.

Shouldn't Handle Goods Too Much.

The insistent demand for pure and clean foodstuffs has necessitated the installation of machinery in many factories in order to do away with handling on the part of employees, but in many stores there is little attention paid to the clean little scoop which in a sense acts in a similar capacity.

When a woman is buying confectionery or other bulk goods, she does not care for the clerk to fill the bag with his bare hands. Rather would she have the scoop used, and if there happens to be an overweight the surplus should also be removed by the scoop. The clerk who does not respond to the most up-to-date rules will never make friends with good customers, and while we do not infer for one moment that the grocery clerk has any aversion to soap and water, nevertheless we must emphasize the importance of obeying every dictate and whim of Dame Fashion.

Systematise Your Delivery

The horse does not constitute any part of the front counter, but a dealer remarked the other day to a woman standing at the counter, that he would send along her order "just as soon as the rig came back." The latter seemed to be quite a favorite expression of his, and the writer later discovered that instead of grouping orders and dividing them into separate districts, he simply sent the man off on one errand and as soon as he came back the driver got instructions to attend to another order, which may have been left later but which was in the same direction. Now in some cases promptness may be shown by this system, if we can use the word "system" in this instance, but the horse is kept on the go the whole time. Apart from the wooden horse of Troy, there is no horse to-day (save perhaps the clothes horse) which can boast of any too great power of endurance, and dealers should remember that veterinary bills arising from neglect and overworking of horses reduce not only the profit on the goods delivered but further increase cost of doing business.

Be Civil Over Telephone.

There is a form of salesmanship, which for our purpose might be termed telephone salesmanship, and the man who manages to create sales over the phone is certainly worth a good salary. But the phone has been abused frequently, inasmuch as some tricksters have been known to send in an order which on being delivered was refused, and as a result some dealers have become suspicious of phone orders from strangers. Still it does not do to be over-inquisitive or impolite, as here is an instance where a fine order was lost:

The dealer took down the order in question, but did not recognise the name or address, and instead of being a little tactful, very abruptly asked whether the order was bona fide or not, and the occupation of the good man of the house. This fusillade of seemingly impertinent questions naturally unhinged the customer and the order was called off. Wouldn't it have been a great deal better for the grocer to have tactfully bemoaned recent losses and thus elicited the assurance that everything was O.K. Experience is certainly a cruel teacher!

A Little Jollity is All Right, But—

It is a fine thing to be pleasant with customers and crack a joke once in a while, but some clerks overstep the mark, and this was particularly noticeable when a clerk was attending to a pretty young girl and went so far as to say, "What next, girlie?" It was evident that the remark was resented, as she seemed quite anxious to get her order filled and away. Some spinster who has passed the allotted three score and ten, and who knows the man well behind the counter, might appreciate anything pertaining to youth, but the young ladies to-day are in most cases sufficiently aware of their youthful attractiveness, and do not need any assurance over the counter—at any rate not when there are other customers at hand.

The clerk who is anxious to make a success of things should always guard against "Things We Should Not Do," and make a point of visiting high-class stores in order to get a line on methods unknown to himself. By further following the example of men who have become past masters, the study of retail salesmanship should be more interesting and encouraging.

A SELF EVIDENT FACT.

CROP PROSPECTS AND DIFFICULTIES.

The continuance of fine warm weather is favorable for the Western Canadian crops, and a few days more of it will in some places put them out of danger.

In a few localities in Southern Manitoba, there have been rather severe hail storms that have done serious damage, but this will not seriously affect the general result. Everything at present indicates a good average yield, and the increased acreage in Saskatchewan will add materially to the total output. There is some anxiety being felt among the farmers upon the question of harvest help, and it is estimated that over 50,000 men will be required to garner the crop.

As we said in a previous editorial, there is much speculation on the prospects of another grain blockade, and, of course, the railways are being blamed, although just what they could have done, more than they have, is somewhat difficult to define. Another question that is now being widely discussed is the proposition to build larger interior storage elevators, where grain can be held during the winter and farmers enabled to finance upon it to meet their obligations. This method of meeting the difficulty was advocated in The Grocer last winter and has since become a live question.

Another remedy that is being strongly urged upon the farmers is the building of granaries upon their farms to store the grain at home till such time as it can be shipped. This, no doubt, will be done to a large extent, but there are many farmers who for two reasons cannot afford to do it. The first of those is that they cannot finance upon grain so stored, and many of them need the money to settle their accounts and pay running expenses. Another is that many cannot afford to build those granaries which are expensive.

To meet those difficulties, it has been suggested that the Government step in and render assistance by enabling the farmer to finance upon his grain so stored or aiding him to build granaries to take care of his crop.

It is pointed out that the Government last spring assisted many farmers to get seed grain to sow their farms, and it is reasonably argued that if the Government was justified in helping the farmer to put in his crop there can be no reason why it should not assist him in saving it. In a dry fall there seems little doubt that the home granary is the proper method of taking care of the grain that cannot be forwarded to the lake front before the close of navigation. In wet seasons, however, like last year, this plan is useless for the grain would spoil in them. To save large quantities of damp grain the interior hospital storehouse is a necessity, and it seems surprising that so little movement is made along that line.

Two weeks more and the hum of the binder will be heard throughout the land.

UNFOUNDED CRITICISM.

In last week's issue we went thoroughly into the question of profits the retailer was receiving on farm products, and showed that as prices advanced to the retailer his profits declined.

We have before us a letter from a grocer who adds to our comment on daily newspapers blaming the merchant for unduly enhancing prices. A portion of it will prove interesting. He says: "This is a question that Canadian merchants are thankful to you for taking up. At present the retailers are getting a great deal of blame for enhanced prices, which any one conversant with the trade will know is very unfair; and why the press of the country should go against the merchant is something I can't quite understand.

"Locally the papers have made some very unjust insinuations, as well as putting in leaders advising working people and farmers to form co-operative associations to reduce the cost of living. I suppose the same stand is taken by the press throughout the country—and I think it would be quite in order for some of the large advertisers to call around at the box office and see if the management can't make some impression on the editorial department."

This is a suggestion that might well be followed out. Some newspapers forget all about the importance of the merchants in their scramble to cater to the multitude. Merchants are the backbone of any town or city. Drive them out, and the stability of the place is sadly impaired.

THE INSPECTION OF FRUIT.

According to advices from Ottawa, it is learned that the Government intends keeping an eye on fruit shipped for home consumption as well as foreign.

Hitherto, only fruit sent out of Canada has been inspected. In many instances this opened the way to the unscrupulous shipper to send to the Old Country goods that would pass the inspector's censor, while inferior quality was sold in Canada. Particular attention will be paid to fruit going to Western Canada. The number of inspectors there and in Ontario will be doubled. Inspectors have been appointed for Winnipeg, the vicinity of Winnipeg, for Brandon, Regina, Medicine Hat, Calgary, Lethbridge and Edmonton. The staff will also be increased in the Maritime Provinces and British Columbia.

The Department of Agriculture is making a good move in this respect. There is no reason why food for home consumption should not be brought up to the same standard as that for export shipment. The people of Canada want good fruit, and the dishonest man should be compelled to distribute nothing else, since his scruples dictate otherwise.

The strength of the nation depends on the health of the people, and good food is absolutely necessary to good health.

VALUE OF WINDOW DISPLAY RECOGNIZED.

The value of good window display as a means of creating and increasing business is gradually being recognized throughout the grocery world.

At the annual grocery exhibition in London, England, this year, there is to be a new departure in the form of practical window dressing competitions. A model shop front will be erected, and windows will be dressed each day with suggestive displays by an expert. On either side of this shop, skeleton fronts will be erected representing open windows, each of which will be dressed by competitors.

This is unquestionably an excellent idea to add to the already excellent ideas carried out at this annual exhibition at which competitions of various kinds for grocery merchants and clerks are held. It should prove of great practical benefit to all grocers who attend, and our brother grocers in the motherland are to be commended in originating such a practical and important feature.

Good window dressing, once rather a neglected feature with many grocery stores, is now beginning to take its rightful place as a factor in business building. The grocer who does not take full advantage of its possibilities as a sales creator is losing much. A well dressed window is one of the best yet cheapest methods which the grocer has of securing business.

A DISASTROUS BUSINESS LEAK.

When a customer notices the slack methods followed by some clerks in the grocery store, it is time that the proprietor saw them too and effected some reforms.

Here is an actual experience of one buyer of groceries that exemplifies the need of a training course for clerks before they can be depended upon to go behind the counter to wait on customers. It is in connection with weighing goods. The clerk in question has apparently no conception of the importance of giving exact weight, no more and no less. If, for instance, a pound of cheese is asked for, the cheese is placed on the scale, and if it weighs three or four ounces above the sixteen, it is given for the price of the pound. The same has been found to be true with confectionery, sugar and other goods.

Invariably when this clerk weighs out sugar, more than the required amount is given. The clerk neither charges for the overweight nor takes off any. Here is a leak which is bound to amount to large proportions every week. The cause is due to insufficient instructions to clerks. This clerk evidently does not stop to think that the business has to pay for everything given away, and that in a year he will have presented the public with an amount about equal to his own salary.

To cure this and other profit destroyers, we would suggest a weekly or semi-monthly conference for clerks, when instructions would be given towards the cutting out of the business leaks, replacing them by business building methods, and the presentation of suggestions for the general good of the store.

ONE IDEA TO ONE WINDOW.

"No window display is big enough for two ideas."

This is a statement made by a window dresser who is a past master in the art of trimming the window. It contains much food for thought because it is reasonable. For a long time The Canadian Grocer has expressed the same idea in different words, and as we ran across the above expression it seemed like meeting an old friend.

Two ideas are one too many for one window. If showing summer drinks for instance, baking powder should not be in the window. Neither should canned goods go with soap or house cleaning brushes with cooked meats. In each case there are two ideas and the attention of the passer by is divided making the display an ineffective one.

But if house cleaning brushes are to be shown, make a background of soap or cleansing powders and a single idea is conveyed with two varieties of goods.

Some windows observed recently by representatives of The Grocer in various parts of Canada have been practically useless, simply because too many varieties of goods were thrown in.

One idea to one window, should be the slogan of every dealer.

KILLING FLIES IN THE STORE.

Now that many cities and towns have a weekly half holiday, the merchants troubled with flies have a splendid opportunity of getting rid of them. A report from Hamilton, Ont., relates how a number of butchers have kept down the pests by "getting after" them on the holiday and on Sundays. The best part of the scheme is that the merchant's personal attention is not required. The flies are done away with in his absence.

Before leaving the store at noon on Wednesday and on Saturday night, the blinds are pulled down within a short distance of the bottom and a large number of fly destroyers are placed where the sun or light will shine on them. This attracts the flies with the result that they are practically all extinguished. Emphasis is laid on the fact that one or two destroyers are not sufficient if all the flies are to be got. Be liberal and remove them entirely.

Grocers should not only profit by this themselves, but should advise their customers who are troubled with many flies to lay in a large stock of a good fly destroyer. Advice like this would invariably be taken.

Books Required for Careful Bookkeeping

Columns Used in Journal and Ledger — A Journal Where Posting is Done But Once a Month — Double Entry System Makes Everything Balance—Nothing Entered Up Until Paid For—Another Article of the Bookkeeping Series.

*By Henry Johnson, Jr.

In my first article on bookkeeping I indicated, without details, that my system was a time-saver. My first saving in the use of books already at hand. On the back of the stub of my check book I enter every morning the cash on hand. There is the money in the store; that on deposit in bank; the amount carried in bank in a large industrial city to save exchange. These added together give me cash O.H.; and this entry is used directly to test my balances—no further transferring of that amount. As a precaution, to aid recounting in case things do not work out, I have the items of petty cash on hand entered in an ordinary pass book; but that is not regarded as a book of entry since the checked amount is on the back of the check-book stub, as stated.

Information From the Cash Register.

The next thing I have right to hand is the bunch of cash register slips—items of "Paid Out," "received on account," etc. The paid out items are pasted into a common counter book, one page to a day, with the date stamped at top of page. They are run in close together, over-lapping each other, so that a sweep of the past-brush attaches the top of each slip to the book. The amounts are then carried out to the margin of the page and added. That total gives me one entry for each day, viz.: "P. V.," which stands for petty vouchers. This name was adopted because when we pay out an item like express, or cash for bananas, we take the signed receipt of the man who delivers the goods and thus have his voucher for the payment. That amount may run from $12.50 to $60 or more in a day. It goes into merchandise account as one single item, as noted. The receivers are added up, too, but that is only to check the cash, as we keep no ledger account on amount outstanding—I shall tell you why later on.

Posting Once a Month.

The big time-saver, however, is the six-column journal, or cash book, which enables me to post my cardinal accounts only once monthly. It is only necessary to post the sundries column from day to day; and even that is confined to such a limited number of items that it can stand over until all the posting is to be done.

You can readily obtain a six-column journal, so I shall suppose you have one right before you as you read the rest of this. On the left or debit page, write as captions of the successive columns: Cash, Mdse., Expense, Barn, Wages, Sunds. On the right or credit page, write: Cash, Mdse., Disct., Sunds. This will fill the debit page, but will only take up four columns on the credit page. Maybe you have some productive property with which you must keep account. Then you will have a ledger title on, say "Stevens Block," or Elmside Apartments," for these will have numerous credits in the way of rents. The caption for the fourth credit column would then be "Steve," or "Elmside," and sunds., standing for sundries, would go to the fifth column. However, for usual business, the captions I indicate will cover.

Operation of the Ledger.

Now set aside the journal and take up your ledger, which may be a small book of about 136 pages, pages same size as the journal, however, so they may set inside your safe together. To open this set of books, I must imagine your present condition, so we shall say that you have property and accounts as follows, and owe accounts indicated: Cash O.H. and in bank, called together "cash on hand," $270; merchandise stock, $1,860; accounts due you, $740; furniture and fixtures, $900; horses, wagons, etc., $400, and that you owe $220 for undiscounted bills, that is, bills not yet ten days old; and $500 to your bank for borrowed money.

On page 1 of your ledger open a cash account. This is done by writing "cash" at the top, in the middle of the page. At top of left column, write year, month and day; the "To Balance" and carry out the amount, $270.

Entering up Stock.

Turn to page 20 and open an account with merchandise in the same way. Here however, you will enter some details for your guidance at next inventory time. Bookkeeping teachers would have you do this part differently, but my way is precisely as effective and saves lots of time. So, when you have written the year, month and day, enter stock O.H. (which means on hand as per inventory), $1,860, but do not carry it out into the regular figure columns. Keep the amount in the writing column. On the line below write, "Plus a|cs., $740" and add the two amounts together, still within the writing columns, getting a total of $2,600. Then below write, "Less bills, $220," and subtract. Then on next line write, "Net stock, $2,380" and carry the figures into the figure column.

On page 40 open your expense account, but make no entries. On page 60 open your discount account. On page 100 open furniture and fixtures account and make entry as follows: "To inventory, $900," but do not carry into figure columns. Next line write, "Less 10 per cent., $90." Then subtract and carry out the $810 into figure columns. This shows that you have taken your depreciation. On page 80 open your barn account and enter as before indicated, the amount "per inventory, $400," and follow that by "Less 20 per cent., $80," which deduct, as before, and carry the remainder, $320 into the figure column. On page 102 open your bills payable account and there, on the CREDIT side, enter "Note at bank, $500," carrying the amount out to the figure-column.

Finding Net Worth.

Now if you will add all your debit entries together, you will find you have $3,780; then if you take off the one credit entry of bills payable, you will have a remainder of $3,280, showing your absolute net worth. How to get that into the books? On page 130 open an account with capital and there, on the CREDIT side enter, "By sundries, $3,280. Now if you take all your debit entries and your two credit entries, you will find that the total of each is the same as the other. That completes the opening of the double entry ledger and you are ready to begin your daily work. This indicates the nature and character of double entry—that one thing cannot be done alone. You cannot give to one without taking from another. You cannot charge one without crediting another. It is called "balance" just as your scale is called balance, because the putting of a weight on one end depresses that end until a weight precisely similar is put on the other end. Your books are in balance now. They must always be kept in balance. If they ever fail to balance, something is wrong which MUST be found and righted before it is possible for you to proceed.

You will understand, of course, that I have used imaginary figures and that you will use the correct figures that you find in your business. What you must do is get the figures right and get these entries made as a starter. Then

*The writer of this article is one of the most successful dealers on the continent. He has spent almost 30 years in the retail grocery business and is well equipped to answer questions and smooth out difficulties with which others may have met. If a special request is made names of inquirers will be omitted when their letters are printed for discussion.

you can proceed as I shall indicate next week.

I may say at this point, however, that I do not carry my accounts outstanding into the ledger because there is no use in that. Even if the totals are carried by you, so that you know approximately every day just how much you have "on your books," it is still not useful to carry those totals through the ledger. Accounts with individuals are subject to constant trifling readjustments which make it practically impossible to maintain a perfect balance on such a bunch of bills. It is better, therefore, to cut all that out of the general books and figures as I do.

Not Entered Until Paid for.

1 No goods are regarded as being in stock until they are paid for. Therefore, no entry is made in the books until the bill is paid. Theoretically, the goods, though in our warehouse, are still in the hands of the jobber until they are paid for.

2. In like manner, no goods are regarded as having left our hands until they are paid for. What we send to Mrs. Jones to-day on her account is regarded as being still in our store; and it remains there in theory until Mrs. Jones pays us her bill. Then the total amount of her account is run in as part of the day's sales. The books of my business are the books of a cash business; because that idea promotes simplicity—and it is precisely as informative at any stage as is that system which seeks, through cumbrous accounts, to keep constant track of bills owing and being owed.

Motor Delivery in Guelph Saving Money

Owners Claim it Takes Place of Three Horses—Are Using Two Men on it—Has Shelves for Small Parcels—Advertising Cards Are Placed on Sides Each Day.

Guelph, Ont., Aug. 8.—J. A. McCrea & Son, retail grocers, of Guelph, Ont., some time ago purchased a motor truck for delivery purposes, believing that by so doing they will be able to reduce the cost of getting goods out to customers.

The machine has a capacity of 3,000 pounds, although it cannot be said to be a heavy truck, being easily operated and at a minimum of expense for carrying capacity. That it may still have a greater carrying capacity for small orders than is usual, a special top has been constructed for it. Instead of merely having the floor, a rack with two shelves has been constructed so that floor space is really trebled. The advantage of this in a business like that of a grocer can easily be recognized. There are generally a large number of small orders, and instead of piling them one upon another, each one can be alloted a space of its own. When a stop is made it is not necessary to ransack through all the parcels on the truck, for the one required is right at hand.

Replacing Three Horses.

McCrea & Son went thoroughly into the proposition before purchasing, and believe that it is going to be a good investment in the fact that it will reduce the cost of delivery. The motor truck is doing the work which it formerly took three horses and three wagons to perform. It will only cut down the number of delivery men by one, as the firm intend to use two men on the truck, one to operate the car and the other to do the actual delivering. They have figured what they expect it will cost them to operate the car and on conservative estimating they claim they will save $1.00 per day as compared with what the horse delivery cost them. They don't expect the cost of operation to exceed $10.00 per week.

A Good Advertisement.

Beside the saving in cost, and the more efficient delivery service which they will now be able to give, there will no doubt be an advertising value attached to the car. One of the great attractors of trade in merchandising today is rapid delivery. The car is also going to be further utilized for advertising purposes. The sides are closed in with a wire barrier, and in the centre is a rack into which advertising cards will be placed. Thus a message of special offerings or new goods will be given to customers in all parts of the city each day.

The bottlers of Montreal have formed a Bottle Exchange, the immediate purpose of which is to protect users of branded bottles, and to facilitate rapid delivery to the owners of bottles which incidentally come into one another's factory. Twenty-nine firms are not cooperating. The exchange has already shown large results, having handled something like 60,000 doz. bottles during the first two months. The secretary of the exchange is Alexander Murphy, of Chas. Gurd Co., Limited, Montreal.

Following items were taken from the issue of The Canadian Grocer of Aug. 9, 1892:—

Twenty years ago sugar, according to the Grocer's market report, was selling at a low figure, namely, $4.25 on Montreal basis. Sales were at a low ebb, even in face of the cheap sugar. "It is obvious," says our report," that the season's sales will not aggregate so many tons as preserving requirements called for last year." To-day sugar is $5.05 on the same basis.

"The terms of engagement having expired, Donald Morrison has left the firm of Lucas, Steele & Bristol, wholesale grocers, Hamilton, and purposes shortly going into business for himself."

"The grocers of London, Ont., challenge the grocers of St. Thomas to a game of baseball to be played on Civic Holiday, Aug. 16. The match is to be for a quantity of flour or something of that nature to be given to the poor."

Editor's Note.—Evidently fondness for baseball is a hereditary disease in London. The grocers there to-day are just as keen over the game as they were twenty years ago.

"The Halifax Retail Grocer's Association held their annual meeting on the 2nd inst. at St. Mary's Hall. It was largely attended. Following officers were appointed for the ensuing year:—President—Jas. Editor's Note.—It would be interesting to know how many of above are still in business in Halifax.

It is understood that a large party of Canadian manufacturers will visit Great Britain and inspect the industries of that country.

Orillia Merchant Favors Saving Daylight

Rescinding of the By-Law Giving an Extra Hour After Work a Mistake in His Opinion—Working Men Opposed It — Thought it Would Eventually Mean Longer Hours.

The Daylight Saving Bill passed in Orillia, Ont., in June had a short life. It will be remembered that the Orillia council, believing that an extra hour of daylight would be acceptable to the people of that town, passed the by-law, declaring that with June 23 clocks were to be put forward one hour until August 31

This meant that Orillia merchants would open their stores an hour earlier in the morning and close an hour sooner in the evening than they had been accustomed to do. It also meant laborers in factories, clerks in stores, offices, etc., began work earlier in the day and quit earlier in the evening. In fact the entire commercial works of Orillia were put in motion an hour before those in the remainder of Ontario and of course shut down the 60 minutes sooner in the afternoon. This was to provide an hour more daylight after hours.

The by-law went into effect all right, but did not hold its force very long. There were some objections and these took on a more determined appearance as the days of more daylight passed by.

Favored By One Merchant.

What one Orillia merchant, doing a large general business, thinks of the innovation is interesting.

"So far as our experience was concerned," a member of the firm stated to The Canadian Grocer, "we found the measure very satisfactory.

"The trouble arose through a considerable number of working men refusing to fall in line with the by-law. This caused considerable confusion in the town, and those in favor thought it was better to rescind the by-law rather than prolong something that was irritating so many.

Advocates a Dominion Measure.

"We believe that if the measure were adopted by popular vote, and the working men consulted, it would be very beneficial to any town. If it were to become a provincial or Dominion measure it would be even more beneficial.

"We think too, that it should be extended so that the season would begin about the first of May. The advantage of changing the clock is that it does not in any way interfere with a person's regular working hours.

Why Laborers Objected.

"The objection of many working men came through their idea, encouraged by a few individuals, that it was a scheme of the manufacturers to enforce a longer day in the near future. The present factory day here, is from 7 o'clock to 6.

"We feel confident," he added "that if it were universally adopted this measure would bring a great deal of satisfaction to those who enjoy the brief Canadian summer."

Confectionery Allows Good Profits

Dealers in General Carry Confectionery—Bulk and Package Goods Should Both be Featured—How One Dealer Uses the Children—The Silent Salesman Plays an Important Part—The Special a Week Idea.

Some few years ago the average grocer scarcely ever gave the confectionery traveler a hearty reception, believing that this line was entirely out of his sphere; and furthermore not by any means profitable. He evidently was convinced that the exclusive confectioner was the only and logical distributor of candies. But to-day the story is different, as the majority of Canada's leading merchants would not consider their stock, and incidentally their service, up-to-date unless they had a generous amount of sweetmeats on hand.

No doubt the turn in the tide is due in no small degree to persistent work by the traveler and the dealer's realization of the fact that he could sell these goods at a good profit. He has therefore fallen into line with progress and has enlarged his ideas of salesmanship with the result that he finds it comparatively easy to purchase and resell any line with quality as a trademark.

Makes Good Profit.

That there is good money to be made from confectionery there can be no reasonable doubt, and if every merchant would just remember that he had a sweet tooth himself in his boyhood days and would take stock of those customers who are mothers, he could very soon persuade them to take home a small package, and would soon notice that this step was only one of a number leading to big confectionery business.

"Win a child and you have the parent." Such is the wise saying of an experienced dealer who does a highly satisfactory business in confectionery. He sometimes gives children who visit his store a small supply of nice chocolates, and before they leave does not forget to say "just tell your mother to buy you a few when she comes down again." He finds that the latter advice is always given and has been the means of considerably increasing the volume of business done.

Place Before the Eye.

There is no use in having a showcase of high-class confectionery unless you place it where it will be seen by all visitors, as you expect the case and tasty display to create buying desire.

The writer noticed an elaborate case in a store not long ago which instead of being up on the front counter or thereabouts was placed near a slab on which bacon, etc., was cut. How could any one expect a customer to think of ordering confectionery when ordering bacon in this portion of the store and seeing it being sliced? Isn't it natural that it would have much better scope in a position where it could be seen by everyone entering the store?

The grocer does not need to look for business in bulk goods only, but should devote his attention also to the sale of package candies. It may be admitted that the woman purchaser as a general rule wants loose chocolates, etc., but there are exceptions, and it is to take care of such exceptions that the carrying of pretty boxes of confections is to be urged. "Take her one to-night," is the wording on a showcard hanging over a neat display of chocolate boxes in a store known to the writer and from all reports the hint has been well taken by a number of the young men who are pretty regular visitors. This serves to emphasize the value of a neat and catchy showcard.

It has been found a good idea to have a special confectionery sale every week and merchants who have turned over a good number of dollars this way state that they insist on their clerks and drivers mentioning this sale to customers once or twice before the actual day comes round. Prices can be made attractive without reaching the "cut" limit and the customers who are satisfied with the value received mention the fact to others and a number of new faces are noticed around the store each week. This is the age of specialisation and the man who can build up trade on his own initiative is the man who can rest assured that his business will be in a healthy condition when others are experiencing "the rainy day."

Montreal, Aug. 9.—Wholesalers report that collections could not be better and there seems to be a good amount of cash on hand throughout the trade. Some of the larger houses are showing a substantial increase monthly over business done during corresponding periods last year, and as 1911 was by no means a poor one, it can be readily seen how healthy things are to-day.

Chief interest is centred around the soaring movement of canned goods, but news of an increase in prices does not come as a surprise to-day so general is the trend upwards of foodstuffs.

Clover Leaf salmon has scored a further 5-cent advance for 1-lb. talls, while ½ lb. flats are up 2½ cents.

French vegetables have been marked up to $1 per case. This is not surprising as it is generally known that the weather has been thoroughly unfavorable to growing crops.

Lobsters, though, are a little easier, 1 lb. flats being down 5c, though no change is registered for the ½ lb. flats.

Corn and tomatoes are also up 2½ and 10 cents respectively.

SUGAR.—Market has become quieter both in primary centres and locally and there is a fair volume of business passing with prices seemingly steady.

European reports go to show that the weather for growing crop is still favorable and that no damage has been done by drought as the bears would have had us believe about three weeks ago.

There is nothing unusual to report this week.

DRIED FRUITS.—A better business in California fruits is reported, but there was no pronounced demand for any particular line the call for each line on the average being fairly clearly defined.

As far as prunes are concerned it looks as if the bulk of the business being done is for export and there does not seem to be much call from wholesalers. Raisins are coming into the limelight more of late, the demand thus showing an improvement. But there is still some anxiety shown by packers as there are further reports to hand about a drop in previous estimate of coming crop and better prices are looked for in the future than are offered at present.

Currants are being brought in small quantities only, particular attention being paid to prospects of coming Greece crop. While no report is to hand of any break in weather which would seriously impair the fruit, still the slightest change would change market standing and create more activity.

Dates should be here from Muscat in about two months, as the crop is far ahead and there should be a ready sale for full supplies as the demand for dates in cartons is growing every week.

TEAS.—Market in general is active Japans being in limelight. Considerable speculation is going on as to probable effect of the tumult in Shanghai, importers as a rule experiencing great difficulty in satisfactorily transacting money matters and getting shipments.

Black teas are firm owing to strong feeling prevailing in primary markets, but greens are simply changing hands under a normal demand. In fact markets in East are all firm.

COFFEE.—Roasters report a growing trade, and retail demand is by no means cut down by high prices prevailing.

The new Brazil crop it is believed, will not, as a whole, come up to last year's standard, as the roasting quality has been hurt by the mixing of unripe beans with the ripe. The large dealers in U.S.A. centres have been holding off expecting lower prices but the Canadian trade seems to look for no decline, which probably accounts for the fair business passing.

The business done in new crop Sicily almonds is not so heavy as last year and it looks as if dealers are in a waiting attitude. It is generally expected, though, that there will not be an active busisess done in almonds this year as a large number of orchards have not been irrigated and the quality of the almond is not up to standard. ONTARIO MARKETS.

POINTERS—

Early Fruits and Vegetables—Opening prices out.

Salmon—Opens at high level.

Blueberries—Higher than last year.

Toronto, Aug. 8.—Probably most interesting feature of week has been naming of opening prices on several lines of canned goods. In early fruits and vegetables, prices compare quite favorably with those of last year, with exception of blueberries which are higher than last year. As predicted prices on new pack salmon are high, best grades being 45 cents over last year's opening prices.

Travellers from wholesale grocery houses are back on the road again after a two-week holiday and volume of orders that has been coming along has been quite appreciable for season.

There is a good demand for sugar for preserving. Last week's famine of supplies has been relieved at least in part. Sealers are selling well with retail trade, while wholesalers are already receiving some sorting orders. Sealer rings are in demand.

SUGAR. — Outstanding feature in sugar last week was marked scarcity of supplies which, however, is being gradually relieved. With small stocks held in second and third hands, when preserving rush came, flood of orders could not be cared for on time.

There is at moment a fairly steady front to market with a good demand which with late fruits now coming on and promising well is expected to be maintained.

Reports of growing beet crop in Europe still continue good. In regard to beet crop in Canada, rains have fallen in the beet growing sections of Canada during past few weeks and have greatly improved crop prospects, which are now reported as better than for several years at this time.

SYRUPS AND MOLASSES.—This is quiet season in syrups and molasses, if these lines can be said to have a really quiet season. Even now there is a fair volume of trade, although not on liberal scale of other seasons. New crop honey is on the market.

DRIED FRUITS.—There is little interest in spot fruits but as pointed out last week, some firms are still offering concessions to clear certain lines of prunes. Figs and dates are well to an end.

Attention to futures is apparently lagging somewhat, dealers have in many cases arranged for early supplies. Advices from Greece note currants as firm and progress of weather there is being followed. Few or no prices are being quoted on raisins from Spain. Last year packers quoted speculative prices early and a turn in affairs caused them to lose money. This year they are waiting. Crop is reported further advanced than in other years.

TEA.—There is little change to note in market conditions during past week or so. There is a fair seasonable demand locally with a steady tone maintained.

COFFEE.—There can at least be no concessions expected in coffee prices here unless something unexpected happens. This is shown by assertion of coffee men that they are making no money on coffee now, profits having been shaded to the vanishing point. New York continues to waver day by day on reports from Europe and Brazil.

Anticipated rush of buyers for new crop coffee has not as yet been discovered. Roasters in both Europe and America have been sparing in giving orders.

SPICES.—With annual pickling operations drowing closer, there is a healthy movement of general spices with pickling spice a prominent line. Top prices for the year were paid last week in New York for spot as well as future cloves but still the N.Y. market is below Zanzibar and London. There has been a slightly softer tone to white pepper following reports of large shipments. "Our prices on pepper have not been keeping pace with primary advances," remarked one dealer this week.

CANNED GOODS.

TORONTO. — Opening prices have been given out this week on a couple of lines of vegetables as well as a number of lines of early fruits. Peas have not been included. Prices on this line were out long before this last year, but this year season is late and some packing is still being done.

Spinach has opened at $1.30 per doz., the same figure as last year. Asparagus tips are cheaper, quoted at 2.27½ for 2.s as compared with $2.55 last year. We speak of grade A.

Black and red pitted cherries in heavy syrup are both 2½ cents per dozen below last year's opening price. Red and black currant are the same as last year, while gooseberries are lower, 2.s in heavy syrup being worth $2 as against $2.27½ last year. Pineapples are on a higher range and 2.s in sliced and heavy syrup selling at $2.05. Rhubarb is the same as last year.

Prices on blueberries to the wholesale trade have been also given out and show about a 20 per cent advance over last year. Greater percentage of these are canned in Maritime Provinces and crop was badly damaged by heavy frost in spring and for a while prospects were quite black. Wholesalers will ask about $1.35 for 2.s on basis of opening prices and $5.50 for gallons, which is indeed high compared with prices of a few years ago. However, as pointed out by one broker, quality has been greatly improved by packers in recent years, accounting for increased demand. Nothing is known regarding perecentage of delivery. Last year delivery was small and it will also probably be this year. "We are not sure of getting any at all, said one wholesaler.

As indicated previously in The Grocer, prices on salmon will be high this year. Wholesalers have received their prices although figures to retail trade have not yet been issued. However, prices are above last year and by quite a considerable amount, sockeyes in talls being $1.50 per case above last year, flats $1 per case higher, North River $1.50 per case higher and cohoes $1.25 per case higher. There is no change in pinks as pointed out would be the case While prices to retailer have not been issued, The Grocer understands that 1 lb. talls will cost $2.87½ per dozen; 1 lb. flats, 2.92½; ½ lb. 1.70; red springs about $2.50; cohoes, $2.30 and pinks $1.35. In five case lots they will be 2½ cents per dozen less. Nothing definite regarding volume of pack is known but as indicated by figures, it has been generally poor as was expected.

POINTERS—

Sugar—Scarce.

Winnipeg, Aug. 7. — The business situation is viewed favorably by all men of experience in western affairs. Crop prospects are now No. 1, and the consensus of opinion is that the fall and winter business of present year will greatly exceed in volume that of 1912. Experts place increase in wheat yield for year at 20,000,000 bushels.

Collections are fair for time of year and volume of cash trade is satisfactory. There are no idle men in the towns and there is a general call for labor.

There has as yet been no sign of falling off in local grocery trade but when harvest begins, as it is hoped in two weeks' time, a lull may be expected.

Prices are steady in all staple lines and with exception of a really extraordinary demand for sugar there are no special features to report.

SUGAR.—Preserving season is now in full swing and crop of wild fruits in many sections of country is so large that demand for sugar has exceeded all expectations and there have been complaints of supplies not coming along fast enough. Market is firm and if present demand keeps up prices can hardly help but rise.

DRIED FRUITS.—The recently announced revision of freight tariffs on the Southern Pacific and Santa Fe roads has caused some uneasiness here as to ultimate effect on California fruit prices, but it is too soon to form conclusions. Apricot crop is reported light. Currants, raisins and prunes are firm. An advance in canned strawberries is probable. Trade in dried fruits is somewhat dull and will be so as long as the market is so well supplied with green stuff.

NEW BRUNSWICK MARKETS.

St. John, August 7.—The period of quiet which has prevailed on local market for last month or so, still continues. There is little action in most lines, although demand for average stock of household provisions, and particularly of summer goods, is brisk.

Local dealers are keenly interested at present in matter of supply of canned goods. They have been looking for a sixty per cent. delivery, but fear that in some lines there will be quite a falling off, if reports prove correct. It is expected that the first deliveries of new pack of green peas will be received in a fortnight at latest, but no prices have been listed as yet. In view of the reported encouraging crop said to be most pleasing, it is thought that there may be a reduction in price. Canned strawberries are going to be higher than last year. Weather according to local advices, interfered materially with the yield in many districts and shortened the supply. No prices have been given on beans, peaches, apples, pears, etc., and it is difficult to foretell just how quotations will stand.

There has been good local demand for sugar, due to extra consumption for preserving purposes. The market is unsettled.

NOVA SCOTIA MARKETS.

Halifax, Aug. 7.—Wholesale grocery dealers report business in excellent condition. Travelers now on the road are sending in good orders, and local trade is fully up to average for season. Collections taken as a whole are fairly satisfactory. Firm prices prevail for most lines. Rice market is particularly strong. Rangoon is quoted at 4¼ to 4½ and Patna at 5¼ to 5½ cents.

Canned salmon is higher. Price has been marked up from 50 to 75 cents per case, owing to unfavorable outlook for season's catch.

Raw sugar market is reported to be easier, but local prices remain unchanged. The steamer Vinland that arrived here yesterday from San Domingo, brought nearly 11,000 bags of raw sugar.

Molasses market is firm. Fancy Barbadoes in barrels is quoted at 40 cents, in tierces, 38 cents, and in puncheons, 35 cents.

The Bean Situation in County of Kent

Fair Crop Anticipated. Provid-ing August Weather Remains Favorable—Dry Warm Weather Wanted— Farmers' Ideas Tend to Minimize Extent of Yield—An Estimate of the Crop.

Chatham, Ont., Aug. 8—(Special)—Reports from various parts of the bean-growing district of Kent indicate that the success or failure of the bean crop this year will depend to a large extent upon the weather conditions in the latter part of August and the first of September. With favorable weather the yield will be fair; if frosts occur or weather conditions are otherwise unfavorable, the result will be a decidedly short crop.

Under the most favorable conditions the crop may total 800,000 bushels, the lower average crop per acre being to some extent counteracted by the larger acreage sown. The 800,000 bushel estimate is that of N. H. Stevens of Chatham, who is closely in touch with the bean situation and whose outlook is usually of the optimistic nature.

Better Crops on High Lands.

In general, farmers who were fortunate enough to plant their beans on high, sandy lands will have a good crop. On the low, cold lands, beans have not done so well, the crop is decidedly backward, and unless the fall is late there are strong chances that the crop in many quarters will be a total failure.

It is stated that in the bean growing sections many low lying fields were not as far advanced in the last week of July as they usually are on July 1. The dry weather earlier in the month, together with the cold nights, has hampered growth.

A Backward Growth.

In regard to conditions in Orford township, where beans are extensively grown, Reeve Daniel Ferguson states:

"Beans are not growing like they generally do. In other years we have been forced to cultivate them about haying time, but this year a cultivator can be run through most of the fieldts even at the present time. The beans have been a great deal larger by July 1 in other years than they are right now (last week in July). Some of the fields are practically just up, and will not amount to anything unless we have a very late fall."

More Optimistic View.

The foregoing information comes largely from bean growers. N. H. Stevens, president of the Canada Flour Mills Co., of Chatham, is decidedly more optimistic. He says:

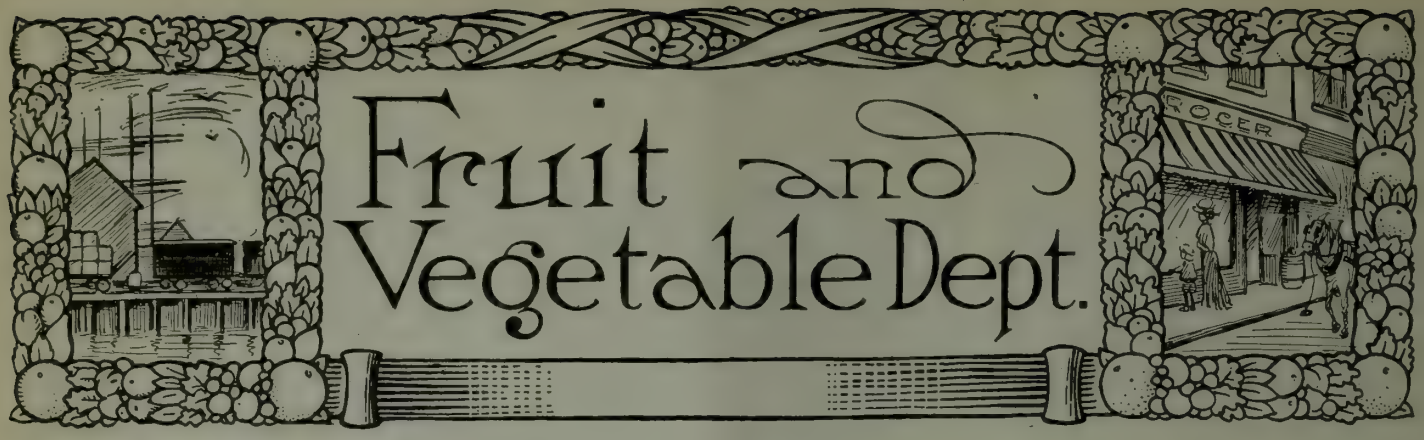
"Unless something happens in the near future to destroy them, we will have a good average crop per acre and a larger acreage than last year. I think we should have a crop of 800,000 bushels in Ontario. The range of the crop for the past 20 years has been from 500,000 to a million bushels.

"There are many fields of beans all over the bean section that can be pronounced extra good, while there are other fields that were planted a little late and didn't come up well owing to the dry weather. These will not amount to much. but the bean crop on the whole will be satisfactory if the weather is fine to harvest them.

Prices May Be High.

"Owing to the fact that there are practically no old beans in the country, the chances are that the price will be very satisfactory to the farmer. I don't think there are 10,000 bushels of beans in the country in the farmers' hands. The price has been so good that the farmers have sold all they possess. As high as $2.65 a bushel has been paid. The fields needed the recent rains very badly, and now they are coming along nicely.

The late beans will also be a fair yield if the frosts hold back. Some of the fields have been affected by the cold, wet ground, but with warm weather now they will grow rapidly.



Home Grown Supplies on the Increase

In Both Fruits and Vegetables—Supplanting Imported Goods —Lawton Berries to the Fore—Canadian Peaches and Plums on Market—Lemons Steady in Face of Unseasonable Weather.

Home grown goods have been increasing in supply and gradually overshadowing competing lines of imported goods. This is true both in vegetables and fruits, and season has by no means reached its height, but will continue to show greater strides in this direction in the near future.

As the seasons come and go so must the lines of fruit which the grocer sells. We have already seen the end of strawberries while raspberries are decidedly on the wane and will be followed shortly by cherries, although there are still some late varieties of this fruit. Lawton berries are now to the fore while currants, gooseberries and blueberries are now running their course. Canadian peaches and plums have made their appearance but fancy varities of these as well as pears and grapes are being imported from across the line.

Canadian potatoes are on the increase and as old stock are overshadowed by U.S. new, so must they in turn be supplanted by the home grown article. This will not be at a far distant date although New Jersey is still sending along some stock.

Tomatoes and cucumbers have followed the lead of potatoes, or perhaps they themselves may be said to be leading, for supplies have increased materially at certain centres with a corresponding easing off in prices.

Recent weather in many portions of province has not been conducive to lemon demand. In face of this fact markets are fairly steady and with a return to seasonable weather, we would be fairly well assured of a continuance of steadiness in this line.

MONTREAL.

GREEN FRUITS.—The fruit market is generally active and high prices prevail. Mostly California fruits are being offered. Pears and peaches sold freely but the market for oranges was decidedly bad owing to an excessive amount of common fruit forced upon it. Strawberries are now exhausted and nothing good can be said about the quality of much of the fruit this year. It is hoped that the raspberries will show up better. Two cars of Texas peaches were disposed of, one selling at one dollar per crate flats, the other reaching $1.50 for 6-basket crates.

VEGETABLES.— "High prices but good demand," sums up the situation, and wholesalers report that there is a good strong movement of all stocks. Quite a large amount of tomatoes were sold during the week and fetched good prices. Cucumbers, as is customary at this time of the year are selling freely but some offered are on the small side and are over-ripe. Carrots are still scarce while potatoes are in better supply.

TORONTO.

GREEN FRUITS.—Domestic fruits continue to swing into greater prominence under increasing supplies and varieties. The Montmorency red sour cherries are done. Another kind now coming on is the Murillo, a very dark sour variety and fine for preserving, the juice being wine colored.

There were some belated shipments of raspberries this week but season can now be said to be over. Thimble or Lawton berries are now ready, crop is said to be good and prices next week should be fairly reasonable. This week 13 to 15 cents is being asked.

Imported fancy fruits are still coming in for considerable attention. Canadian peaches are coming forward but prices will vary according to arrival of supplies.

Recent cool weather has been by no means beneficial to demand for lemons but market maintains quite a steady tone.

VEGETABLES.—With supplies of Canadian vegetables increasing, prices are on the downward path, some lines showing substantial reductions. Tomatoes have followed last week's prediction and eased down to 75 to 80 cents, and will probably reach the 65-cent mark by end of week. There have been further concessions in cucumbers which are selling around 30 to 35 cents per basket.

Canadian supplies of new potatoes are fast increasing, and will shortly supplant those from across the line, although some are still being brought from New Jersey..

Dealers Have Adopted Waiting Policy

Until Something Definite Regarding Canadian Wheat Yield is Known—See Nothing to be Gained by Loading Up on Flour Now—Prospects in West are Good—First Wheat Harvested in Manitoba.

As usual at this season, a waiting attitude has been adopted by the trade. In fact this has been the case for some time and now with a new crop fast developing it could hardly be expected to become less prominent, especially with the rosy reports that are being sent forward from Western Canada regarding progress of crops there.

Fact of matter is that retail dealers find nothing to be gained by pursuing any other than a waiting policy. At this season demand for flour through the channels of the grocer is rather inclined to dullness, although with moderate weather which has ruled during greater portion of summer, falling off should be less noticeable than in other years. At any rate, they regard it as best not to carry heavy stocks during summer unless there is something to be gained by an advancing market. This is not evident this year and retailers are quietly waiting until something definite can be gleaned regarding this year's yield in Canada.

Prospects in Canadian West are at present particularly bright for a record yield but there is always that uncertainty lurking in the background that something may turn up to mar the rosy situation. The first wheat of 1912 harvest in Manitoba was cut near Souris on Monday, but harvesting will not be general for several days.

MONTREAL.

FLOUR.—Business has begun to pick up and there is a good active trade being done both for local and country account. Export business is also better and cables have been more in line lately.

ROLLED OATS.—There is no change to note this week, but it should be remembered that prices are well maintained owing to shortage of good milling oats. It will be three or four weeks yet until the new oats are on hand and while a downward movement should be noticed then, still we can pretty positively state that no immediate decline can be expected.

TORONTO.

FLOUR.—There is a general good trade in small lots for immediate requirements reported but as natural at this season car lot business is slack. General market is rather listless, there being a waiting attitude on all sides until something definite evolves out of approaching crop.

Future of winter wheat flour appears rather uncertain. On one hand there are those who point out that we are far above the level of other countries and must therefore come down with new crop, while others maintain that as winter wheat has not had a good year that prices must rule steady.

One thing is certain and that is that at present prices, export business is not possible. A local flour man on a trip to England writes that there is no chance of Canada getting trade unless prices come down to a par with Australia and other competing countries. Ontario wheat is lower this week again and down to 95 cents.

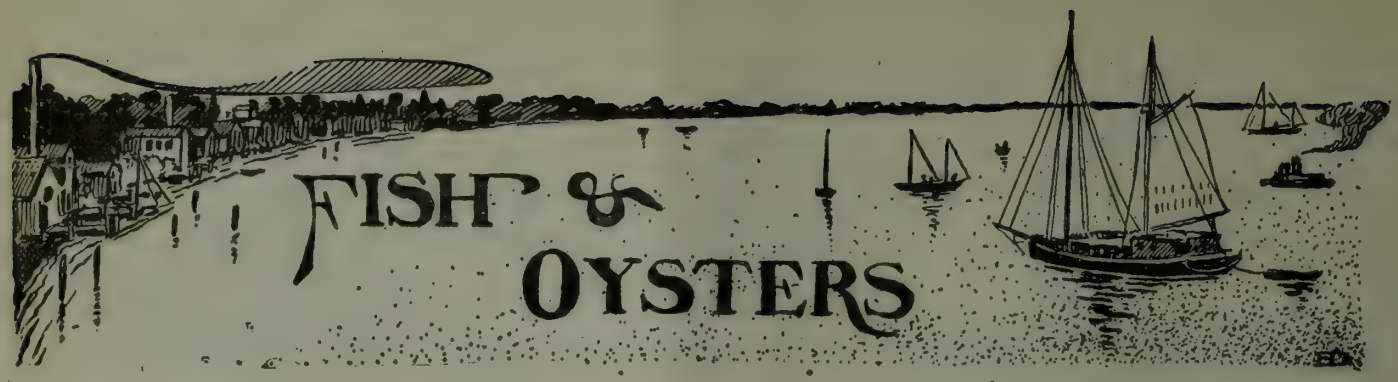
MARITIME BOARD OF TRADE.

Truro, N.S., Aug. 8.—Business men of the Maritime provinces are looking forward to the 18th annual meeting of the Maritime Board of Trade to be held here on August 21 and 22.

The work to be conducted as set forth in the official programme indicates that from a business standpoint the convention will be an important one. The subjects include suggested improvements in transportation, bonusing cattle raisers, better telegraphic service, the Workmen's Compensation Act, immigration, Board of Trade co-operation, etc.



Usual Summer Quietness in Fish Trade

Maintains an Even Tenor—Conditions Against a Big Trade at This Season—Mackerel Have Struck in Along Nova Scotia Coast Again—Halibut is Firmer.

The usual listnessness that prevails in fish markets during summer months is now present. A certain trade is being done but both supply and climatic conditions are adverse to any large volume being done.

Cod and haddock are plentiful. Nova Scotia reports that mackerel have again struck in along the coast. American markets are taking large portion of fresh supplies.

Certain Canadian markets report short supply of halibut with prices firmer. Some supplies are being brought from the United States side of Pacific coast and cost from this direction is naturally more.

Tone of dry cod market is still easy, extremely large catch in Norway this year being big bearish feature.

QUEBEC.

MONTREAL. — The most interesting feature is the scarcity of halibut and advance in price. Supplies are being secured from the American side of the Pacific coast, the cost of course being higher and the customs duty also a considerable item. The season for Gaspe salmon is practically at an end but supplies of fresh B.C. salmon are good. Very little brook trout are obtainable at present and fresh dore and pike are also on the scarce list.

ONTARIO.

TORONTO. — Halibut, as for some time now, continues one of the prominent lines on local market, sharing honors with lake trout and whitefish. There has been no change in prices while business is of a summer character.

Some interest is being displayed in future business, as another season is fast approaching but this interest is mostly confined to the wholesaler who finds it necessary to plan ahead.

NEW BRUNSWICK.

ST. JOHN.—This has been a good fish week on the St. John market. The supply was good and demand encouraging. There was an abundance of salmon bringing from 19 to 29 cents a pound. The season is rapidly drawing to a close ending on August 15. At present the only source of supply is from St. John harbor and along Bay of Fundy, run on the North Shore of the Province and about Newfoundland having become exhausted. A large number of fiddlers were caught this week.

First run of fall shad was on the market offering at 30 and 35 cents. Tinker mackerel in fair quantities sold at 50 cents a dozen. Halibut remains decidedly scarce and what little is being received is being brought in from about Brier Island, Nova Scotia. Cod and haddock are coming in slightly better quantities but remain about the same in price bringing 5 cents a pound.

NOVA SCOTIA.

HALIFAX. — There was some activity in local fishing markets this week due to fact that mackerel struck in again along the coast. At some places along western shore as high as two thousand fish were taken in one day. Majority of catches, however, are comparatively small. The fish are large and of fine quality. They are in good demand, and sold at 20 cents each. A large portion of the fish were shipped fresh to the American market.

Herring have also struck in, but demand is light. Sales of fresh herring are not heavy at any period, on local market, and fishermen were retailing them at the wharves for one cent each.

Cod and haddock continue plentiful, and halibut is fair. Fresh salmon is amout done, but new smoked stock of excellent quality is offered to the trade.

MANITOBA.

WINNIPEG.—There is a normal demand for fish. Prices on this commodity are steady, changes being of rare occurrence. Pickerel are quoted ½ cent per lb. cheaper. Market is well supplied in all lines.

Produce & Provisions

Trade in Cooked Meats Well Established

Not Dependent on Hot Weather—Now Sold by Grocers the Year Round—Steady Trade Reported in Smoked Meats—No Concessions Being Made in Butter—Premium on Good Eggs on Increase.

There is no denying the fact that trade in cooked meats this year has not maintained the record of last year. The reason for this is quite evident, the weather man last year lending a helping hand in swelling sales to an appreciable figure.

Notwithstanding the fact, there has been quite a fair trade in cooked meats this year. As pointed out by one wholesaler this week, the cooked meat trade has now become an established one and not only is there a demand for this line during warm summer months but all the year round. Of course the warm weather helps considerably but dealers do not depend on it as was case a few years back.

There is also a considerable trade at present in evidence for smoked meats. This business has been pursuing an even but appreciable level and stocks have been kept pretty well evened up at most centres. In fact in some directions we hear of a firm feeling prevailing in this line.

If present quotations are any indication of what is to be, the poor man will not butter his bread very heavily this winter. Prices are now above normal for season and there is still strong front to most markets. Canada is exporting no butter because prices are on too high a level to make that possible.

"We are just about going the limit in butter now," said one dealer this week," considering that prices in Chicago are lower than ours, ranging around 26½ cents." Another dealer referred to New Zealand as factor towards easiness but in face of all this, there are apparently no concessions being made.

MONTREAL.

PROVISIONS.—The usual quietness at this time of year prevails in provision market, there being no great activity presented. Still business has not been too bad, some fairly large orders having been filled by local packers. Lard is keeping up, there being a falling off in the accumulation of stocks.

BUTTER.—An easier tendency marked closure of butter markets last week but it was only temporary and prices are stiffening up again. Indeed few sales were made by holders at the lower price at some of the county boards. It is hardly likely that any marked drop will take place in the near future as we are right into a season of high prices which in every quarter will be maintained.

EGGS.—As must be expected during hot weather, prices for new laids are creeping up and it is safe to say that the high level will be maintained as supplies are none too large. There is a good demand though, and the call for selects is also heavy. Cooking eggs are also in good demand and price is not too high.

HONEY.— When the cool weather sets in there will be a much better demand for honey but it is hardly likely that things will brighten up to any appreciable extent until the fall, when dealers will be in a position to display it and use proper methods for selling. The demand is just moderate at following prices:

TORONTO.

PROVISIONS.—There is a generally firm tone to all varieties of smoked meats which may probably reflect itself in local quotations. Trade in spite of rather unseasonable weather has been quite fair. Cooked meats are not so brisk as at this time last year. However, as was pointed out by one wholesaler, cooked meat trade has become established and is not ruled so much by weather as years ago.

Hogs show no change from last week and are steady. This is not the brisk season for lard and tendency as pointed out before is rather easy, in tierces ruling at 13 cents flat.

BUTTER.—If there were a tinge of easiness in butter last week as some dealers declared, it did not make itself apparent in local quotations. Prices this week are ruling much the same, although certain dealers would ask firmer figures for some grades of dairy butter, choice prints ruling at 22 to 23 cents.

"There are no concessions being made in creamery," said one dealer, "but I would say that supplies are fairly liberal. I feel more like being bullish in dairy than creamery." Considerable storing has been in evidence.

EGGS. — Guaranteed new laid. eggs are a scarce commodity and this variety command a considerable premium. It is a difficult problem to get a line on egg values because they vary widely according to quality of stock. For the kind classified as new laids around 27 to 28 cents is being asked. Fresh are quoted at 23 to 24 cents. Fair retail demand is reported.

HONEY. — This year's white clover honey has made its debut on local market, limited quantity coming along during past week. Prospects this year are not rosy and dealers expect last year's high figures to be maintained. For, new seasons in 1 lb. combs, $3 per dozen is being obtained, while some strained in 60 lb. tins, sold for 12 cents per pound.

WINNIPEG.

Prices are firm and demand steady for cured meats and lard. Butter is stronger, creamery having advanced one cent and good quality dairy 2 cents. Lower prices need not be expected this season and as there is no reserve stock fall and winter prices will probably run high. Cheese is unchanged. Eggs are up 2 cents.

New Zealand as Factor in Butter Market

Shipments from That Country to Canada Growing in Importance—Will They This Year Tend to Keep Down Prices?—Canada Losing Ground in Shipments to Mother Country—All is Needed at Home.

New Zealand is beginning to loom up to no little extent as a factor in the Canadian butter market. It promises to play quite an important part in the situation this year, and to increase its importance as time advances.

Last year, it will be remembered that Canada had to use a considerable amount of New Zealand butter, not only importing direct, but during spring, when supplies here neared the zero mark and prices moved up to record heights, Canada, the renowned dairy country, had to run home to England to get supplies of butter that had in turn been received from one of her colonies on the other side of the globe, namely, New Zealand. It was indeed a rather unusual and round about way that Canada had to resort to in order to have her bread buttered last spring.

Butter Exports Falling.

What is the reason for this order of things? Canada, a few years ago, was a big shipper of butter to the motherland. Now she has to go out and buy butter. It seems almost as strange as a dairy farmer purchasing butter instead of selling it to the grocer.

This year Canada has done no export business, and it simply means that we have only enough to supply our own needs in spite of the fact that this country has for some time been one of the largest exporters to the English market. Shipping from 400,000 to 500,000 packages a year in other years.

Prices forbid this at present, and this order of things appears to be a result of increasing population, while on the other hand production has been decreasing.

Found its Way Back Again.

Conditions now would seem to indicate that Canada will require nearly all her own production in the future. It is true that she exported some 136,272 packages last season, but a large portion of that amount had to be imported again to fill our home requirements.

It was New Zealand that assisted us to some extent in regard to supplies. Indeed as a source of supply, it looks as if she might take an important place. Imports to Canada from that direction increased from 9,197 boxes in 1190-11 to 44,431 boxes in 1911-12 and shippers from the antipodes expect to greatly increase this amount in the future. They are so much interested that they have begun interviewing the steamship lines in regard to securing better direct service with this country.

New Zealand Shippers Prepared.

A New Zealand paper, in speaking of the trade says: "The future of the trade with Canada is big with possibilities. Exporters in this country are fully alive to the fact. Apart from the steamship service, New Zealand has the advantage of a tariff with Canada, which gives her a preference over Australia of 1 cent per pound on butter."

Chances of New Zealand trade with us seem brighter this year from the feeling now quite general that values this year are likely to follow course of last season. This feeling is shown by good demand for butter at present prices above normal. However it is just a question whether storage men and speculators have taken New Zealand into account in summing up the market. The West has been a big buyer of Eastern butter. Now, New Zealand is said to be offering butter for December delivery laid down in Vancouver at 28 to 29 cents per pound. It is also stated that Toronto and Montreal dealers could not lay the same class of butter down in Vancouver in December for less than 31 cents—that is figuring on present basis. If this be true the West will take the imported rather than Eastern product, but on the other hand New Zealand would not in such a case be able to compete on Eastern markets.

There are, however, many complications in trying to size up such a situation in advance. For instance says one dealer, "We are sending no butter to England, and she will want more from New Zealand," while in answer to this another wholesaler said, "Yes, but if our prices are above England's values, New Zealand will ship to us."

Time will tell, what is to be what," but in the meantime it appears evident that New Zealand butter is going to be a factor in establishing prices.

SALMON

The Salmon situation is certainly very interesting. Prices have been named by the big packers, and as expected, are much higher than last year. We will as usual have our well-known brands, Monarch and Victor, which now command a very large sale. Our prices on these lines are as low as possible for us to make them, consistently with the market, and we quote

Monarch Fancy Red Salmon, at $2.65
Victor Choice " " " $2.40

We have some of last year's pack of pink to offer which we think should appeal to most buyers. It is now on the way and expected to arrive here in about two weeks.

With the proper system of account keeping you can put an end to accounting worries and know the amount of accounts outstanding at a glance.

The ULLMAN
Account Register

is the safest, simplest, quickest, surest to charge and most satisfactory of any system on the market. It satisfies the customer as well as the merchant. There is a decided advantage to the grocer who uses an Ullman Account Register. The customer knows, every time he makes a purchase, how much he owes, and naturally tries to keep it as low as possible. Put in an Ullman Account Register and stop the incessant night work and worry of retail book-keeping.

Send for illustrated booklet or ask for demonstration.

We want dealers to handle the Ullman Account Register in some localities.

Why Don't You do Like Him?

H. J. Buckley of Moberly, Mo., who bought a No. 84 Kingery Corn Popper with Peanut cylinder extra for $94.00.

He writes that the machine is doing fine. I pay $40.00 per month rent and have four people employed and machine pays rent and help.

Now to get at his profits in this little, big business, let's do a little figuring. Rent $480 per year. Four clerks at $5.00 per week each, $1,040, total $1,520 or 15 times the cost of his machine. Did you ever add anything to your business that beats it? In some cases they have earned more net profit than that of the business of the entire store. Furthermore its attractiveness turns the eyes of passersby upon your store. Often it is the agent of sending them in. It helps the business in the store. The Kingery Peanut Roasters and Corn Poppers are of many kinds and styles—Steam, Electric, Spring and Hand Power. Ranging in price from $8.50 to $350.00. Sold on liberal instalments.

You should have Kingery's Book of Possibilities and Catalog No. 39. They are free.

DIAMOND DIAMOND

A HINT ON MAPLE SUPPLIES

The crop of maple this year was by no means good, so that there is quite a shortage. This has necessarily meant an advance in prices. Don't you think, therefore, that you will serve your own best interests by at once ordering supplies of the brand on which you can rely.

That Brand is DIAMOND

You can always count on goods bearing the DIAMOND mark as being as near perfection as it is possible to get them, and by stocking them in preference to all others, you will safeguard yourself against those poor and unsatisfactory concoctions which will surely be offered as a result of the scarcity of the pure maple.

CONFECTIONERY

SODA-CRYSTALS (WASHING SODA)

Foreign Soda Crystals—and some of English manufacture—are being extensively offered for sale in this country which are grossly adulterated with Glauber-Salts (Sulphate of Soda), a cheap product which is not only entirely useless for washing purposes, but is even likely to injure the fabrics with which it comes in contact. The Adulterated Soda-Crystals, although nominally lower in price than BRUNNER, MOND'S PURE SODA CRYSTALS, are in reality much dearer owing to the large quantity of useless and injurious matter which they contain.

Stop Hindering Your Customers From Paying Their Bills.

Stop Loading Your Books With Bad or Doubtful Accounts.

Save Money.

Save Book-keeping.

Save Customers.

Start NOW By Using The Coupon

If you are still doing business with the old Day Book, Journal, Ledger and Monthly-Rendering-of-Statements system, you are absolutely preventing your customers from paying their bills. Your customers are obliged to wait a month before they know what their bill is. Many of them unintentionally go beyond their financial ability to pay. You are constantly encountering mistakes in your system of bookkeeping; you are having disputes with customers, and losing their trade.

The Barr Account Register saves you all this. At the time of purchase, you simply make out a counter check and three vitally important things are accomplished: First, you give your customer a bill of his current purchase. Second, you give your customer a statement of his account to date (thus abolishing your old monthly rendering of accounts). Third, without another penstroke your bookeeping is done—and your customer's account is posted right down to the minute.

Now, this is not a matter of fine theory. Simple, cold-blooded, black and white figures will prove that such a system as this will save you hundreds of dollars. It is not a luxury, it is a necessity. You NEED it—TO-DAY—so send the coupon now.

Front of a Hamilton grocery store, illustrating how inviting an appearance can be made if a little care is taken.

Store Exterior as a Silent Salesman

Power That an Inviting Front May Be Made in Increasing Business—Good Example in Hamilton Store—Why consumers Change Their Family Grocer and Where They Go—Prepare for Coming Season of Big Trade.

By their "fronts" ye shall know them.

This is very true in the case of the grocery store. It is not necessary to enter. The appearance of the front of the building and of the windows either attracts or repels customers—that is, customers who have money to spend over and above the actual bare necessities of life.

There is no better advertisement than a well pleased customer. And a particular customer has to be pleased on many points. They include prompt service, quality of goods, courteous treatment, attractive and clean interior, and a bright inviting exterior. It is of little use to attempt to hold a customer who is particular about her table and her own personal appearance, with a rough and tumble dirty looking store front.

A splendid example of good exterior appearance is reproduced above. This is front of the store of John O. Carpenter, 10 Market street, Hamilton, Ont. It illustrates the force in attracting trade that an up-to-date exterior can be made.

The season of large trade is before us. Farmers will soon be realizing on their crops and will have more money to spend. This means greater activity in all lines. The better the crops the greater the activity and this year the yield in Canada promises to eclipse anything in the past. Following on a good fall comes the Christmas season with all its possibilities. The grocer's harvest time is coming. The dealer who has the store, and the goods will make the most of it.

Every merchant should realize that there is a continuous strain of dissatisfied customers on the move. They have met with poor service, inferior quality in goods, or unclean stores and they are looking for a change. Where are they most likely to deal next? It should not be supposed they are cranks. They cannot be dubbed such if their grocer neglects to give them adequate service or clean goods. They have a perfect right to secede. Who is going to get them? The answer is, the merchant with the inviting store front. He has first call for their business, other things being equal.

Window Belongs to Store Front.

It must be remembered too that attractive windows are a prominent part of the store exterior. While it is possibly early to talk of the Christmas trade, yet we are in the middle of the eighth month with only four and a half to come. We are nearing the time of year when window displays count for most and every advantage should be taken of them.

John O. Carpenter's window—while the photograph was taken too far away to show up the details clearly—can be seen to be a good seller. And this is what is required. Make the window a silent salesman and it becomes a strong asset to the store. While goods are arranged high up in this window, it will be observed that the interior of the store can be seen through the side glass. This is a good feature providing the interior is arranged in attractive fashion.

Results Shown in Inventory.

Make the store front a strong trade attraction and see that the interior is brought up to the same standard. If this is accomplished the grocer has a combination of silent salesmen whose power to attract trade—while direct results may never be noticed—will be shown in the annual inventory at the end of the year.

Some Advice on Retail Investments

Inquirer Who Has Just Enough Money to Take His Discounts Wants to Know How to Save—Should Put Down $50 Every Month Until Bank Deposit Reaches $500 — What Saving Means to the Business—Buying in Small Quantities.

By Henry Johnson, Jr.

Here is a man who wants to know:

————, Ont., Aug. 1, 1912.

Henry Johnson, Jr.:

Dear Sir,—Cannot say that I have any money to invest in bonds but would like to know what benefit it would be to me if I had. I just about have enough of money to take my discount, carry about $16,000 worth of stock. Hoping to have a reply from you when at your leisure.

Yours truly,

G—W—W——.

Beginning September 1st, take $50 and with that open a savings account in your local bank. Put $50 into that account on the first day of each month. Let the savings pile up at 3 per cent., or whatever better savings interest your bank may pay. Usually it is well to fight shy of any bank that pays more than 3 per cent. on savings, although local conditions often operate to make 3½ per cent. or 4 per cent. safe. Be sure on this point, however; for a bank that is not a safe bank, run on conservative lines, is really not much better than a stocking.

Stick to the Rule.

When you have $500 saved up, write again and I'll tell you what to do with it; but never for one month allow yourself to let up on that habit of putting away the $50. In a year or two you will volutarily increase to $75 or $100—or more—per month, for you will have acquired the habit of wanting to have some MONEY to show for your daily work.

Now, as to the effect this will have.

1st. You will have a resource in ready money. This will make you stronger every day you live in your own eyes and in the opinion of your bankers and wholesale connections. The fact that money—actual MONEY—is there will be a wonderful stimulator to your ambition and energy. The fact that you will never allow yourself to touch it will be an added element of strength. The feeling that "you could if you would" draw a nice sum at any time will be worth much more than the amount you have set aside, purely as an investment in self-confidence. The man who has done things knows that he can do them.

2nd. You will soon be carrying much less stock. Unless you are remotely situated and doing a very big business you do not need a stock of $16,000, nor anywhere near that amount. Every dollar of excess is idle money. If you keep yourself somewhat poorer for ready change in your business, you will study to reduce your buying to your actual, bed-rock, daily and weekly requirements. You will let your jobber do his proper part in the commercial scheme of things by making him carry the stocks ready for you as you need the goods.

I buy my goods in carefully assorted lots, never more of anything than I can get rid of within the week or ten days ahead. If I should buy 25 boxes of starch to-day at, say, $1.40 per box, I should have $35 in that kind of starch. Say that I might sell it out on a margin totalling $37.50 in sixty days, I should a little better than double my capital investment, gross, in that time.

Turnover Greatly Increased.

But I use $3 for this starch and buy two boxes, stometimes twice a week. Say I only turn the same quantity in the same time, I have made a gross margin of $37.50 with $3 capital and have used the $32 other capital in other ways, turning it over and over many times. In the one case I turn my stock six times annually. In the other case I turn it about 100 times. But that is not all. My two boxes go right into the retail bin. I avoid storage and handle the goods just once, instead of several times as I should have to do with the 25-box lot. You cannot afford to "save" 5c per box on the kind of plan that involves the piling up of a lot of dead dollars on your shelves or in your cellar.

An Impetus to Collect Accounts.

3rd. You will hustle after your collections, because your rule to put away some money every month will make you really "need the money." Thus you will form the habit of drawing the lines more tightly all the time, realizing that your customers are holding your dollars in absolute idleness whenever they do not pay your bills promptly.

All of these things will make you a better merchant in every particular. Do they look good to you now?

Have you ever had the experience of having something really good offered to you which you could not take up for several very solid reasons? I think you have, and I shall guess at a few of the reasons.

1st. You did not have the money.

2nd. Never having had the money in tangible form, you have doubted your ability to accumulate it or draw it out of your business steadily to meet payments in case you should undertake to do the thing on a time basis.

3rd. Never being very much ahead of your daily needs, as you say, to "discount and carry $16,000 worth of goods," you have hesitated to go to your banker for backing, or having gone to him, he has sort of edged away from letting you have the funds.

Any of these things can happen to the man who has not established the reputation of being a producer of MONEY.

Be Prepared to Accept.

Such opportunities will come to you again—wonderful how they will crop up in the experience of the man who "has a little coin" on hand. Maybe it is a piece of property which promises to be very valuable, possibly of peculiar value to you because of its location or for some other reason. If you have $2,000 in good bonds lying in a vault drawing your little 4½ per cent. or 5 per cent., which you have accumulated during about three years or less of saving, you know—KNOW—just what you can do. You go to your banker, who also knows—trust him to know all about the man who makes money—and tell him your plans; show him what you have done and what you are doing. Then you can take advantage of the offering and may find yourself in the way of being the owner, free and clear within a few years, of the choicest corner in your town.

Again, there come hard times; and during those times the men who have laid away some money—not goods and chattles of depreciating value, but MONEY—always prosper. Having only one or two boxes of starch on hand, they can buy, maybe 10 boxes not at 2½c a pound, but at 1½c.; and then be ready for a further offering in a month or two of the same at 1¼c. or 1c flat. And the same thing runs through the entire line.

Buying Kept Him Stock Poor.

In 1893 I was deeply in debt; had to peg along as best I could, being put to it daily to meet my bills. Yet then I had not learned that one could buy small. I thought it was good business to take on quantities to "get the right price." I got the price often enough, but I was "stock poor" all the time, for I carried as much then, even more,

*The writer of this article is one of the most successful dealers on the continent. He has spent almost 30 years in the retail grocery business and is well equipped to answer questions and smooth out difficulties with which others may have met. If a special request is made names of inquirers will be omitted when their letters are printed for discussion.

sometimes, as I do now; and I was doing less than half the business.

Meantime, a neighbor of mine was making money—said he knew nothing of "hard times" in fact, never made so much. Why? Because he had plenty of ready money with which to conservatively buy good things as they came along. So while I got only the benefit which later came through the general rise in values, he got that and his steady extra margins besides.

What the Financiers Do.

All the big money kings, with what to us seem like incomprehensible sums of capital at their command, keep a big fund salted away in securities of the most gilt-edge character on which they can realize without loss, at any time. Such securities yield not even 4 per cent., but pay only 3 per cent., and sometimes less than 3 per cent. Yet these men have all the opportunities at their beck and call, as it were. Then if that is good for them, it is good for us. I know it has been good for me. That is why I urge you to "go and do likewise."

Suggestions for Increasing Spice Sales

Season of Good Sales Close at Hand for Spices and Vinegar—Importance of Selling Best for Pickling Purposes—Good Crop of Vegetables Reported—Care of Spices in the Store — Lose Their Oil if Exposed to the Air.

The pickling season is now close upon us and it is time that every dealer was prepared to care for the trade in spices and vinegar that will soon be in evidence.

Prospects for a big pickling season are much brighter than a year ago. Last year, dry, hot weather, which prevailed for a large portion of the summer, as is remembered all too well, had no little effect on vegetables used for this purpose. But this year vegetable crops are progressing well and there appears every hope that prices will reach a level, reasonable enough to induce a good volume of home pickling in most districts.

This is at any rate the opinion of spice dealers who have been following the situation and there is a general optimistic feeling that there is going to be a big trade in spices and vinegar this year.

Stocks Should be Seen to.

The grocer must, however, first have the goods before he can sell them. Many have already anticipated their wants. Those who have not done so, should not delay. Too much emphasis cannot be given to the value of commencing to push a line early in the season. It is in this way that the cream of the trade is secured. The aggressive dealer starts to push spices just as soon as they become at all seasonable and reaps the early and most valuable harvest. The unaggressive merchant follows after and picks up what the tail-end of the season will allow.

In the purchasing of spices and vinegar, quality should reign supreme, if the dealer would safeguard his reputation and his trade. The merchant cannot afford to sacrifice his reputation for the sake of a few cents saving on the cost of his goods. In the end it proves false economy, for the housewife will not long continue to buy her supplies from the store that does not give her first-class goods. The housewife naturally takes a great deal of pride in her home-made products and the grocer who upsets the success of her pickle endeavors, upsets the success of his own business—at least as far as that particular customer is concerned.

Easy to Sell Quality Spices.

It will generally be found that the housewife is willing to pay a little more for the ingredients and be assured of receiving best quality goods. By purchasing the best, the grocer will have enough confidence in his goods to be able to sell them more easily to customers. Confidence in goods begets sales.

Having stocked spices of quality, the aggressive grocer will next sell them, and will sell the largest amount possible. Prominent display as with every seasonable article will do much to bring these lines to the attention of customers. While during most parts of the year, spices do not need to be given a stellar position, for next month or so considerable counter space should be given up to them while if at all possible a window should be used for the purpose as well. Package goods can of course be displayed in much the same manner as other package articles. With bulk goods, an excellent plan is the glass bottle with glass stopper. It affords an excellent means of display, preserves the quality of the spice while the name and price may be pasted on the outside.

Using the Newspaper.

Printer's ink can be used to good advantage in the local paper in pushing sale of spices and vinegar. There is no getting away from the fact that most housewives are interested in the subject of pickling and copy can be written that will not fail to attract attention. The desirability of having a supply of home-made pickles can be worked up to good advantage for it is truly something the housewife prides herself in—especially when they are good. It is in order to point out that they will be good, or at least the chance of failure will be minimized if good quality spices and vinegar are used.

The Drug Store a Competitor.

Druggists have in many towns been securing a good portion of the spice trade for the simple reason that they were accorded the reputation of handling better quality goods than the grocer. This reputation was acquired by advertising quality and the grocers must overcome the prejudice in customers' minds by the same method—advertising quality. Druggists have in many cases been demanding high prices and this may account in part also for belief that they handle better spices.

Sales Useless Without Profit.

There is another feature of the spice trade in which the grocer is directly interested — that of securing a fair percentage of profit. This is not to be secured by buying cheaply and sacrificing quality, for as we have pointed out before, that in the end means lost profit. Careful attention to weighing of bulk goods will do much to help in securing a good profit. Purchases being in small quantities and mostly in two and four-ounce packages, carefulness is all the more necessary. The most sensitive scales should be used and the need of giving correct weight—no more and no less—firmly impressed upon every clerk.

A good profit is possible in spices and vinegar but the elimination of all those leaks which tend to reduce profits is absolutely necessary.

Pointers.

Have spices close to scales. It will save many steps during the season.

It is well to have a scoop for each spice. A customer does not like turmeric and cloves mixed.

If spices are exposed to the air, the oil which constitutes their strength evaporates.

Don't allow vinegar profits to run away through a faulty tap.

If you send jars out to customers with vinegar, be sure to charge them. Credit them when returned.

When customers buy spices, suggest vinegar. When they buy vinegar suggest spices.

Get the trade while it is to be had.

The Toronto medical health officer declares emphatically in face of many protests that plums, peaches, grapes and berries in front of stores must be covered. Pears, apples, bananas and oranges need not be as the skin is or should be removed before eating.

MAKING MONEY ON SUGAR.

Here is one dealer who is making a profit on sugar, apparently above cost plus overhead expenses. In a letter to The Grocer he says:—

> "Please find enclosed $2.00 on my subscription account for your valuable journal.
> "I notice your leading article on 'Losing Money on Sugar', in issue of Aug. 2. I never weigh out sugar in small quatities at less than an advance of $1.50 per 100 lbs. Am at present selling at an advance of $1.70 per 100 lbs. Do you think this allows me more than a fair margin?"

This letter comes from Winnipeg where No. 1 sugar costs the retail dealer $5.55 per cwt. at present. An advance of $1.50 brings selling price up to $7.05 and the rate of margin to 21 per cent. and a fraction on selling price. If the advance is $1.70, as this dealer is getting at present, the selling price would be $7.25, or a gross margin of about 23½ per cent.

Whether this dealer is getting more than a fair margin or not depends on his cost of doing business, which of course includes service rendered. If cost of doing business is around 16 or 18 per cent. we should say he is justified in securing this margin.

There is so much sugar sold at a loss that it is refreshing to meet with a case such as the above. There is no reason why the retail dealer should not make a fair profit on everything he sells. He is justly entitled to it. He works hard enough and particularly in the instance of sugar where turnover in a year amounts to such a big proportion of the total sales, a profit above total cost should be secured.

It is to be hoped there are many others who are not so afraid of competition that they cannot sell sugar except at a loss.

BAKING POWDER ANALYSIS.

Recently the Laboratory of the Inland Revenue Department issued bulletin No. 240 dealing with baking powders and it forms some interesting reading.

A hundred and fifty samples of baking powder were collected by government inspectors and analyzed at the laboratory. This article warrants examination from two points of view; first, the amount of gas produced and, second, its wholesomeness so far as the various ingredients are concerned.

It will be remembered by readers of The Grocer that some months ago a standard was set on the gas strength of baking powder, which stated that all powders must produce at least 10 per cent. gas.

The analysis made by the department showed that out of the 150 samples 68 were alum phosphate powders, 46 cream of tartar, 31 acid phosphate and 5 alum powders.

The examination also produced the facts that the 68 alum phosphate powders produced on an average 10.78 per cent. gas; the 46 cream of tartar averaged 11.01; the 31 acid phospate 11.25 and the 5 alum 12.40.

Baking powders, as made, usually contain a slight excess of bi-carbonate of soda, so that the further addition of an acid gives a certain further amount of gas, called residual gas. This residual gas is not available in baking, except when sour milk, or other acid ingredient is added to the bread. For purposes of judging the value of a baking powder, the chief analyst maintains that the available gas should alone be considered.

From this point of view thirty-five samples were below standard strength, twenty-three of these being more than one per cent. below the standard, and several of them being much more than one per cent. below.

The report further states that no complaint upon the ground of wholesomeness, has been formulated against cream of tartar or acid phosphate powders, to the knowledge of the chief analyst. "The wholesomeness of such as contain alum, either as the sole acid component, or in combination with acid phosphate of lime, has frequently been questioned, and is, at present, an unsettled point," it continues. "The matter is now in the hands of a Referee Board at Washington, D.C., composed of men whose qualifications and character are such as to command the respect of the scientific world. I am, for this reason, unwilling to open the question of alum as a material in baking powder; preferring to await publication of the results obtained by the aforesaid Referee Board."

CO-OPERATIVE SOCIETIES IN ENGLAND.

So far the retail trade of Canada has been successful in preventing the passage of several Co-operative Bills that have been launched in the House of Commons. The prime movers in bringing forward these measures have persistently stuck to it that Co-operative Societies in the Old Country have been a blessing to the people.

Have they? To those who have looked at the question on the surface and seen that many societies have become wealthy, the conclusion is naturally arrived at that they are good for the country.

The Grocer had a talk this week with Frederick E. Robson, a Toronto grocery broker and a close student of trade questions, who has just returned from a seven weeks' trip to England. While there he inquired particularly into the workings of the Co-operative Societies and found that in addition to the fact that they enjoy special privileges from the government over the ordinary retail dealer, they are gradually imposing on the general public by giving them inferior goods.

The special privilege they have is exemption from a tax on revenue derived, (which is something along the lines of our income tax) by being considered in same class as fraternal societies. The retail dealer has to pay this tax and is therefore at a handicap right from the start.

There are so many shareholders in the societies that it would entail an endless amount of work to get at revenues of each. It is an unfair handicap and it should be seen to, that the Ottawa Government does not accord similar privileges in this country.

The other point—that of selling inferior goods to customers and members—is very serious too. When societies become wealthy they begin manufacturing themselves and in some cases absolutely refuse to supply goods of other manufacturers to customers in preference to their own. This, it is claimed, is having the effect of reducing the standard of quality of goods sold; it is promoting inferior, if not adulterated foods, which will eventually prove disadvantageous to the health of those who purchase from them.

The retail dealers suffer in still another way. Co-operative Societies sell for cash and while times are good, all the members purchase from them, as they expect to get part of their money back in dividends. But when laborers are laid off or industrial strikes occur, they are forced to go to the retail dealers who will allow credit. When they go back to work again they leave the men who had tided them over in their difficulty and buy from the societies.

There is so much unfairness about such methods that retail merchants in Canada should see that these societies do not get a foothold here through receipt of special privileges from our government.

HONEY MUST BE PURE.

Now that the honey season is again coming into view, dealers should take every precaution as to the quality and purity of supplies purchased.

Under the Canadian Adulteration Act no honey mixture is allowed to be sold even if the word "mixture" or "compound" be written in large type on the label. The act expressly states that the manufacture, sale, or offering for sale in Canada of any imitation of honey or sugar honey or other substitute for honey is strictly forbidden. The word "mixture" as permitted under certain regulations by the act does not apply to honey. Any production or sale of this article as a compound is absolutely against the law. The penalty for infraction of the law carries with it the liability of a term of one year in prison.

Retail dealers should make it a regulation to enquire carefully into the purity of honey they are intending to purchase. They cannot afford to take the chance.

THE ROLLED OAT MARKET.

It is more than probable that within a week or ten days' time rolled oats will take a decline. Retailers who are purchasing would do well to buy for immediate needs only and wait for a time to go into buying more deeply.

While the oat market is fairly strong and active there is evidently a feeling that more business would result if prices were lowered.

New crop oats, while delivery is some distance in the future, is being looked forward to, and if a decline does not come now, it undoubtedly will later on.

HIGH COST OF HORSE FEED.

Six weeks ago a Toronto dealer paid a farmer $27 for a ton of old hay. Oats have been costing him 55 cents. Everyone will remember that a few years ago hay could be bought for from $12 to $15 a ton, while oats averaged around a cent a pound or a little better.

These are two big items in the expense of operating a business where two or three delivery wagons are used. They mean that cost of horse feed has advanced from 70 to 100 per cent. and more.

Yet in face of these facts and others pointed out by The Grocer a couple of weeks ago, there are farm journals and daily newspapers "kicking" about farmers not getting enough for their products, and middlemen overcharging the consumer. Is there any paper with any fairness whatever in its makeup that will criticize anybody for getting a profit above invoice cost plus overhead expenses? How would an individual live if he did not? The merchant must sell to make a profit above his total cost if he wants to continue in business.

It is because merchants have to pay from 25 to 50 per cent. more to operate their business than a few years ago that helps to increase the cost. They have no control over these advances. If the farmer insists on $27 a ton for hay and 55 cents a bushel for oats, can the merchant let his horses starve because of these high prices?

We do not criticize the farmer in getting the best price possible. Farm-product prices are ruled by supply and demand as in everything else. But what we do object to, is that certain farm and daily papers should accuse the merchant of taking unto themselves an undue portion of the increase in farm products since prices have gone up.

Lesson 19--Course in Card Writing

Illustrating the Practical Use of Brush Outline Script, Introducing the Striped Effect in Making Fancy Cards.

By J. C. Edwards. Copyright Canada, 1911.

To be fair with the student in card-writing, we do not recommend the script lettering for ordinary cards. In the first place, it is too fine-lined to be easily read at a distance; in fact, a few feet away renders it almost unintelligible, only the wide strokes showing. Then, another point that favors the heavier type letter more than the fine scrip is the fact that the script does not lend itself to larger writing where a whole sentence or paragraph is required, as the more broken up it is the less readable it becomes, and it even becomes unsightly.

Script a Graceful Letter.

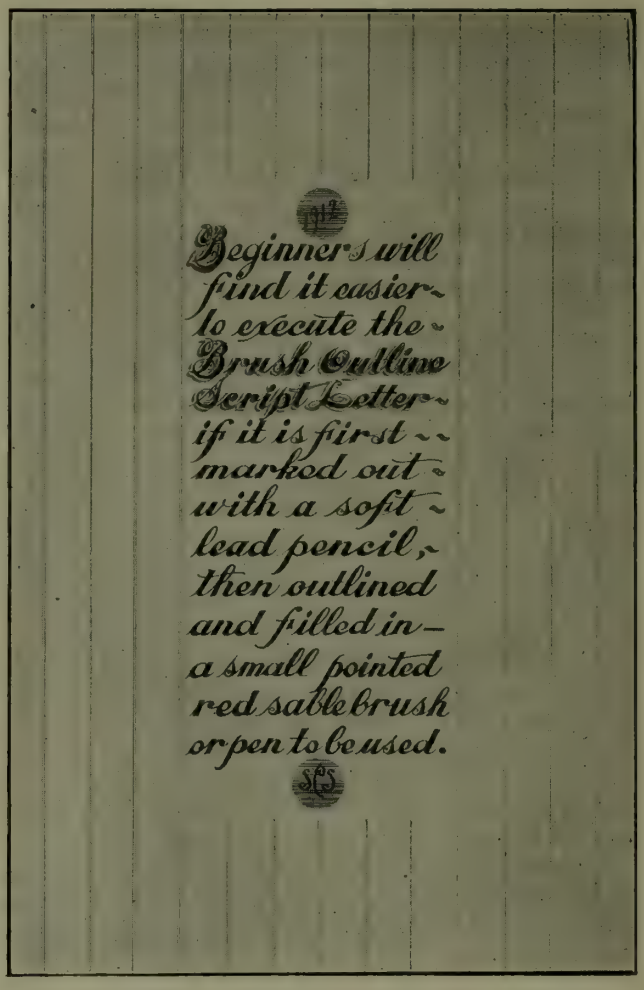
However, the script, when gracefully written, may be used to advantage in many cases, and is quite desirable for a change for special style and exclusive window cards. To execute the script well, it requires a great deal of practice to get a nice flowing effect. The proper slant, too, is very essential, and the more practice given the more graceful and easy will be the execution.

Heavier Stroke for Cardwriting.

The script usually taught and often used in card work is decidedly too light in the stroke, and should not be used, except for very fine window displays such as for jewelry, etc. We contend that any letter that cannot be read easily the width of a sidewalk is too light, and not at all in good form with merchandizing ideas of to-day. Of course, pretty much the same formation is used in all script letters, the difference being in the heavy or shaded strokes, and even the fine lines may vary to a degree.

Though in some cases the letters do no really join, yet they are given that appearance which is absolutely imperative, otherwise the words would be broken up, resulting disastrously to the reading of the inscription.

Practice the various strokes found throughout the lesson—strokes such as No. 1 of "A," No. 3 of "B," No. 1 of "E," and so on, until you become thoroughly acquainted with them. Then, learn to associate the various strokes and arrange them so as to give the proper slant to the completed letter; for instance, take the letters "F" and "T" (the strokes are practically the same in these two with an addition in the "F"). Try the various effects that changing the strokes on these letters have, and end up by making them right as shown in the plate.



The lined effect applied to the entire face of the card.

Practice Making Circles.

Take your fine pointed brush (a red sable rigger) and fill with ink, thinned so it flows readily, but not too easily, and practice making scrolls and circles, half moons, crescents, cymas, etc., until you get complete confidence in yourself, then join these together, forming letters, and end up with words. Follow the strokes indicated by the arrows and numbers, and watch your slant and spacing.

The Cards, and How to Make Them.

At first one would say that the work of ruling the fine double lines on the striped card was a waste of time. Yet the actual time spent in doing this was only a few minutes, and it gives such a decidedly different effect that we believe it is worth the trouble. It makes a fancy card (not fancy like the other, but a novelty) out of a plain one. A ruling pen and "T" square was used for this purpose, making the stripes 1 inch apart, leaving a white panel in the centre for the wording. To demonstrate the use of the script lettering in the cards belonging to this lesson, it was necessary to use the lower case, as will be taught in the next and last lesson of this series. Script capitals cannot be used together to make up a word.

The Lined Effect.

A number of very catchy effects may be obtained by using the fine lines. One way is to line the letter as was shown in a previous lesson; another idea is to line the card around the letter and decoration, and yet another style, which is very effective, is to line the decoration as is shown in the accompanying card.

The whole design and letering in this case was pencilled out, then outlined with a brush and ruled with a ruling pen, leaving the lettering open. The spray of roses and the ribbon was then given a tint—any desirable tint of very

Actual Instances Described—Order of Meat Sauce Added to Sugar—How the Ruffled Feelings of Woman Customer Were Quieted Down—Trouble Over Bad Pineapple — Farmer Convinced That Dearer Seed Corn Was Best Buy.

The writer not long ago spent a day in a country store. The day's proceedings furnished excellent object lessons in retail salesmanship which go to prove strongly the possibilities in selling goods over and above actual demand when proper methods and sufficient efforts are brought into play.

This particular store is situated in a village with a population of about 1,500. It was quite early in the morning before the usual dusting had been completed, that the first telephone order of the day came in. It was from a local hotel. A dollar's worth of sugar was wanted. The young man at the phone was anxious for more business. He enquired if there was anything else wanted, to which the reply "No" came back.

But he did not give up here. "How about some meat sauce?" was the enquiry made. "You like the —— brand, don't you? We have some of that on hand now." The result was that an order for six bottles was secured to go along with the sugar.

Heat Affected His Appetite.

A little later a woman customer entered the store, She purchased a couple of staple articles.

"I don't know what to get to eat," she remarked. "My husband doesn't seem to like anything this weather."

"We have some nice lettuce and onions," the clerk suggested, and going over to the display he held up a couple of the best bunches. Their freshness seemed to appeal to the customer and she ordered two bunches of each.

A Woman Hard to Handle.

The next salesmanship record was made by the proprietor himeslf. He demonstrated himself not only a salesman but a diplomat as well. He turned what to many another grocer would have been sure defeat into real victory.

It was a woman who appeared on the scene just before noon. She was not in a buying mood either. In fact she was decidedly the contrary and also contrary with the accent on the second syllable. It might be stated that she was what the merchant described as a "ticklish" customer. Not that she was "tickled" very easily but that she was liable to fly into a fit at the least provocation and decide to deal at some other store.

The look in her eye when she appeared at the front door denoted plainly that fire dwelt within. She sailed into the store under a full head of steam and waltzed up to the proprietor.

"One of those old pineapples you sent me up yesterday was rotten," she broke forth. "I want you to understand that I'm not going to pay for any rotten old goods like that. When I cut it open there was a great big rotten streak down the centre. You needn't think you can pawn your old stuff on me."

Ruffled Feelings Smoothed Out.

"Why we don't want to, Mrs. Long," the merchant replied. "I am very sorry that one of the pines was bad. We will give you another in place of it."

She was rather non-plussed. She had expected to have the merchant refuse. She was ashamed of her temper.

"We are going up your way right away," the merchant continued, "and we will send a good one up." He selected one of the best.

The customer smiled. She had won her point. The merchant took advantage of her pleasant mood. He enquired if she did not want to purchase some more pines. It seemed rather nervy so soon after the fracas but he placed six on the counter and remarked, "Now you ought to put down at least a half a dozen more. These will do up fine. They are just right." She purchased the half dozen.

This time the merchant smiled. He had won his point and more than made up the loss on the bad one.

A Farmer to Deal With.

The grocer went to dinner. He returned in an hour. The clerk was waiting on a farmer. While he parcelled up some goods, the grocer enquired of the customer if he needed any seed corn.

"Yes, I do," replied the farmer, "but you are too dear on it. You want $1.40 a bushel. I can buy it cheaper at Jones."

"What can you buy it for at Jones?"

"I can get it there for $1.10 per bushel," was the reply.

"Yes, but what kind is it?" enquired the grocer. "This of mine is kept on the cob until I order it and then is freshly shelled, so that there is no danger of its heating and destroying the germination. The corn that Jones is selling is shipped in carloads—in fact it is about the same as I sell for feed."

"Well, I bought it last year and it turned out alright," came back the customer.

"Yes, that is possible and you might buy it again and have it come up alright. But then you are running chances. When you sow a field it doesn't pay to take chances on a poor yield for 30 cents a bushel."

The farmer saw the force of the argument and purchased.

It All Depends.

Thus goes the game of salesmanship in the retail store. In many stores the extra amount of business secured in this way totals up to an appreciable amount. In other stores the amount of new business created is quite small. It all depends upon the merchant and his clerks.

There are many opportunities presented in every store for the display of real salesmanship methods. On the ability to create sales over and above actual demand depends to a large extent the success of a business or the success of a clerk.

STEELTON MERCHANTS GET TOGETHER.

Are Interested in Ontario R. G. A—Have Formed Protective Association.

Toronto, Aug. 15.—Secretary Wm. C. Miller, of the Ontario Retail Grocers' Association has received a letter from D. O. Weldon, town treasurer of Steelton, Ont., which will be of interest to association workers. Mr. Weldon points out that Steelton merchants have formed a protective association, and are desirous of affiliating with the Ontario R. G. A. They want information as to the platform of the new association, annual fee, etc., all of which Mr. Miller has forwarded.

Steelton is located in Algoma district, near Sault Ste. Marie.

The Ontario R. G. A. has now received its papers of incorporation from the Provincial Legislature and is prepared to go ahead with business.

VALUE OF CINNAMON AND MUSTARD.

Cinnamon and mustard are exceedingly useful spices by reason of their preservative power. They prevent the growth of germs in food and thus preserve it. Ginger and black pepper do not prevent the growth of germs.

Candles—Up ½ cent.

Cotton Twine—Up ½ cent.

Montreal, Aug. 15.—In all centres here trade has been better than during corresponding period of last year. This being particularly encouraging when one considers the high level reached for practically all lines.

Imported mushrooms cannot be secured now in very large quantities, the shortage bringing about an increase of 2½ cents putting the price of the extra quality up to 25-26c.

The ruling prices now for red raspberry are the opening prices, i.e., 2.12½-2.15, while opening prices for Golden wax and Refugee green beans are one dollar for group A, and 97½c for group B, but present selling prices are $1 in each case. New prices are to hand for extra fine sifted peas, namely for groups A and B, 1.75 and 1.72½ respectively. We quote as follows on other varieties:—Groups A and B of English garden, $1.25 and $1.22, respectively; early June, $1.30 and $1.27½ respectively; sweet wrinkle, $1.35 and $1.32½. These are also the prices now ruling.

Stearine candles, which come from England are marked up a ½ cent, while cotton twine is also up to same extent. In the latter case, however, everything points to a further increase as even though prices have been declining rapidly in the cotton market, after recent flurry, cotton twine manufacturers are six months behind in orders, and the raw material purchased lately has been secured at the higher level. Dealers would do well therefore to keep an eye on the cotton market.

Reports are to hand of failure of olive crop, so that prices are moving up.

SUGAR.—The general good reports to hand of the prospects of new crop all over combined with the removal of that bullish feeling which prevailed quite lately, have tended to ease situation and prices declined 10 cents on Tuesday.

The change in weather may bring about a decrease in the phenomenally strong demand, because it looks as if the hot weather which naturally stimulates the manufacture of ice cream and soft drinks has run its course.

MOLASSES AND SYRUP. — With cooler weather coming along buyers are beginning to pay more attention to molasses, but we cannot say that the situation as it stands to-day, as far as demand is concerned is any too good. There is, however, a replenishment of supplies going on amongst bakers and fairly good prices are paid but grocery grade are better maintained owing to possibilities of short crop in Louisiana.

TEA.—The demand for teas is still good, but large sales have not been as frequent this week, still the jobbers have handed over some substantial business. Prices are firm in sympathy with far east and general activity is reported from those districts.

COFFEE.—Coffee market has turned weaker during past week, a number of points downward having been registered in primary markets. But as it takes 100 points to make a cent either upwards or downwards it can easily be seen just how little effect a ten or fifteen point decline would have on the prices now quoted by Canadian roasters. The local trade has picked up on the other hand and some substantial business has been transacted at full prices. The mild grades are not much called for the demand being unusually slow.

It is reported that there have been a number of failures among exporters of Santos, and a number of big jobbers through lack of confidence in situation are cutting down their credit limit. It looks, therefore, as if the smaller men must soon throw up the sponge if no relief comes forward, a state of affairs which will leave the coffee trade of all countries entirely in the hands of the more influential houses.

SPICES.—The general demand for spices is somewhat limited just now, though up to a week ago there was good call for all lines. It seems as if grinders and jobbers are living in hope of set back arguing that market cannot continue upward all the time. There was a marked reaction in Lampong peppers of late and this in one way has tended to create a waiting attitude on part of big buyers.

DRIED FRUITS.—There is stronger feeling in market just now, and while rush season is not yet at hand, nevertheless things are brightening up some. Muscatel raisins are stronger owing to fact that stocks of 1911 crop carried over are reported to have been either bought up or at any rate held under option. The reports concerning Valencia new crop are thoroughly favorable and it looks as if there will be an easing off in market pretty soon.

The primary situation is thoroughly interesting for in spite of the fact that this is a dull season a number of offers have been made for stocks but holders have refused to part with them evidently looking for higher prices as result of certain reports floating round relative to new crop prospects. It is likely that crop of Greek currants will fall short of last year by good margin and firm feeling prevails. The quality of the new crop depends entirely on the weather, as drying is now in full swing, so that the weather clerk will receive more than ordinary attention during the next few weeks.

ONTARIO MARKETS.

POINTERS:—

Sugar—Down 10 cents.

Canned Peas and Beans—New prices.

Canned Raspberry—New prices.

Valencia Raisins—Firm market.

Toronto, Aug. 15.—Sugar declined on Tuesday morning 10 cents per cwt. This is one of the interesting features of the market. By many it was thought unlikely in view of the strong retail demand and dearth of stocks.

Prices in advance of the regular bulletin quotation have been given out by canners on beans, peas and raspberries. Opening prices on beans are similar to last year, but the new prices on both peas and raspberries are considerably in advance of a year ago. These will be noted in our canned goods column.

Official prices are out on canned salmon and are same as the advance quotations given in our last week's issue.

Business is fair for season with collections a shade on the quiet side. With opening of Exhibition two weeks hence local trade will be given a big impetus.

Sugar.—A decline of 10 cents occurred in sugar on Tuesday of this week following decline on the New York market. Just at present sugar stocks are small and refineries are behind in delivery. In view of this and the big demand some sugar men were not anticipating drop just now, although it was generally supposed it would come soon. One reason for short supplies is given that three or four weeks ago speculators put up raws several points and market was oversold. It is expected, however, that conditions will come to normal in a couple of weeks' time. It is common property that raw markets in Europe and Cuba have been easy and cause of decline in New York is attributable to this. If refiners get caught up in orders it is possible further weakness may develop here.

Dried Fruits.—Much interest is centred in dried fruits because of the apparent general easiness of the California market and the strength shown in Valencia raisins in Spain. California seedless and seeded raisins are quite easy, but Valencias may possibly run as high as 9 cents. In such a case Californias may strengthen.

Some wholesalers are offering fine Patras currants to arrive about the end of October at 7¾ cents and Voztizzas at 9½ cents.

There is a general quietness felt in prunes. Last year many retailers were loaded up with prunes and they are now being more careful.

It might be added that while present California market is easy, dried fruits to arrive are selling freely.

Spices.—Splendid business is passing in pickling and mixed spices in view of pickling season. Spices are generally firm but more so in case of white pepper, mace, cloves, nutmegs, and cream of tartar. Cloves are expected to soon go over the 25 cent mark for minimum quotation while in another week or ten days 30 cents may mark low figure in white pepper. Cream of tartar is firm at last month's ¾c advance in primary market in France.

CANNED GOODS.

TORONTO. — Prices on peas which have been awaited for some time are not yet announced in official bulletin from canners. But advance sheets have been sent out with these new prices and they indicate that peas will be high this year. Standards No. 4 are $1.25 against $1 a year ago for grade A. It looks as if weather had again prevented good pea crop. The hot dry weather late in June and early in July was responsible. The entire pack is only about 52 per cent. of orders booked prior to May 1. This means that the canners who guaranteed 60 per cent. have to go into the market to purchase the balance. In the United States similar conditions exist. Some canners there can only deliver 50 per cent. of orders.

Wholesalers' orders for extra fine sifted will probably be filled in full, but there will only be about 35 per cent. of standards, 15 of early June and 10 of sweet wrinkled.

Prospects are for good pack of beans, although percentage of delivery is not yet known. Opening prices in golden wax and refugee green beans are $1—same as last year. In fact opening prices on all beans will be similar to year ago.

Canned raspberries are higher than 1911. Two's in heavy syrup, black and red, are $2.15 as compared with $2.02½ last year. Of course it will be remembered that year ago raspberries advanced quickly from wholesaler to retailer after prices were announced. Pack of red raspberries will probably allow 65 to 70 per cent. delivery or more.

Official salmon prices are also out and will be seen below. These we named in The Grocer a week ago, in advance of official announcement.

POINTERS—

Prunes and Loose Raisins—Weaker.

Syrups—Advanced.

Beans—Advanced.

Canned Salmon—Advanced.

Winnipeg, Aug. 14.—Local wholesalers report business satisfactory, and shipments to country points are very heavy.

Both canned salmon and canned haddock have advanced in price, and there is little hope of any lowering when the new pack comes on the market about October 1st, as catch is not up to average.

Beans are a little dearer and Patna rice has also advanced.

Collections are fair and cash trade in city above average.

NEW BRUNSWICK MARKETS.

St. John, Aug. 15.—The outstanding feature of the market locally this week was the reduction in Ontario flour which declined 25 cents. No change is looked for at present in Manitoba patents, but by time the spring wheat crop is assured lower prices may possibly be expected. The reason given locally for the lowering in Ontario patents is that the crop is already harvested and there have been many speculations causing weakness. Feed still keeps high and reports here are that millers are unable to furnish large quantities because of the West demanding same through increased consumption.

Following items have been taken from The Canadian Grocer of Aug. 19, 1892:

"The employes of D. S. Perrin & Co., London, Ont., held their annual picnic at Port Stanley on Saturday of last week."

Editor's Note.—This firm is still doing business in London and holds a picnic for employes annually. In a recent issue of The Grocer an account was given of this year's event.

"The Morse Soap Works at Front and Beach streets, Toronto, owned and operated by Jno. Taylor & Co., were discovered by the watchman to be on fire at 11 o'clock on the night of the 11th inst., and for a time it seemed that the entire plant was doomed to destruction. As it is the loss will exceed $20,000.

Editor's Note.—John Taylor & Co., are still located on Front street and are therefore among present day firms in business twenty years ago.

CHILLIWACK MERCHANTS' PICNIC.

First Annual Proves Big Attraction—Free Refreshment.

Chilliwack, B.C., Aug. 12.—The first annual picnic of Chilliwack Retail Merchants' Association was a success. It included races of various discriptions, firemen's contests, tug of war, nail driving contest, etc., and a big parade. The latter was made up of automobiles handsomely decorated. On their arrival at the grounds W. Lyle Macken, president of the R.M.A., spoke for a few minutes giving a hearty welcome to all and emphasizing the pleasure it gave the merchants to entertain the people of the town and surrounding country. The merchants realized that everything which tended to develop the rural district developed the city as well and assured those present of the desire of the merchants to assist all such work in both city and country. He then introduced Mayor Waddington who also spoke a few words of welcome and congratulation on the success and management of the first merchants' picnic.

Luncheon was then partaken of, the ice cream, lemonade and fruit being distributed free.

PRESENTATIONS TO HAMILTON GROCERS.

Hamilton, Ont., Aug. 15—(Special).—Some of the officers who handled the 1912 picnic of the Retail Grocers' Association were honored at the last regular meeting of that body.

J. A. McIntosh, chairman of the Picnic Committee, was presented with a leather covered Morris chair, the presentation being made by President Ed. Hazell. Mr. McIntosh had a great deal to do with engineering the successful outing to Grimsby Beach and the president had some warm words of praise for him.

James Main, treasurer of the same committee, was given a davenport and M. R. (Bay) Hill, the secretary of the association, was the recipient of a purse of gold. Charles Peebles made the presentation to Mr. Main, and John Knox to Mr. Hill.

SHOW CARD WRITING.

light wash colors so that the lines will show through what may be used. In this case, for reproduction, two shades of grey were employed. The lettering was then filled in with an opaque grey. Grey, of course, is rather a dead shade for window cards in practical use, and we would suggest brighter tints, which would blend with the goods being shown in the displays.

For the small script lettering a pen may be used to outline.

Further particulars regarding pens, brushes, outfits, etc., may be had by writing to the editor of this paper, 143 University Avenue, Toronto.

Large Quantities of Canadian Peaches

Market Receiving Many This Week—Good Supply St. Johns Expected for Next Week—Declines in Lawtonberries, Tomatoes, Beans, Etc.—Canadian New Potatoes Replacing Imported——Corn on Cob Selling Well.

Canadian peaches are plentiful now on fruit markets. This refers particularly to the cling store varieties, but St. Johns made their debut in small quantities and in another week will be fairly plentiful. In view of the receipt of such large quantities peach prices have dropped, both Canadian and Californian. Fruit growers in the Niagara Peninsula estimate a fairly good peach crop. A "fair average" is what they term it, with splendid crops in some orchards and poor in another.

This week will practically see the end of raspberries, gooseberries and red currants, but Lawtonberries are having their innings. So much so that prices have eased off 3 or 4 cents per box.

Lemons are not at all plentiful and not likely to decline any. Verdellis are wearing few and although some are on the way there will not be many. Brokers are taking orders for Fresh Cuts which will not arrive till October. No prices are being quoted until information re supply is known.

In vegetables, tomatoes, cucumbers, beans and Canadian potatoes are plentiful. Tomatoes have declined considerably in face of heavy supplies.

MONTREAL.

FRUITS.—The sale of California fruit locally has been on quite a large scale, the prices being well within reason.

A despatch from Sacramento, states that reports from the districts of Northern California where table grapes are grown indicate that the crop will be slightly smaller than last year and growers are looking forward to higher prices. The major part of the shortage will be in Tokaye. The crop will amount perhaps to about 7,500 cars.

TORONTO.

FRUITS.—The local fruit market this week saw an abundant arrival of peaches both foreign and domestic. There were peaches, peaches everywhere and prices from a week ago are much reduced. The reduction so far as Niagara peninsula was concerned ran from 20 to 40 cents per basket. The Canadians arriving are chiefly the clingstone variety. These have not the flavor of the St. Johns which will be fairly plentiful next week. In fact, the latter began to arrive on Tuesday of this week, but only small quantities were secured.

Considerable business is being done in California plums, peaches and pears. Lawtonberries arrived freely during week and prices sagged about 3 cents per box. Raspberries to all accounts and purposes are off the market and gone for another year, and gooseberries are passing quickly. Only some firms could supply the latter this week. Red currants have also disappeared.

Lemons are scarce and with continued warm weather will firm up further. There are some Verdellis on the way, but quantity is reported small. Fresh cuts will not arrive until October.

VEGETABLES.—Among the chief vegetables on market this week were tomatoes, green beans, cucumbers, marrow and new Canadian potatoes. Corn on cob in bags, of 10 dozen each, was also offered freely and is selling well. With few exceptions, Canadian vegetables are replacing imported and are being taken up by retailers in enormous quantities. United States potatoes have practically gone off the market before increased domestic supplies. In view of increase in arrival of tomatoes prices have gone down considerably, practically half from week ago. From now on, business in all lines of home grown stuff will increase. All lines will soon be within reach of smallest purse.

Decline Registered in Winter Wheat Flour

When Deliveries of New Crops Are Made General, Declines in Flour and Rolled Oats Are Probable—Millers Inactive at Present—Great Crops Looked for in West—Wet Weather Sprouting Some Ontario Wheat.

Since week ago winter wheat flour has declined 25 cents. This is chiefly due to the anticipation of new crop Ontario wheat, although in reality none has yet been put on the market. Manitoba flour remains same as week ago.

Millers are now looking into future to try to determine what new world's wheat crops will bring forth. That Western Canada will have a tremendous crop is practically assured. United States has also a bumper crop, and from all accounts Russia will be in the same boat, although Russia is usually a dark horse in this regard. When new crop Western Canadian wheat comes on market, there will in all probability be a decline so that at present retailers would not be far astray in purchasing for immediate wants.

In Ontario, wheat crops are not extra good. Much land was drowned out early in season, and recently continuous rains have caused wheat in the stock to sprout in some cases. Millers state that Ontario wheat will not run over 57 to 58 pounds to the bushel on an average. Barley has suffered similarly from wet weather, but no damage has been reported re oats.

Our wheat and flour prices are too high to compete in export markets with those of United States and this is another reason for easing in prices.

Rolled oats market has shown little change from week ago, business being good but not at all rushing. Until new oat crops mature further, market in rolled oats will likely remain same.

Nothing further has been learned of progress of new Western Ontario Milling merger. On the Toronto Grain Exchange during week, bets were offered that it would not materialize. But time will tell.

MONTREAL.

FLOUR—Business at moment is slow trade being inclined to wait until some definite news comes of new crop. The export demand has also slackened somewhat, not that any very large amount of business has been transacted over the cable of late, as quotations from the other side were very much out of line, and millers were not inclined to consider them. Again, higher freight rates are counting against any active export trade in wheat from Montreal.

FLOUR—Winter wheat flour declined 25 cents per sack during the week. New crop Ontario wheat is anticipated which is one of the causes for the decline. United States wheat and flour prices too are below ours and millers there were able to compete successfully in the Old Country market. Until new wheat is delivered there is not likely to be much further change, but we can reasonably expect lower prices then in view of heavy crop of wheat anticipated in Western Canada.

CEREALS—No change has occurred in rolled oats or rolled wheat and none may be expected till new crops are ready for delivery. Then lower prices should follow. Trade in rolled oats is fair, with sales limited to small lots to fill actual requirements.

Halibut Scarce on the Pacific Coast

Cause Attributed to Increasing Number of Fleets in Past Years When There Was Always a Surplus—Some Wholesalers Almost Out of Halibut Last Week—This Scarcity Increases Sales of White Fish and Trout—Oyster Season to Open Soon.

The feature of the fish market this week is the scarcity of halibut in British Columbia waters. The decrease is proving a source of uneasiness among fishermen and at the same time is giving Eastern wholesale dealers trouble in filling retail demand.

In every year prior to the present, all halibut-producing companies have been bothered with surplus catches during summer months. This year has proved a decided exception, although steamers plying from Vancouver have been making longer trips. The longer trips have resulted almost invariably in smaller cargoes of halibut.

Instead of having surplus stock to dispose of at prices less than cost of production, as in former years, the produce companies this year have been taxed to bring in enough halibut to supply the fresh fish demands. In former years the large halibut producing companies would freeze and store their surplus catches, but this year there has been but few times when there was sufficient to freeze. The outlook for Vancouver, Seattle and Tacoma is for the smallest pack of frozen halibut that has ever been put up.

The probable cause of this shortage is the continuous hard fishing the year round by ever increasing fleets. In such a case nothing but firmer markets are in sight.

QUEBEC.

MONTREAL—Haddock and cod remain plentiful, but halibut is still scarce with price firm at recent advance, the fish, however, being a good size. The season for Gaspe Salmon is practically at an end, though local wholesalers report that they will still have supplies coming along for the next few weeks. Brook trout are not quoted on market now, but they will figure on wholesaler's lists about end of August. Lake fish are in none too good supply. An advance in price of lobsters is expected in the near future, as supplies are short. Bulk oysters will begin to arrive next week.

ONTARIO.

TORONTO—Wholesale fish dealers report a big scarcity of halibut. Last week it could scarcely be secured with the result that this market has firmed up somewhat. Trout and white fish have also been on the short side, and the demand for them has been strengthened by reason of shortage in halibut.

While fresh fish sales have been fair during the summer in spite of hot season, yet they will really not begin in earnest until next month. Dealers are beginning to think about oysters, and with September 1st there will likely be considerable business in this line.

NOVA SCOTIA.

HALIFAX—Fish markets are becoming a little more active, but prices are unchanged. It is reported that catch on north side of Newfoundland to date is best for years, and even in Placentia Bay on south side, where fish were reported scarce early in season, good catches are now being made.

Reports just received from Labrador state that good catches have been made on the southern part of that coast, but no news yet from floaters, who have gone to the far north.

As Newfoundland Banking fleet has had best summer voyage for years, it is expected our Lunenburg Bankers will also report with large catches. In view of fact that Norwegian fishery was nearly 75 per cent. above average, news that Atlantic fisheries will be good has caused an optimistic feeling that will undoubtedly tend towards lower prices, and a much better all round distributing trade, and more profitable business to all concerned.

MANITOBA.

WINNIPEG — Business in fresh and salt fish is quite up to average. Supplies are ample to meet all requirements. Canned salmon is firm, and the new pack is expected to rule high.

Produce & Provisions

Butter and Egg Markets are Puzzling

Difficult to Tell Which Way They are Heading — Evidence to Sustain Both Contentions—Production in United States Increasing—Spring Make of New Zealand Butter to Come—General Business Good.

The provision business in the large centres this year has been splendid and in majority of cases much better than during 1911. One wholesale provision house doing a local trade in a large city states that his business in July was $6,000 in excess of same month last year. During previous months the increase averaged $3,400 per month over a year ago. This is a good sign of sound business increase and it is to be hoped is also in evidence with other dealers.

Retailers are purchasing large quantities of cooked meats. Evidently they have been busy working up a good demand for these from their customers and as season advances wholesalers find sales increasing. There have been few price changes in these lines during week.

Butter presents a number of interesting features. At moment there is an easier feeling being experienced but whether it will develop into a decline is hard to say. Demand from the Canadian West has not been as good as formerly owing no doubt to the high prices. Butter is some three cents higher than a year ago.

Some interesting statistics have been arranged, based on the United States market. Returns from 40 cold storage warehouses show receipts of butter up to August 1 this year to be 55,075,000 packages as compared with 49,514,000 in 1911 up to same date. This is an increase of over 5,500,000 and indicates that an easier feeling is underway. At present, however, Chicago quotations with duty and freight of 5 or 6 cents per lb. added brings price too high for export to this country. Some New Zealand stock has arrived at Vancouver but this is not new season's make. The shipments included some 4,000 packages. Receipts of butter in Montreal between May 1 and Aug. 7 show a decrease of 25,351 packages as compared with same period a year ago. It is therefore, difficult at time of writing to tell what is going to happen in butter. It is apparently too high for storage and yet demand is good and supply little if anything in excess.

While this week eggs are a shade firmer than last yet there are many looking for an easier market. If we do see cheaper eggs it will likely be due to United States stock underselling us even when duty and freight are added. Reports from 40 U.S. cold storage houses show receipt of 3,250,000 doz., up to Aug. 1, as compared to 3,108,000 last year up to same period. One wholesale dealer has had a quotation from Chicago offering prime candled stock, duty and freight paid for 23¼ cents. He looks for a reaction in price. But demand is excellent and Canadian supply not large.

MONTREAL.

PROVISIONS.—With cooler weather prevailing the market has been more active and supplies have been better all round. The demand for all lines of cooked meats is good, while lard is also well looked after even if price is slightly on high side.

BUTTER.—While prices been maintained yet there is an easier feeling in the butter market but wholesalers do not expect that there will be any material drop in price and supplies are beginning to fall off at many points. Since May 21 there has been a falling off of 26,383 packages as compared with corresponding period of last year. But there are some who are confident that present prices cannot be maintained, as they claim that cold storage stocks in the U.S.A. are gathering up quickly and the make now going on is also showing a decided increase. These points taken for what they are worth, go to make an interesting situation.

PROVISIONS.—Retail demand for cooked meats if anything continues to improve. Retailers evidently are going in more and more for these lines and needless to say are making extra money. Householders do not relish working over a hot stove in hot weather so that sales are made all the more easy on this account. Some retail grocers seem content to stick to one line, cooked ham, whereas they could without much trouble sell several other cooked lines as tongue, spiced beef, roast pork, jellied hock, etc.

Few changes have occurred in prices during the week. Dressed hogs have taken an advance from $11 and $11.50 to $11.75 and $12.25 due to the prevailing scarcity in the market.

BUTTER.—The butter situation becomes a Chinese puzzle when one gets the opinions of several wholesale dealers. There are those who look for an easier situation and others who cannot see anything but strong prices. Butter is not coming along very fast; on the other hand as one wholesale provision man remarked buyers have "to go and fetch it." One reason why butter is going to ease off, according to advocates of that opinion, is that it is too high for storage purposes. Butter put away at present prices will be worth something next winter. It is further stated that some New Zealand butter is on the way to Canada via Vancouver but this will not likely amount to a great deal for some time yet as New Zealand heavy spring season has not yet arrived. So far as local trade is concerned there is little prospect of it becoming much cheaper until after the exhibition. Butter, however, is too high for export and while production is acknowledged to be good in the United States, the duty of 4 cents plus freight will prevent its being brought in unless our prices rise much higher. Summed up the market is a peculiar looking one with the future hard to determine.

EGGS.—If opinions differ on butter they differ just as much on eggs. For the time being eggs present a fairly strong front and some wholesalers have been quoting higher prices than week ago. However, Chicago stock may have a bearing on future prices. One dealer has brought in two car loads from Chicago for which was paid 18¾ cents. Duty and freight would bring this up to 22¾ cents per dozen. Another dealer was offered prime candled good North Michigan stock for 23¼ cents, all of which suggests the possibility of a reaction in price. At present, nevertheless eggs are firm and local retail demand splendid.

CHEESE.— There is little old cheese now on this market. One or two firms may have a few but they are gradually being reduced. No change has taken place in new stock from week ago.

POULTRY.—It is too early yet for much business to be done in dressed poultry from wholesaler to retailer. The hot weather prevents it but next month will see something better. Wholesalers are buying live stock from country merchants but are discouraging the dressed stock. The atmospheric conditions are not conducive to handling dressed with any degree of certainty and losses are likely through tainted flesh. Below is given both a list of prices paid by commission men and wholesalers to country merchants for live stock and those charged retail purchasers.

HONEY.—There is little doing yet in honey. As was previously mentioned new clover honey is on the market and prices promise to be higher than last year. The past winter was hard on the bees, killing many of them, but those that wintered well have had a fairly good season. Recent rains will insure good clover for some time yet.

Facts About Butter Retailers Should Know

Excess of Water Removes Body—Too Much Salt in Some Butter—Losses Due to Mottle and Mould—Good Butter Can Be Easily Sold—Knowledge of its Goodness Helps the Sale.

Butter is a universal food in the household. Except in a few cases every family uses butter and when butter is used most people want it good. Retail dealers should see that so far as possible, therefore, butter for eating purposes should be as good as can be purchased.

Every dealer should know something about this important line. To know means that more of it will be sold. Customers deal with merchants who can give them information about what they eat and therefore knowledge of butter is required to sell it best.

16 Per Cent. Water the Limit.

The grocer should know that a matter of great importance in butter is "body" and "texture." Since the time when incorporation of water became a matter practised by many creameries, there has been more or less trouble with the body and texture of butter. The honest merchant will not knowingly buy butter containing 16 per cent. or more of water. He does not want the butter of a greasy nature, but is looking for that solid, boring butter that has a good stiff body, the kind butter makers call a "waxy" piece of butter.

Waves and mottles in butter, although innocent-looking spots and stripes, are costly to the merchant, manufacturer and consumer. Mottles in butter cause a loss of four to six cents, depending on the difference in price between firsts and specials. This defect can be easily overcome by the manufacturer.

Amount of Salt Required.

The salting of butter plays no unimportant part. It is said that some creameries try to incorporate as high as six per cent. of salt. This oversalting of butter has the same bad effect as butter that is very badly mottled. The market requires butter containing from one to two and a half per cent. of salt. In buying the dealer should give his attention to these matters and see that the butter purchased has been properly made.

Good Butter Easily Sold.

Merchants everywhere are finding ready sale for real good butter. They should co-operate with manufacturers and producers if possible to elevate the standard of this article, and should make it a point to handle, and deal in pure unadulterated butter. At present, the people will consume all the pure, fancy butter made, at a reasonably high price, if they are given the quality they desire.

Losses must eventually be distributed among the merchant, consumer, producer and manufacturer, when it should be all borne by the manufacturer if it is his fault. It is unreasonable that the merchant or consumer should be obliged to stand it.

Not an Enterprise for the "Quitter"

¶ "If there is one enterprise on earth," says John Wanamaker, "that a 'quitter' should leave severely alone, it is advertising. To make a success of advertising one must be prepared to stick like a barnacle on a boat's bottom.

¶ "He must know before he begins it that he must spend money—lots of it.

¶ "Somebody must tell him that he cannot hope to reap results commensurate with his expenditure early in the game.

¶ "Advertising does not jerk; it pulls. It begins very gently at first, but the pull is steady. It increases day by day and year by year, until it exerts an irresistible power."

SIMPLY DELICIOUS!

BY ROYAL APPOINTMENT

CARR & CO., LTD. CARLISLE, ENG.

Follow us, Brother Grocer, every day into thousands of smiling stores throughout Canada—big stores, small stores, and middling. And you will learn—
That the flour that sells best is the flour that suits best. We have watched since 1888 the keen, alert, progressive dealers ride on to fortune. Always the foundation has been the Satisfaction of the Buyer.
Look through the stocks selected by the big leaders in the trade —no matter what other brand or brands they carry, you will find FIVE ROSES flour there—

Five Roses Flour

Not Bleached Not Blended

If you aspire after big flour sales some day, you must start at the bottom.
Build the base right.
Establish your business on such a firm foundation that it will be impossible for any competition the future may bring forth to steal away its prestige.
If the past does not prophesy falsely, Brother Grocer, FIVE ROSES flour and the LAKE O' THE WOODS connection will afford you a base as solid as a rock.
It must have many elements of success to have forced the sales expansion from 800 barrels in 1888 to 10,500 barrels a day with a still further increased capacity in sight.
Don't build on the shifting sands, Brother Grocer; don't YOU stock what progressive grocers are casting aside.
You can stock FIVE ROSES in any size or package to suit your trade.
At your jobber's—or our nearest office.

Absolutely Unsolicited

Mr. Grocer:—The above is a strong assertion, but nevertheless perfectly TRUE. We have been talking to you for months about the merits of the "New Cut"

PAN YAN Pickles and Sauce

Read for yourself what we have received only this week, and remember, Absolutely Unsolicited:

"Our stock of 'Pan Yan' is entirely exhausted. Please send on a further supply immediately. We have never had such a demand for pickles before."

Another grocer asked us to send a sample of "Pan Yan" Pickle to a customer of his, and to let him know that he was keeping it in stock. Without request on our part, we have had the following letter from the consumer:

"I have to acknowledge receipt of sample bottle of 'Pan Yan' Pickle, for which I am obliged. It is rightly described as being the 'last word' in table condiments, and I shall be pleased to praise it to my epicurean friends."

Just think it over and write for a Sample Bottle, or better still, order a small quantity through your jobber. Remember, these goods are advertised in every street car, which is bound to create the demand.

See you have them to supply this demand.

Hold a Bottle in Your Hand

One top-notch retail salesman we know attracts the housewife's attention to Shirriff's True Vanilla by taking a bottle and holding it in his hand. Then, with his pencil, he points to the words:

Shirriff's True Vanilla

"Notice the words, True Vanilla, Madam," he says. He then goes on to explain to her their meaning, telling her that Shirriff's True Vanilla is the real extract of Mexican Vanilla beans, and not a chemical imitation. He asks her if she wouldn't like her cakes, puddings, and sauces to have the real Vanilla flavor, which is far more delicious than any imitation flavor. He winds up by telling her how Shirriff's True Vanilla excels in strength, and how many cakes one bottle will flavor. He rarely fails to make the sale.

Upon request we will send you a list of selling points that have proved successful in promoting the retail sale of Shirriff's True Vanilla.

Big money can be made just now by promoting the sale of "SIMCOE" BAKED BEANS. They can still be bought and sold at the same price when white beans cost only $1.80 per bushel, whereas the present market price is up to $3.00 per bushel.

The value of labels

Did you ever stop to consider the value of the labels on the goods you sell?

The value to you! It is tremendous!

Suppose that to-morrow morning you should find all the labels in your store changed; not a familiar color; not a familiar picture; not a familiar phrase. You would consider yourself almost ruined. You would know that no amount of talking would sell these strange looking goods.

Why? Because the public has been educated to recognize the goods by the package. It is the old story of building confidence. With this confidence gone your best asset is gone.

Where the goods have "made good" the wrapper or package is like the signature on a good check. It is the mark of identification.

The public has learned and thoroughly believes that the picture of the well-known Quaker on a package of cereal food is a certain guarantee that the contents of that package are pure, clean and wholesome; the best possible.

It requires no talking to sell Quaker Oats Quality goods. The talking has been done by years of persistent advertising and the goods have "made good." You know by experience that a buyer of Quaker Oats Quality goods is always a satisfied customer.

Be sure to show to your customers the great variety of Quaker Oats Quality products that they have to select from. Variety in everything except quality. This perfect, uniform quality is the best thing for you, as well as for the customers; they are being educated to it every day, by the widespread, convincing and persistent advertising that we are doing.

Display plenty of Quaker labels; pile packages of the various products in conspicuous places in your store. It will be a reminder to the public that will mean sales for you.

Don't forget the value of the Quaker label. Make it help you to sell goods.

Why Don't You do Like Him?

H. J. Buckley, of Moberly, Mo., who bought a No. 84 Kingery Corn Popper with Peanut cylinder extra for $94.00.

He writes that the machine is doing fine. I pay $40.00 per month rent and have four people employed, and machine pays rent and help.

Now to get at his profits in this little, big business, let's do a little figuring. Rent $480 per year. Four clerks at $5.00 per week each, $1,040, total $1,520, or 15 times the cost of his machine. Did you ever add anything to your business that beats it? In some cases they have earned more net profit than that of the business of the entire store. Furthermore, its attractiveness turns the eyes of passersby upon your store. Often it is the agent of sending them in. It helps the business in the store. The Kingery Peanut Roasters and Corn Poppers are of many kinds and styles—Steam, Electric, Spring and Hand Power. Ranging in price from $8.50 to $350.00. Sold on liberal instalments.

You should have Kingery's Book of Possibilities and Catalog No. 39. They are free.

A Customer Leaving Your Store Must Have Done One of Five Things

1. Bought Goods for Cash

A National Cash Register insures the merchant that all cash will be accounted for and handled correctly.

2. Bought Goods on Credit

A National Cash Register benefits the merchant by preventing loss through failure to charge goods sold on credit or through lost charge slips.

3. Paid Money on Account

A National Cash Register enforces a correct record and this insures the merchant that he gets all money received on account.

4. Collected Money

A National Cash Register benefits the merchant, by preventing anyone paying out money without leaving a record of the amount. This enables him to balance the cash quickly and prevents bills being paid twice.

5. Changed a Coin or Bill

A National Cash Register protects the merchant against loss in making change and furnishes the means of advertising to those who ask to be accommodated.

A National Cash Register benefits merchant, customer and clerk on all of these transactions.

SPECIAL ANNOUNCEMENT RE DELIVERIES

TO THE TRADE.

Gentlemen:—

We are pleased to be able to advise you that notwithstanding the fact that the crops of strawberries, raspberries and peas were very poor, that we were successful in securing sufficient produce to enable us to make the following deliveries on all orders booked by us;

PEAS, ALL GRADES	100%
STRAWBERRIES	100%
RED RASPBERRIES	100%
BLACK RASPBERRIES	100%
RED CHERRIES	100%

We might say that in order to make the above deliveries it was necessary for us to ship large quantities of fresh fruit from the United States to our factories in Ontario, on account of the poor crop of small fruits in Canada, and this, of course, meant a high price for the fruit on account of the heavy duty on same.

Furthermore, when we found that on account of the extremely poor crop of peas that we would not be able to secure sufficient produce from the acreage under contract to take care of our orders for canned peas, we harvested a large portion of the peas which were sown to provide us with our seed peas for next year. This means a little more extra expense for us in purchasing our requirements of pea seed for 1913 at prevailing prices on the open market. However, we promised our customers to make 100% delivery on our orders if at all possible, and we intend to keep our promises.

Furthermore, we only booked orders for a reasonable estimated output of the factories, instead of accepting every order offered to us, regardless of the prospects for delivery, as is done by other canners, and we intend to follow out this policy in the future, so that if you are interested in receiving 100% deliveries on your orders for canned foods another year, it will be worth your while to give us a trial.

Our competitors reported early in the year that it was impossible for us to erect and equip our factories in time for manufacturing operations this season. We were determined to refute these statements and guaranteed a delivery on orders to be at least equal to the deliveries of other canners. All of our factories are in full operation and are now shipping goods to all parts of the DOMINION.

The other canners are delivering 10% on their orders for #2 peas, 15% on #3 peas and 35% on the #4 peas, as against our delivery of 100% on all grades of peas; also 60% on fruits as against our 100%. We had to contend with a little extra expense to obtain these results, but we are satisfied that our customers appreciate the efforts we have put forward to live up to our promises and that additional business for next season will result therefrom.

We are now receiving letters from our customers congratulating us on the quality of our pack and the manner in which we are handling their business, and we feel assured that we can give equal satisfaction to other members of the Trade who will undoubtedly place their business with us another year.

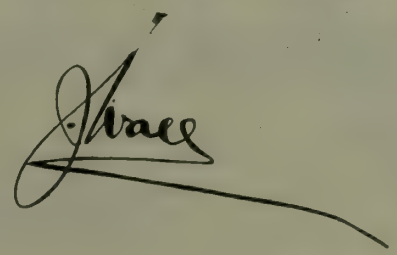
We intend to greatly increase our capacity next year and therefore will be in a position to accept orders for the entire requirements of canned fruits and vegetables of a number of other members of the Wholesale Trade, who placed their orders with our competitors this year, and we respectively suggest that you give us due consideration before placing your contract for canned foods another year.

Our factories are the largest and most up-to-date sanitary canning plants in the Dominion of Canada, and the quality of our goods is unsurpassed. We do not expect to have any surplus unsold goods to offer this season, but we will be glad to send you samples of any of the lines of goods which we have packed, as we are anxious to let you see just what we are doing for the Trade. It is probably early for us to talk about next season's business, but not too early for us to get acquainted, because we want you to keep us in mind so that we will receive due consideration before you place your contract for canned foods another year.

We will be in a position to take care of your total requirements of fruits and vegetables and respectfully solicit your business.

Yours very truly,

BRITISH CANADIAN CANNERS LIMITED,



General Manager.

SUCH TEAS ARE OUR STANDARD BLENDS !

It is impossible to judge a Tea by its appearance. The proper way is to judge it by its drinking qualities. Some Teas look well and smell well but are thin and acrid and are not fit to sell to your customers in an unblended state.

Other Teas may not look or smell so well in the dry state, BUT, when put into the water are rich, mellow and full of the right flavor in the right proportion.

Just send along a trial order for a package of one or more of these fine blends. Get your customers to try them and you will build up a creditable tea trade to our mutual advantage.

We buy and sell all our teas on cup quality. Cup quality is our first consideration.

An Unparalleled Record!

The Story of the Increase in "SALADA" Sales.

Twenty-one years ago we commenced business. In this space of time the output of "SALADA" has grown from 63,290 packets annually to the present immense output of 23,000,000 packets annually.

During that period there have appeared and disappeared from the scene hundreds of packet Teas, all of whose owners predicted that their particular brand was the chosen one that would put "SALADA" out of business. Nearly all of them have dropped out of the race, leaving a trail on the Grocers' shelves, of tea packets which the Grocer cannot sell.

Isn't it about time people recognized that "SALADA" is a permanent institution; that it gives such quality to the public that it is impossible to substitute any other tea for it which will meet with the approval of the consumer.

It has won its present position solely on merit. It is holding first place in the homes of the Nation. It stands at the top for value, for cleanliness and purity, for delicious flavor and incomparable quality —a superior tea for every grocer to sell as a business-builder and a trade-drawer.

In the first seven months of this year we increased our sales over the corresponding period of 1911 by 579,000 lbs.

For all but the blind this carries the moral:—

"SALADA" GIVES SATISFACTION.

Keep it to the front, please your customers and make a good profit.

Making the Interior Draw Extra Trade

View of New Brunswick Store Illustrating Value of Neat and Attractive Interior Display—Proprietor Aims at Getting the People Into the Store Rather Than Getting Them on the Phone—Long Show Case Used for Displays.

There are those who insist that the average woman has in mind her entire list of purchases before entering the grocery store.

This is not substantiated by facts. It has been proven beyond a doubt that the retailer has the power to add to the anticipated purchases of a large percentage of his customers. He does this in many ways, sometimes by suggestion over the phone, by peronal suggestion over the counter, by window display, advertising, by prompt service and last but not least by interior arrangement.

From a Customer's Standpoint.

Take a look at the illustration shown above. Forget you are a grocer. Ask yourself whether the appearance of this store interior would tempt you to buy freely or otherwise. Observe the shelf arrangement, the goods above the shelving, the bottle display about the pillar, the appearance of the show case, the rest-chairs, the flowers and the fruit stand. Do all these things attract or repel?

The answer to yourself is quite evident. You feel as if "here is a store that I can depend on for pure foods, prompt service and cleanliness." The various arrangements speak out to the customer to come and partake of the good things.

A bright, clean, inviting interior in a grocery store is one of the best assets of the store. The above is an illustration of the grocery department of the store of F. E. Williams & Co., St. John, N.B.

Features Quality Goods.

It might be stated that Frank E. Williams, the man behind, sees that the quality of his stock comes up to one's expectations on a look at the store. Only goods that can be recommended are handled. Special advantage is taken of the seasons. Interior displays are used to show exclusive Christmas and Easter lines and the salesmen are instructed to make the most of them.

The good use to which a show case can be put is well exemplified in this interior. A lengthy one is shown here with shelving which permits of the display of several lines of goods such as confectionery, meats in glass, biscuits, macaroni, jelly powders, etc. When a customer sits before such a show case, she cannot fail to see these goods, and she buys one or more of them, sometimes at least. All this means extra trade—trade that wouldn't have come had their been no display.

Interior Display Versus Phone.

Mr. Williams is more anxious to get customers to come to the store than to talk to them over the phone. Frequently the occasional customer will resent being called up by phone to be asked if she wants some fish or fruit. He aims to keep the interior so attractive that when customers came into the store, they are induced to purchase goods they see neatly displayed and which they had not thought of before leaving home.

That store pillars can be not only brightened up but put to good use is exemplified here. Every dealer who has pillars in the store might well emulate this idea. By remembering that to be seen often means to be bought, one will realize the effectiveness of all possible attractive interior displays.

Eliminating Unnecessary Movements

How Newmarket Dealer Prepares Beforehand to Serve Customers Without Wasting Time—Weighs Sugar Beforehand and is Able to Get 100 Pounds from Every Sack—Arrangement of Goods Facilitates Prompt Service When Store is Crowded—Two Separate Businesses in the One Store.

Newmarket, Ont., Aug. 22—(Special).—When you weigh out sugar in small quantities, how much do you get out of a cwt. sack?

"We can weigh 100 pounds out of a cwt." is the assertion of W. L. Bosworth, a grocer of Newmarket, Ont. This statement is interesting from the fact that not infrequently we have grocers refer to the loss in weighing. It is important that the grocer should know if there is a loss incurred in weighing and if so, how much. This must be considered in figuring out the price at which he must sell his goods.

Makes Tests Frequently.

However, Mr. Bosworth scorns the idea that 100 pounds cannot be secured from a cwt. of sugar or a cwt. of anything else for that matter. He realized that it was important to know if this could be done, and so a test was made. In fact a test is frequently made.

When it was mentioned that many grocers say they cannot do this, Mr. Bosworth mentioned that it was their own fault. "If they would parcel their goods up ahead of time, when it is not necessary to be in a hurry and give careful attention to the work, they would find it would come out alright," he says. "Often the delivery boy is given this work to do after the day's work is over and as he is generally in a hurry, the work is done at a loss to the grocer."

Not so in the Bosworth store where the clerks employ their spare time in their work.

In fact, a study of the weighing problem has been made by Mr. Bosworth and his clerks. Care is taken in the work and the most sensitive scales used for the purpose. Not only is sugar done up beforehand but all the important staple lines as well.

Waste in Movements Eliminated.

Besides preventing loss in weighing this is part of a sytem which allows the greatet number of customers to be served with greatest rapidity and without confusion or delay.

Instead of having different kinds of pickles in different places, or different kinds of spices apart, all similar lines are grouped so that the clerk knows exactly where to get a desired article. In the same way associated lines are kept together, soaps, laundry starch and blue for instance being in one place. Staple lines are kept closest at hand. Under the main counter are sugar and tea in diflerent sized packages. In drawers behind the main counter are such lines as raisins, currants, icing sugar, dates, rice, tapioca, etc., all ready parcelled up.

Beneath the drawers a small surplus of different lines of canned goods are kept so that it is not necessary to disturb the shelf display. Spices are all together, the bulk goods being done up ahead in 5 and 10 cent packages and placed in the regular tin canisters to preserve their strength. This is with the exception of cloves, cayenne pepper and other odd lines or so which, because of the oil they contain cannot be done up as the oil would soon saturate the paper bag.

Carries System to Cellar.

The same system prevails in the cellar where the surplus stock is kept. There is a place for everything and everything in its place. When any goods are wanted from the reserve it is not necessary to search the cellar and pull things in general to pieces to get it. The clerk knows the spot where it is to be found.

The system in this store has now been developed to a fine point. It is valuable in the fact that it reduces the expenses of the store, as less help is needed to handle the business than would be the case if there was no system. That this is true is shown by the fact that Mr. Bosworth with two clerks and a delivery man does as much business as would do credit to a store with a much larger staff and much larger expense account.

Taking Care of Saturday Trade.

Like many a town of a similar size there is a rush business on Saturday, for not only do the farmers flock in from the surrounding country but on this day the employes of several manufacturing firms receive their wages. It is at such busy times that the system shows up to advantage. It is the policy of the store to look first after customers during these rush periods. Parcelling of orders is of secondary consideration. "Get the business while it is to be had," is the motto of the store. As the rush slackens one of the clerks begins at the orders so as to get them out as soon as possible.

Fifteen Year' Training.

Mr. Bosworth has been in the grocery business in Newmarket for 15 years, so that his present system is the result of years of study. For 13 years he was behind the counter as clerk but two years ago he purchased the grocery business of his employer, and backed by the experience he gained while a clerk, is in common words "making good," in the enterprise.

A long walk to the sugar barrel, or other source of supply, does not permit of prompt service. Dealers should conserve their movements by systematic methods.

To have your store divided from your neighbors' only by an imaginary line is not a very usual occurrence but such is the case with Mr. Bosworth. His business as well as that of R. A. Smith, crockery and china ware merchant, is in the same store and as we said divided only by an imaginary line. The store is an especially long one and down one side ranges groceries and down the other chinaware.

There are some good features abut such an arrangement. As Mr. Bosworth says, "People who come to buy groceries will have crockery and chinaware brought to their notice, while those who come to buy chinaware will be reminded of their grocery wants."

These two men also combine their advertising in the local paper and find such co-operation good business.

Of course there is an explanation of this order of things. Mr. Smith formerly conducted both grocery and chinaware departments. Two years ago he decided that he could devote his whole attention to chinaware to good advantage, so his grocery department was sold to his head clerk, the present proprietor.

Canned Goods Prices Compared to 1911

Peas, Raspberries, Strawberries and Salmon Generally Speaking Higher Than Year Ago — Beans Open at Same Price—Likely Retail Price on Sockeye Salmon—Reasons for Advances—Prices on Corn and Tomatoes Yet to Come.

Big buyers of canned goods anxiously awaited the new opening prices during past couple of weeks. Last week prices on peas, beans and raspberries were mentioned in The Grocer and even while the paper was on the press telegrams and phone messages came in asking for the information. One of the telegrams was from Western Canada showing how keenly the trade have been awaiting the news.

The biggest items in the vegetable line are peas, tomatoes and corn. It will be some time yet before prices on the two latter are named and it is even a little early to predict what sort of pack will be realized.

Short Delivery on Peas.

But prices on peas are out and are higher in all but one case than year ago as will be noted from accompanying comparison:—

	1911.	1912.
Peas, standard, size 4	$1.00	$1.25
Peas, 2s, extra fine sifted, size 1	1.77½	1.75
Peas, 2s, sweet wrinkle, size 2.	1.20	1.35
Peas, 2s, Early June, size 3...	1.15	1.30

Above quotations are for Ontario and Quebec grade A. Grade B are 2½ cents less per dozen in each case.

It will be remembered that last year the dry weather at a critical period caused short crop and caused advances over 1910 of 2½ cents per dozen. This year a similar cause at end of June and first part of July had same effect, again resulting in short pack. The Dominion Canners are, therefore, only able to deliver 52 per cent. of wholesalers' orders, so far as their own pack is concerned, and have themselves to go into the market for eight per cent., so as to come up to their original guarantee of 60 per cent. of orders.

Pack of extra fine sifted is sufficient for full delivery of orders but the others are short, pack of standards being only 35 per cent. of orders. It will be noted that extra fine sifted at $1.75 are 2½ cents below last year and the same as in 1910.

Standards at $1.25 mean a little less than 10½ cents per can to the retailers (those who purchased before May 1 get 2½ per cent. discount bringing cost down slightly), so that if sold at 12½ cents gross margin on selling price would be somewhere around 16 to 20 per cent.

Beans Open Same as 1911.

With beans the situation is somewhat different as this comparison shows:—

	1911.	1912.
Beans, 2s, golden wax	$1.00	$1.00
Beans, 3s, golden wax	1.40	1.40
Beans, gal., golden wax	4.05	4.05
Beans, 2s, Refugee, green	1.00	1.00
Beans, 3s, Refugee, green	1.40	1.40
Beans, 2s, Refugee, midgets...	1.30	1.30

With prices similar to 1911, canners are evidently anticipating at least as good a pack as year ago. As to whether prices quoted will advance from wholesaler to retailer depends on extent of delivery of orders.

Unfavorable Early Weather.

The cold winter and the long damp spring had an unfavorable effect on the raspberry crop. The pack is only from 65 to 70 per cent. of wholesalers' orders and prices are higher than the opening in 1911.

	1911.	1912.
Raspberry, 2s, bl. heavy syrup.	$2.02½	$2.15
Raspberry, 2s, bl. preserved ...	2.27½	2.40
Raspberry, 2s, red, heavy syrup	2.02½	2.15
Raspberry, 2s, red, preserved...	2.27½	2.40

The advance over a year ago amounts to about one cent per tin or twelve cents per dozen.

Strawberries, as previously announced in our market columns, are in same boat as raspberries. Owing to the drought last year vines did not trail as usual and the severe winter and late spring also had adverse effects. Comparison of prices is shown herewith:—

	1911.	1912.
Strawberries, 2s, heavy syrup..	$1.80	$2.15
Strawberries, 2s, preserved	2.05	2.30
Strawberries, gals., standard ..	7.27½	7.52½
Strawberries, gals., solid pack..	9.25½	9.77½

Percentage of delivery on strawberries has been placed at 60.

Percentage of delivery on strawberries has been placed at 60.

Salmon Prices Go Up.

Not only have fruits and vegetables been firming up in recent years, but canned salmon as well, as shown below:—

Sockeye—	1911.	1912.
1 lb. talls	$2.45	$2.87½
1 lb. flats	2.50	2.92½
½ lb. flats	1.55	1.70
Red spring, 1 lb. tall	2.25	2.50
Cohoes, 1 lb. tall	1.95	2.30
Humpback ,1 lb. tall	1.35	1.25

(2½c doz. less in 5 case lots.)

This means that a small pack in consideration of demand is expected as prices last year were considerably in advance of the year before.

Sockeye pound talls are $2.87½ which means a cost of about 24 cents per tin to the retailer buying in small quantities. To make a gross margin of 20 per cent. on selling price he would have to sell at 30 cents. Evidently there will be more ½ lb. tins sold this year as salmon at 30 cents is pretty nearly in the luxury class.

It may be some time before opening prices are named on corn and tomatoes. Last year they were not out until October. Tomatoes opened then at $1.17½ with about 40 per cent. delivery, and corn at 97½ cents with 90 per cent. delivery.

WORK FOR HEALTH AUTHORITIES

Editor Canadian Grocer.—I recently opened a bag of sugar only to find it unfit for use owing to the fact that dust had sifted through although in a double bag. It was full of fine dust and dirt which, I am convinced, was caused by dirty cars in transit. I have often gone into freight cars and found goods that were completely covered with coal dust and dirt of various kinds. Should not the health authorities give their attention to this mater?

CONSERVING MOTIONS IN THE STORE.

The mason who can lay the most brick in a day is the man who is closest to the brick and mortar, other things being equal. If the brick layer has to stoop three or four feet for every brick and every trowel of mortar, the waste motion greatly reduces his efficiency as a mason. He cannot lay nearly as many bricks, and his earning power is thereby decreased.

In the grocery store where business is frequently carried on with a rush, the salesmen cannot supply the wants of as many customers as they should, if the sources of supply of goods sold are at the other end of the store. It takes time to fill the order. Other people are waiting and are not getting the service they should receive.

An article on another page of this issue tells how a Newmarket, Ont., dealer aims to eliminate as many movements as possible in the store. For instance, when sugar is called for, he or his clerks do not have to take the time to parcel it up. It has already been parcelled at a time when the clerks were free. Staple lines are stocked in the most convenient place. Spices are all in a specified section, and soap, laundry starch, blue, etc., being associated lines, are together.

Such a system is carried out throughout the warehouse as well as the store, so that the dealer and his clerks do not waste movements.

The same idea is depicted in our cartoon. It illustrates an all too-common error on part of many merchants of placing their sugar barrels, etc., so far from a scale. The Newmarket dealer's course of parcelling sugar beforehand is the best method of overcoming the deficiency. It greatly facilitates the work of clerks in rush periods when their time is most valuable, and by eliminating waste movements sell more goods and make more money.

SELLING DIRECT TO THE CONSUMER.

For a long time now daily newspapers have been clamoring for the market gardener to sell direct to the general public. This has been particularly the case in large centres. In Toronto the newspapers scarcely allow a day to pass without getting in some "knock" on the middleman in this regard.

Considering this repetition, one would think the market gardeners would now be all reformed that they would sell direct to the public and eliminate the middleman. So far as a licence is concerned it costs them no more to sell direct than to the retailer or wholesaler. They could undoubtedly get a little more for their products too by going direct.

But the market gardeners are business men. They pay little attention to this friendly advice from the daily paper. They sell to the retailer or to the fruit market and therefore sell for cash, in most cases at least. If accounts are opened they are with from two to ten or a dozen retail or wholesale business men, and there is little chance of loss.

It is different, however, if the market gardener goes direct. He has to deal with many people and open up many accounts, many of which eventually become losses. Instead of one direct route each day to retail stores or wholesale fruit market, he spends the entire day in peddling his wares from house to house. He has the extra wear and tear of conveyances to contend with in addition to loss of time of himself or an employee. Any newspaper studying the facts in the proper light would soon see how foolish it is to advise market gardeners to sell direct, or the public to buy from market gardeners.

In every city there are many peddlers of market truck who are not market gardeners. They go to the wholesale fruit market for the goods and therefore cannot afford to sell cheaper than the established retailer. The other day, the writer in conversation with one of these peddlers,, asked him where his garden was located. His reply was:—"I'm not a market gardener. I only wish I were—I would not be calling on the public. I would take my load every morning to the wholesale fruit market and go home before ten o'clock with $75 or $100 in my pocket. If I had the money it wouldn't take me long to get a garden."

The truck gardeners who are making money are not selling direct. Its poor business for them to do so, and the newspapers may as well call a halt on the wasting of their wind.

GREEN COFFEE AT ITS BEST.

Some years ago a Canadian importer purchased a quantity of green Mocha coffee through a New York broker. When it arrived the importer found it to be moist and too green altogether to use for the high quality blend he had been giving the retail trade. He was almost out of Mocha coffee and the situation which cropped up was most disagreeable.

A letter was immediately despatched to the New York firm—and in the importer's own words, it was a pretty "hot" letter—calling attention to the inferior quality of the shipment and to the disadvantage the Canadian coffee manufacturer was at.

The reply came back that the quality was in the coffee allright, but it was too green for immediate grinding—which fact was greatly regretted. It was further intimated that if it were held a few months its superior character would make itself evident.

This was poor consolation for the importer who wanted to use it at once. He did not really think it would ever be in a condition to suit his trade. Anyway, weeks drifted on, and at the end of six months the coffee was again tested. This time there came a pleasant surprise. It was found to be first-class in every respect and made one of the best blends the importer had had for some time.

This little incident goes to show that coffee can be too green, and that when it is kept in the green state for some months or even a year or more it makes a superior coffee when roasted. This is why coffee manufacturers use aged green coffee, and it also explains why the Brazilian government is able to hold so much coffee under the valorization scheme, from year to year, without deteriorating its quality or value.

A MISTAKEN IDEA.

There was once an old woman who used to sell apples for a living. She maintained that she sold them at a loss.

"But how do you make a living then?" she was asked.

"Oh, but you see I sell so many of them," was her reply.

There are apparently a good many grocers who look upon the selling of certain lines of goods in somewhat the same light. They seem to think because they sell a considerable quantity of some staple that they can afford to do so at little or no profit.

Every article should be made to pay its way in the store. Expenses are figured on the total sales, and if a portion of those sales do not bear their proportion of the cost of selling themselves, it must be borne by some other line or lines.

It may be argued that $1.00 worth of sugar may be sold at cost because it is being evened up by the good profit of 25 cents on another dollar's worth of goods. However, if we figure it up, it will be found that total profit is only 25 cents on the two dollars or 12½ per cent., which is less than the general cost of doing business.

While it may be proper to argue that when a large quantity of any article is sold, it is not necessary to exact such a large rate of profit, nevertheless it must be remembered that expenses must be paid, and that each article must bear its share. This is not possible if goods are sold at cost.

Anyone can sell goods at cost. It takes a salesman to sell at a profit.

MARGARINE IN DENMARK.

Over in Denmark they manufacture and consume large quantities of margarine. During 1911 there were 22 factories operating, making a total production of 77,880,000 pounds. The surplus import amounted that year to 3,344,000 pounds, so that the total consumption amounted to 81,224,000 pounds.

The important raw materials used in the manufacture are oleomargarine, premier jus, neutral lard, cocoa oil, cotton oil and other oils and fats.

It might be mentioned here that margarine is not, or should not be, sold in Canada. Our laws have prohibited its importation, manufacture and sale for many years.

CLEARING OUT OLD STOCK.

In shelving new stock, too much emphasis cannot be laid on the common occurrence of placing it in front of the old. The danger of mismanagement in such a case is obvious and in many cases may be termed detrimental to the sale of certain brands of goods. With some careless dealers, when the stock is replenished, the old stays where it was first placed, and after several months, perhaps, it is thrown out or sold cheap because of its appearnace, and doubt existing as to its original good quality.

Stock is very often arranged this way on account of the necessary work of taking out the old, placing the new in the rear of the self, and then replacing the old in front. Some may think that the new gives better appearance than the faded and fly-specked packages just taken from the back of the shelves. But why these faded and fly-specked packages? Were they placed in front the last time? likely not, if they had been, they would not be unpresentable at the front.

Some kinds of canned or package goods will not keep in first-class condition for any great length of time no matter how well packed. Moreover, every dealer and clerk knows that a faded, fly-specked, dirty and dusty-looking package is not the easiest thing to sell, especially so if it is the introduction of that particular brand. The customer judges the contents by the uninviting outside appearance, and if the product is purchased at all, and happens to be one of the kind that will not keep for "ages" it will be returned. If not, it goes down in the customer's "black book" as an inferior quality article.

This same rule may also be applied to the handling of bulk goods, for if bulk stock is replenished at any time it is always best to remove the old from the container and put it on top of the new.

Tea is one item on the list that will not keep indefinitely, no matter how well it is packed in canisters, tins, or lead packages, it will keep in good condition for a reasonable length of time after which it begins slowly to lose its weight and strength.

It therefore behooves every dealer and clerk to make it a point to always get rid of old stock first, being careful, however, that there is not too much. Everybody wants the newest and freshest eatables obtainable and the "rapid-turnover" point again makes itself evident.

Away last spring I received the following letter:

Dear Sir.—Please give us a statement in the interest of the sale of vegetables and fruits.

"We have three large greenhouses that furnish the trade with home grown vegetables and fruit which we handle on commission. Also there are some twenty-five or more growers of outdoor vegetables and fruit. It has been the custom here of handling it as follows: 10 per cent. in trade and 15 per cent. in cash. A matter of competition has obliged us all to come to this small basis. Some places are handling such goods in other towns and get 20 per cent. to 25 per cent. In the first place the average cost to run a grocery is from 12 per cent. to 15 per cent. We ought to get cash and 10 per cent. extra for doing the business. I feel that if you would publish a reasonable rating that it would stir up the dealers to see that these prices are a losing game. Please look at it in due justice to grower and dealer. I feel that we ought to get at the very least 15 per cent. in trade and 20 per cent. in cash. Please do not publish all this letter, nor use our name, as it will place us in a bad position here and would not accomplish the desired object.

The Profit's the Thing.

"We handle over half the fruit and vegetables grown here and with your good handling of the matter we may get together and sell the goods at a profit.

"The homegrown fruit and vegetables amount to $3,500 to $4,000 per year, and requires a whole lot of hard work. As an illustration, lettuce now in ——— is worth about 25 cents to 30 cents a box, and makes ten good large bunches which would be 50c., which at the most will net 50 per cent., and a good many vegetables, such as parsnip, carrots, cabbage, etc., we are shipping in from ———, the margin or profit is 2c. to 3c. lb., average 25 to 50 per cent. Of course, this is a cash deal.

"If this appeals to you I am willing to leave it to you to publish as you think best, but do not use our name and would be pleased not to have our town name used.

"Also, there is great stir amongst certain persons here that is going to compel us to keep everything indoors, which will require all of us to make some alterations in our store. Have you any suggestions in that line?"

A Puzzling Communication.

I kept that letter for some time, trying to make head or tail of it .

Then I wrote to my correspondent as follows:

"I have gone carefully over your letter and hope to give it early attention; but there are some points about it that are not clear and I must therefore ask you a few questions to which I hope you will reply promptly.

"I notice that you handle those goods on a commission basis. What I do not understand is, exactly what you mean by saying that you handle those goods '10 per cent. in trade and 15 per cent. in cash.' Please tell me exactly what that means, because I fail to grasp it. You say that some places they get 20 per cent. to 25 per cent. commission. Perhaps if you will give me a few examples of just why this thing is done, I can handle it intelligently.

"You say that you ought to get cash and 10 per cent. extra for doing the business. What does that mean?

"You say that the homegrown fruits and vegetables amount to $3,500 to $4,000 per year, which requires a whole lot of hard work. Is this the total amount that is handled by the town? That seems to be very little to me, so I imagine it must be what you yourselves handle.

"You say that lettuce in ——— is now worth 25c. to 30c. per box, which makes ten 5c. bunches, and that you are shipping parsnips, carrots, cabbage, etc., from ———, with a margin of profit of 2c. to 3c. a pound, and this is a cash deal. I cannot quite understand this part of it. If you buy stuff from ———,and make such a margin as you indicate, you certainly have nothing to complain of. Perhaps you intend to illustrate how much better you do when you get goods from ——— than when you handle local products.

"I shall not use your name nor expose you, but I want full details, because while we handle large quantities of fruits and vegetables ourselves, we have no such conditions to contend with."

Up to date I am without any reply; and now I ask if any of my readers can tell me any more about such conditions so that we may work out a remedy, or palliation, if possible.

Question on Co-operative Buying.

A correspondent of three or four weeks ago writes again as below:

Henry Johnson, Jr.

Dear Sir,—We note your reply to our recent inquiry.

You ask, "Wherein does co-operative buying differ from any other buying?" In realty it differs in no respect from any other buying, but we have charged this merchandise, the full amount to the merchandise account and treated it as a sale when delivered to the other stores, who had been in on the deal. In this way is was a sale without any profit.

Depreciation not included, is as you infer, the net amount given, the depreciation having been deducted. Cash on account is the amount of cash paid by customers on accounts receivable.

Net worth on March 7th, 1911, is made up of the following items:

Mdse. on hand Mar. 6, 1911..	$15,737.81
Cash on hand and in bank..	42.30
Freight and dray	503.61
Fixtures	737.21
Bills receivable	1,133.88
Accounts receivable	3,032.44
	$21,187.25
Money drawn from business	2,000.00
		$23,187.25
Bills payable	3,565.25
Other liabilities	816.94
		$18,805.91

You will notice that we have included $2,000, as an asset which had been drawn during the year. We notice that you have not considered the $1,950.03 as an asset in making up the net worth but have considered it as an expense. Is this not an error on your part? Would make considerable difference in figuring expense and profit. The $2,624 is included in merchandise purchased as well as in sales for year 1912. Kindly let us hear from you after looking over these figures.

We have already changed our method of bookkeeping. We only consider the produce as a sale when exchanged for merchandise and conduct the produce part entirely separate from the rest of the business, making it stand the loss instead of merchandise standing it. Also keep track of all goods sold without profit and deduct them from the sales.

Do you know anyone who would be capable of doctoring up our business? We feel that our system is too complicated as it is now.

Thanking you very kindly for the suggestions, we are,

Very truly yours,

B—G—F—& Bro.

Of course it makes a difference whether one gets down to brass tacks and

*The writer of this article is one of the most successful dealers on the continent. squeezes all the wind and water out of his statement or includes all kinds of imaginary items. If things were so ordered that we could count all the money we took in as pure gain and forget all about anything paid out again—why, almost any of us could make a good showing. But a "showing" is only a secondary matter. What we are after is to make money, and "the mill will never grind with the water that has passed."

In my early experience I ran a corporation, though it was also a retail business. I hoped it would some day pay big dividends so I ran it somewhat as my friend runs his business. One stockholder was a woman who had no extensive means, and I paid her a small sum monthly which I charged to dividend account and counted among my assets. I found, however, that my jobber would not regard that item as an asset at all; but wiped it out as something dead and gone. In fact, he brutally called it "expense!" Seemed kind of mean of him at the time, but I have since concluded he was right—for the corporation never did pay any dividends and we never got any of those advances back. So he was apparently right.

Resource Must Be Tangible.

When you set out to find your "net worth," how can you count as a resource something you have not got? Let us grant that you have—actually HAVE all the items listed in this statement, including the $503.61 of drayage, etc., as that may be added to the value of merchandise, except that matter of $2,000, which you have paid out and certainly have not now. In this way you will find your Net Worth not as $18,805.91, but as $16,805.91; and it will compare much better with the actual net possessions at the end of the next period.

Indeed, I agree with you. Your bookkeeping is certainly too complicated. You seem to "account" for each different nickel three or four times—and in the end you lose track of the nickel. Better cut out most of that kind of "accounting" and get some system that really does account.

Consult an Expert Accountant.

Your nearest big city is ————. I suggest that you write to Bradstreets or Dun's agency in that town and ask for the addresses of two or three reliable expert accountants. Then select the one that looks best to you after you have had some correspondence with them. There is nothing to be gained through my trying to work out anything for you because your troubles are too fundamental. You need a completely new start.

Prices and Profits Discussed by Grocers

At Regular Meeting of Association Retail Dealers Talk of Many Things—Interesting Discussion on Price of Soap, Spices and Canned Peas—One Tells of Use of Meat Cutter for Slicing Bread—The Figuring of Profits.

Toronto, August 22.—(Special.)—The August meeting of the Toronto Retail Grocers Association was held in the Temple Building on Monday night with president R. W. Davies in the chair.

One of the interesting side discussions of the evening was on figuring profits. It is evident that all grocers have not yet recognized that the only safe and sure method of figuring profits is on the selling price.

"The trouble is," said Donald McLean, "that a grocer will buy an article at $1.00 and sell it at $1.20 and think he is making 20 per cent., while in reality, he is only making 20 cents on $1.20 or 16 2-3 per cent. Now if he really wants to make 20 per cent. he must sell at $1.25."

The fault as pointed out by S. W. Hall, is that dealers do not recognize that 20 per cent. added to cost of article is not the same amount as 20 per cent. taken off selling price. He gave an example to show this.

A merchant has a stock of $5,000 which, if marked at an advance of 20 per cent. on cost, amounts to $6,000. Now suppose he is going to sell to another dealer, he might say, "I have these goods marked at 20 per cent. advance, I will take that percentage off the $6,000 and that is the amount at which I should sell the stock to him."

However, when figured out, 20 per cent. off is $1,200, so he would be selling it for $4,800 when it cost him $5,000. Thus it is shown that 20 per cent. on is not the same as 20 per cent. off.

"I see ———— have all the soaps in their window at 4 cents a bar," stated one of the grocers.

"I am selling all but one of the soaps at five cents straight, and I sell just as much of the five straight as I do of the six for a quarter."

"I am still selling six for 25 cents," said another.

"Why, you are not making the cost of doing business," was a reply.

"Oh, I bought before soap went up."

"That makes no difference. If you had to replace that soap now, it would cost you about as much as you are selling it at. When soap went down I put it 6 for 25c. I raised the price when it went up again.

"That was the time to change, when we could offer an excuse to our customers. There is no reason why we should sell soap at cost."

"No," remarked another dealer, "everything in the store should be made pay its own way. Selling soap at 6 for 25c or $4.16 per box that costs $4.05 is not making money. It is losing it. It is better to sell 5 cases at 5 cents straight than 25 cases at 6 for 25 cents."

The Provision Department.

An exchange of methods on handling provisions proved interesting. Among assertions made were the following:

"I buy backs with bones and bone them myself. I get them for 2 cents per pound less and bone only weighs 8 or 9 ounces."

"I don't waste a bit of meat with my meat slicer," said a second.

"I used to when I had all the clerks handling it, while several didn't understand it. Now I have one man who looks after it entirely. In the morning he slices up enough to do nearly all day and is thus able to slice the ends up well and mix them through the different packages. I think that the correct way as you cannot put in the ends if you slice it while a customer is watching."

Another dealer stated that he always sold the ends off in pieces to certain customers at a slight reduction.

Meat Slicer as Bread Slicer.

A grocer told of having received an order for 40 loaves of bread the other day to be sliced with the meat cutter. It did the work well.

"I always charge 5c per large loaf more for bread when I slice it," he said. "I have done a lot of slicing on this basis lately for people who want it for sandwiches."

Selling Price of Spices.

Conversation on spices also afforded an opportunity to hear retailers' opinions on selling prices.

"I had to pay 20 cents for black pepper to-day," said one, "and I will sell it at 30 cents per lb. or 2½ ounces for 5c."

"When I weigh out 5 cents worth," said another, "I only give 2 ounces." A third declared that he sold all his spices at 2 ounces for 5c, no matter what they cost him.

"You have to sell celery seed at 5 cents per oz. now. It costs 45 cents per pound." was the advice of still another.

An Innovation in Taking Summer Holidays

Toronto Grocer Closes Up Completely for Two Weeks and Places Absentee Sign on the Door—Clerks and Drivers also Have Their Holidays—Before Leaving He Urged Customers to Anticipate Their Wants—Opened Again Last Monday with Big Business.

Toronto, Aug. 21—(Special). Much has been said in recent years about the necessity as well as the possibility of grocers taking an occasional holiday. We have heard of merchants arranging for a half holiday each week during the summer months, of taking week end trips or of skipping away for a week or so and allowing the clerks to pilot the ship of business in their absence.

It remained, however, for "Dick" Van Loan, a grocer at 19 Danforth Ave., Toronto, to lead the way in something entirely original in regard to grocers' holidays. No week end or week for him with constant telephone calls to straighten out tangles in the business which he had attempted to banish completely from his mind.

Sign Told of Absence.

He decided this year to have a real holiday and when he closed the store on Saturday Aug. 3, a sign in front of his store heralded forth the fact to all and sundry that he had gone on a two-week vacation and that the store would be closed until his return.

He closed everything up completely, sent his clerks off on a holiday, put his delivery horses out on pasture and betook himself and family to Big Bay Point, Lake Simcoe, Ont.

Of course he did not do this without giving his customers due notice. For three weeks previous to closing, on every parcel sent out notice of the intended two week holiday was stamped. He urged his customers to antedate their wants for the next two weeks and believes that the large majority did this in staple lines.

Exact Results Not Yet Known.

He has yet to find out exactly how the holiday affected business but when he opened up on Monday of this week, he did the biggest business he has ever had on a Monday.

Besides there is no doubt that this unusual action of a grocer will have a considerable advertising value as anything out of the ordinary always attracts public attention.

Eliminates Previous Arrangements.

Mr. Van Loan employs one clerk and two drivers, while his wife and daughter assist. "By the time you spend six weeks beforehand preparing a staff to look after the business in your absence and have to run to the telephone every day during your holiday to straighten out some tangle back at the store, you really have no holiday," he claims, "so this year I decided I would close up everything and take a real holiday."

Mr. VanLoan was in the grocery business at the corner of Gerrard and Broadview St. for 17 years. Two years ago he moved to his present location on Danforth Ave.

British Columbia Traveler on Profits

His Claim is That the Retail Dealer Should Get Behind the Goods That Will Produce Best Margins—Says This is Cure for the Small Profit Talks.

By T. P. F.

These days we are continually listening to the wail of the grocers about the rising price of articles of sale, that their profits are cut to almost nothing. Yet they continue to handle the same lines and keep turning down the houses that are offering them a proper white man's margin. Why is it? Well their excuse is that they dare not tamper with their trade. Are they tampering? If a customer is given to understand that the article she wishes to purchase is only giving him 10 per cent. when it takes 25 per cent. to run his business.

I think that nine out of ten will be fair-minded on the question. Let the grocer exercise a little salesmanship instead of being a machine. Let him gain the confidence of his customers, give them some knowledge of the article they are buying, handle his customer that knows it all with a little elastic, give the goods that give him the margin, the most prominent position in the store. Let him ask the traveler for information on an article on which he is not well posted, and if he is the right kind he will gladly give him any thing he knows to further his interest.

Editorial Note.—It is by all means proper that the dealer push the sale of goods which carry with them a fair net profit. The only thing that should be given care in doing this to see that the lines pushed are of a high quality. If a dealer is not assured of the quality of a certain line, it would be folly to attempt to sell it even if margin were greater than on a competitive but less profitable line.

HINTS ON WINDOW DISPLAY.

It does not pay to discard any material after dismantling a display, unless it is so worn that it could not be used again. Everything will come in handy afterward. By careful preservation of all material, the outlay for window displays can be kept very low.

The window trimmer should keep wideawake to what is interesting the public. If he can introduce into his displays something which refers to a matter of great public interest, he is sure of attracting public attention. Holiday trims are always successful and special celebrations should always be "played up."

Brown Wrapping Paper.—Up.

Montreal, Aug. 23.—Business for past week has been satisfactory though some wholesalers find lack of enthusiasm in some parts of the country. Collections are better and, taking everything into consideration, there is every reason to look forward to a good future business.

Brown wrapping paper has gone up to the 3½ cent mark, the reduction to 2¾ cents having been unwarranted as far as the raw market was concerned.

Carolina rice has advanced also due of course to strained conditions in the East.

The prices for 1912 pack of Clover Leaf salmon have been named, 1 lb. talls, $2.85-2.87½; 1 lb. flats, $2.90-$2.97½; while the prevailing prices for same line on spot are 1 lb. flats, $2.90; ½ lb. flats, $1.67½.

SUGAR.—Following the decline of last week prices are steady and local wholesalers look to a general steadiness for next few months basing their arguments on fact that the crops in the islands are practically all cleaned up and that the small movement of the Cuban crop generally tends to steady matters. Still a little speculation would very soon upset this theory so that one refrains from speaking very definitely about the probable trend of the market.

There is a good volume of business being done locally, which would go to prove that wholesalers and retailers have been anticipating a decline and buying in smaller quantities than usual in spite of the fact that the home preserving season would relieve them of large amounts.

SYRUP AND MOLASSES.—There is a marked change in this market at present, demand being better both locally and from the country, and as molasses is one of the few cheap food stuffs remaining a good business period is ahead. Small shipments are arriving from Barbados in good shape the quality being well up to the mark.

Just what effect the building of the large centrals on the island will have on the output of molasses next year is questionable, some contending that abolition of the smaller mill must result in smaller exports, but as a local merchant remarks, "Why should this be when the molasses business is paying so well?" It would seem that as long as the market here is so good that exporters will be mighty anxious to turn out as much molasses as possible and while it is a long way ahead, yet there seems no reason to look for higher price in molasses on this account, more especially when there is a strong belief amongst the bigger houses that sugar prices must go down to a much lower level next year.

DRIED FRUITS. — Wholesalers are now taking advantage of the increased interest in dried fruits and are getting rid of old stock.

It is now generally believed that the season's crop of raisins will be short and late, the chief cause for these statements which conflict to a great extent with previous advices, being the lack of rain during the winter months. Prices for old crop Valencias have advanced in primary markets and new crop will be 25 per cent. dearer than the old. The feeling in the currant market is much firmer and the prices on new goods will be determined entirely by the results of the crop which is being awaited eagerly. The larger part of the crop by this time has undoubtedly been harvested and if later reports have any weight the quality is finer. First shipments are to be made about the end of the month.

New crop Smyrna figs are now coming forward and opening prices should be to hand soon.

On top of the news of the failure of the olive crop comes an advice to the effect that European growers of prunes have been much disappointed with the result of their crops and it is likely that shippers in California will soon be called on substantially. It is said that Bosnia and Servia will be 50 per cent. short and France is also reported behind quite a lot. But it is likely that a market will be found for the European carry over before California is called upon, so that the market here should not be affected for some little time.

COFFEE.—It looks as if the Brazilian Government are determined to maintain the control of the coffee situation in order to kill any possible over production, and after all it is hard to accuse them of taking wrong steps as it must be admitted that the prosperity of the country depends to a very large extent, in fact almost entirely on the production of coffee. Rubber used to hold an important place in the list of Brazilian exports but to-day as in other countries the growth is dwindling seriously.

There was a slight advance in the primary markets last week but not sufficient to make any alteration of prices here nor can we hope for any such state of affairs for a long period.

Reports about the new crop are conflicting some stating that the appearance is favorable, other bullish missives making the outlook a little less rosy. Howbeit stocks are gathering up as a result of heavy receipts but none of the large U.S.A. roasters are overloading themselves hoping that a continued accumulation may bring about some concessions. But alas! it looks as if coffee must remain high.

RICE. — Situation in Far East has changed little and as result of the firmness Caroline rice has advanced a ½ cent per lb. There is a quietness locally brought about of course by the high level to which quotations have gone, not that a decline would bring about an avalanche of business as it looks as if dealers stocked up pretty well prior to heavy advance which took place some weeks ago.

NUTS.—As stated before there is an improvement in the demand for nuts but chief interest is centered upon the reports about new crops. Tarragona almonds are now in limelight owing to the fact that Californians have named a pretty reasonable figure, which has not so far been adopted by growers in Spain. The crops of filberts in Spain and Italy are reported good so that the high price fixed by Sicilian houses does not seem justified and it looks as if they will have to take back a few points before they an get support from this market.

Brazilian, that is the quality goods, are firming up. About 17,000 tons have been shipped from Brazil this year this amount breaking all previous records. And it is said that the crop quality was extra good this year. But, as European crops of other varieties have been none too healthy we look for higher prices immediately the fall demand sets in.

ONTARIO MARKETS.

POINTERS—

Corn.—Does not promise well.

Valencia Raisins.—Much higher than last year.

Seeded Raisins.—On low level.

Evaps.—Futures will be low.

Toronto, Aug. 22.—During summer months great interest is displayed by trade in general in new crops and packs, everyone trying to discern probable trend of prices for ensuing season. This has been no less the case this year. We have now disposed of early fruits and vegetables as well as salmon and interest is being directed to later packs. Corn does not promise well just now. Tomatoes will apparently require an exceptionally long season. In dried fruits, high price of Valencia raisins and low price of California stock is a prominent feature. "Evaps" will be considerably cheaper than last year.

Business is reported as on fair scale for season. Opening of exhibition next week will mean greater activity for city retailers. Wholesalers during next two weeks expect to have many visitors, country retailers taking advantage of the exhibition to make purchases from the wholesale houses.

SUGAR.—There has been no change in refined prices since last week's decline of 10 cents, which brought local refined down to 5.05 in bags locally. General situation shows no change, but crop prospects continue good and a lower market seems to be a probable result of these conditions. When the readjustment will come is a question. Some are inclined to think that demand for preserving purposes may hold market steady temporarily while others would not be surprised at a change anytime.

DRIED FRUIT. — Business in this years' crop of raisins and currants is showing more life according to local brokers, wholesalers now showing greater interest.

One of the outstanding features of this year's dried fruits is the high price of Valencia raisins. Past week has witnessed another advance in this line and while speculation is said to be a firming factor, there is no doubt that this year's crop is poor, weather having been unfavorable right from the start. Present quotations are about 10 shillings above those ruling a year ago. New crop will likely sell here at 8½ to 9 cents a lb., or 2½ cents over last year.

However, everything is not shaping upward in this way. For instance California raisins opened at the lowest figure in 12 years, selling considerably below last year's level. The crop does not promise to turn out so excessive a tonnage as was earlier predicted, but will be a good-sized output.

Currants have been up and down this year but at present have a tinge of easiness with prices about two shillings lower than middle of July last year when most of buying was done. Currants are dried in the sun and as there has been a lot of rain in Greece, there will be considerable poor quality fruit, although this will not affect the quantity. New crop currants to arrive in October are quoted at ¼ cent per lb. less than present prices.

SPICES.—Pickling spice is the stellar line in demand at present time, retailers preparing stocks for the rush expected shortly. Movement of other lines is normal with markets in general maintaining a steady tone. Rather an unexpected feature is weakness in black and white pepper on foreign markets. Cloves show quite a marked steadiness as do also nutmegs.

BEANS.—Spot beans are conspicuous by their absence. "It is doubtful if a carload of prime Canadian beans could be secured from any one dealer in Canada," one man said this week. Foreign beans are apparently pretty well sold up also. There was a somewhat larger acreage of beans sowed this year but recent rainy weather has been detrimental to growth.

EVAPORATED APPLES.— It appears that we are going to have considerable cheaper "evaps" this year, present indication pointing to a fair average production. There is some talk of futures around 7 cents as compared with 10 cents a year ago. Probably first offerings will bring a somewhat higher figure.

CANNED GOODS.

Toronto.—Plenty of time has now been given for the trade to fully digest the opening prices on the various kinds of early fruits and vegetables. Perhaps the most comment is heard in regard to peas and most particularly standards, which opened at 25 cents per dozen above last year. As indicated by prices. crop of peas was poor as was also the production of strawberries, raspberries and blueberries.

Some canners, however, are delivering 100 per cent. of these lines and in order to do so, found it necessary to import a large quantity of fresh fruit from the U. S. for preserving purposes. Other canners find that in peas, pack only warrants a 52 per cent. delivery, so that those who guaranteed 60 per cent. will have to go into the market to secure the balance.

Interest is now being shown in new pack corn and tomatoes. Corn at present time from reports does not promise well. It apparently has not attained full growth and as one wholesaler who has been investigating says, "is painfully small." Tomatoes look good at present time but they are late and the pack depends on the length of the season. Last year wholesalers had new tomatoes on display on Aug. 16, while this year they are not packing yet. If weather man proves exceptionally kind in giving us a good long season, we may have a fair pack of this line.

NEW BRUNSWICK MARKETS.

St. John, Aug. 21—Further activity was noticed in the flour market this week when Ontario took another slump of ten cents. This was rather expected and caused little surprise and local dealers are looking for a drop in Manitoba patents soon. According to reports received here weather conditions in west and in States have been decidedly more favorable to crops than they have been in the east and if same state of matters continues, will have material effect upon quotations.

In the report given concerning the United States harvest this week there is a considerable reduction as to the expectations in number of bushels, and although crop is large, it is not nearly so great as was at first looked for. Decline of European market may have had something to do with the drop of ten cents in refined sugar last week. Firm prices are reported in New York and advices are to effect that stocks in British West Indies are about exhausted which will probaby have a tendency to firm price.

Molasses remains about the same and market is fairly well supplied locally. Despite the fact that there have been brilliant expectations regarding output of corn in the United States this year, cornmeal has taken an upward trend, owing it is thought here, to the fact that there are few old stocks on hand and those who are holding have the market fairly well cornered, as there will be no new supplies before mid-winter.

Never has there been such a scanty stock of beef on the market. Barrelled beef is scarce as well, but this might be easily expected.

Market in new potatoes gives brighter promise than was the case a few weeks ago.

Errors Sometimes Made in Rush for Trade

Intsances Given Where Dealers Have Got Into Complications by Reporting Orders on the Way When They Were Not—What a Salesman Would Have Done—Studying Markets Carefully and Treating All Customers Alike.

By O. S. Johnston.

"Tell the truth and shame the devil," is an old dictate which, when changed a little furnishes sound advice for the grocer and clerk who in some cases are not any too strongly posted on the difference between "Yes" and "No."

Let us consider it thus: "Tell the truth and don't shame the customer." Close adherence to this point will do no harm to any man's trade. It may in certain cases mean the loss of an order when a little prevarication would land it, but in the long run it will create a confidence amongst customers, which, though incapable of being truly valued in dollars and cents, yet must by all means be entered up on the asset side when the question, "What is Your Business Worth?" crops up.

There is an all too noticeable use among some young grocers and clerks of the affirmative when the negative should be used, more particularly when a customer telephones to know if goods she has just ordered have been sent along. How often do dealers answer "Yes" to such questions even though the goods are sitting on the counter, or the order still on file and unfilled.

A Good Memory Necessary.

Only the other day a case came to the writer's attention where a woman telephoned a fairly well-to-do grocer, stating that she was waiting for some goods ordered "long ago." The tone of the query talk evidently made the dealer anticipate a cancellation and he politely informed her that the driver was on the way to her house. Fifteen minutes passed but no goods turned up and, again, the telephone was called into service. But the grocer had entirely forgotten then that the driver was on his way the last time he spoke, and this time said: "Very sorry, madam, but the rig has just got back. Am having your order put in now. We are quite rushed to-day." Imagine the effect of these contradictory statements.

The Reply of a Salesman.

Do you think this way of working pays? Surely, it would have been much better to have made a straightforward apology and thus avoid the possibility of the customer losing faith. Indeed, one of those grocers who can be termed "salesman," would have given this woman a reply which would have smoothed out the difficulty, and would also possibly have suggested and sold a few articles not among the goods in question and therefore have made a little extra profit instead of making the customer feel inclined to go elsewhere.

One Price for All Customers.

It is usually the man who is anxious to establish a good business immediately who is generally found guilty of deviating from the orthodox. Because one customer is paying fifty dollars a month rent and another only fifteen or twenty, no grocer should conclude that he is justified in selling eggs or any other commodity to the latter at a lower figure than the former. Sooner or later the fact that concessions are made to a chosen few will be found out and all kinds of complications will arise—complications which will again lead to lack of faith and instead of advancing the "get rich quick" idea will put the dealer behind, and make the path doubly thorny.

Study the Markets.

There is only one way to run a successful business and that is by following the market closely and setting your prices accordingly with a determination to maintain them. How often have you seen a "cut rate" man competing with the "full-price" man and the latter eventually putting the former out of business; or at any rate, taking so much wind out of his sails that he can make practically no headway.

There are certainly some shoppers who would tax the patience of a saint, but in above instances, a keener perception of true salesmanship would have turned defeat into victory and that is why the dealer should study his customers and when they study him let them learn something worth while.

AN OFFICE IN LONDON, ENG.

NO REASON TO CHANGE.

A young woman went to a grocery store and asked the polite clerk if he had some good cheese. "Yes, indeed," he replied, "I have some lovely cheese." "It is not correct to call cheese 'lovely,'" she said. "How is that?" he inquired. "Because 'lovely' should be used to qualify only something that is alive." "Well," retorted the clerk, "I'll stick to 'lovely.'"

ENTERTAINED ON COMING OF AGE.

The conference of retail grocers held recently in Leeds (Eng.), marked the coming of age of the Federation of Grocers. During the convention the members were the guests of Hargreaves Bros. & Co., Ltd., Hull, and W. G. Nixey, Ltd., London—two firms which recently united—at a dinner at Roundhay Park. About 200 were seated. The chairman at the dinner and post-prandial speeches was T. L. Hargreaves, and a very enjoyable time resulted.

A Detroit dealer has discovered that his stock required only twelve different sized packages. To economize in wall space, he rearranged the shelving so that each compartment held all the packages of one size. Thus the shelves were made to accommodate more goods.

How a Vancouver Dealer Calls His Customers' Attention More Forcibly to Announcements in the Paper— Samples of the Talks Given Show Good Judgment in Writing Ads—Splendid Method for Creating Business.

Vancouver, B.C., Aug. 20.—To back up his advertising in the newspaper and to make it more effective, T. F. McDowell, a Granville street grocer, uses a typewritten sheet. One of these is given to or placed in the parcel of each customer while the newspaper advertisement bearing the same copy is in the composing room of the newspaper or on the press. These sheets also keep the clerks in touch with events before they come off as copies are placed in all departments of the store.

A recent sheet sent out began: "T. F. McDowell, grocery and poultry specialist offers you Pure Food at lowest possible prices.

GROCERY DEPARTMENT.

We are the direct representatives of Blank's Olive Oil. Prepared by the most scientific process, guaranteed absolutely pure and recommended by the leading physicians.

¼ pints, bottle 25c
½ pints, bottles ..... 50c.
1 pint bottles... ... . 90c.
and in tins which come cheaper.

Business Getting Talk.

This is undoubtedly the proper way to write an advertisement. It makes one, who is an olive oil connoisseur, feel like trying it anyway and if the quality is there, repeat orders will follow.

Another portion of the advertisement reads:

FISH SECTION.

It tastes nicer when it comes from McDowell's. Displayed under our fly proof glass case on chipped ice those spring salmon steaks and sole fillets; well they are delicious.

Not only does this indicate a good perception in writing an advertisement but it presents a method for handling fresh fish in summer time. The fish are displayed beneath glass to be free from flies and dirt, should there be any, and at the same time can always be seen by customers.

After the Camping Trade.

A notice re camping is also included in this advertisement. It reads:

IMPORTANT NOTE.

If you are camping, send us your orders. We pay freight charges on all orders amounting to $5 or over. We want you to feel you may have our competent service when you are in your camping grounds one or 100 miles away.

The above three excerpts from the McDowell advertisement indicate what can be done in the way of creating new business. It must be remembered that new business seldom comes of its own accord. It must be gone after in some manner or other and the dealer who goes after it in the proper manner reaps the greatest reward.

Weather Somewhat Backward for Western Crops

Rather Cool and Cloudy Weather Prevailed Last Week—This However, is Better Than Frost—Merchants Holding Off Somewhat in Purchases to Await Result of the Harvest—Heavy Fall Buying Expected.

Vermilion, Alta., Aug. 17.—At time of writing the crops are coming along rather slowly on account of the comparatively cool and dull, cloudy weather prevailing throughout most of the West. For a night or two there was serious apprehension of frost but so far there appears to be none reported.

Some grain is being cut and most of remainder is turning but would ripen much faster with more sunshine and warmer weather. However, cloudy and a little cool is better than frost or hail and a few days more of present conditions and cutting will be general. From nearly all parts of the provinces reports are good and the crop promises a fair average.

Seventeen to eighteen bushels to the acre, taking the country as a whole, will be a pretty correct estimate. Some will go more while others will be less. The present season appears to be one where good farming counts and careless slipshod husbandry will be very disappointing in its results.

In this section (Vermilion) a large number of the farmers are drifting more into mixed farming, for which the country is well adapted, the wide range of unoccupied C.P.R. lands affording abundance of pasture. To give some idea of the extent to which this is growing, it may be stated that there were shipped from this little town alone last year 300 car loads of cattle and it is estimated there will be 500 sent out this season.

Throughout much of the West the merchants have purchased light stocks, fearing a repetition of last year's experiences; consequently the amount of goods upon their shelves is not heavy. Should the crop turn out according to present indications and be disposed of with reasonable facility there will be considerable buying for the sorting season and the fall trade will undoubtedly be good.

Following items were taken from The Canadian Grocer of August 26, 1892:—

In August, 1892, as shown by our files, sugar was $4.25 per cwt. in Montreal; today it is $4.95; bacon was 9½ to 10¼c per lb., while now it is 13½ to 15c; lard was 7 to 7¼c for compound which to-day is from 10 to 11 cents.

"W. S. Kennedy, Montreal, has been appointed Canadian agent for several English houses among which is Carr & Co., biscuit manufacturers."

Editor's Note.—Carr & Co. are still doing business in Canada but are represented in Montreal now by W. H. Dunn.

"The firm of Mathers & Milligan, produce and commission merchants, New Westminster, B.C., have sold their business to the Brackman & Ker Milling Co., Victoria. The change was effected by D. R. Ker, of that firm."

Editor's Note.—The Brackman Ker Milling Co. are still in business in the West.

"'There is one British colony on this side of the atlantic which declines to take United States money at par, said a traveler who has just returned from St. John's. "Newfoundlanders will not accept any currency or bills other than their own except at a discount. Paper money is subject to 3 per cent. discount, quarters are only worth 23c; 10c pieces, 9c.; and 5c. pieces, 4c.'"

In our issue of August 26, 1892 an account is given of the first annual picnic of Windsor, Ont., Grocers and Provision Dealers Association which was held on August 19 of that year at Deschree Shaska, a summer resort on the Canadian island of the Detroit River, known as Fighting Island. Jas. T. Smith was the president of the association.

At Listowel, Ont., an Italian fruit vendor who has taken a store on a year's lease, was fined $10 and costs by the police magistrate for a breach of the transient traders' by-law, which requires a residence of three months before commencing business or a license fee of $100. At the council meeting it was held that this prosecution savored of persecution and a motion was passed agreeing to accept two years' business tax and ask the magistrate to remit the fine.

The Retail Fruit Dealers' Association, Toronto, at a meeting in St. George's Hall during the week, decided to test the validity of the civic fruit by-law in the courts. They also complained that the notices sent out by the Health Department are only printed in English. This they consider a hardship, as most of those engaged in the retail fruit trade are either Italians, Greeks, or Hebrews. Consequently, they are unable to read the English language and understand its full meaning. They will require the M. H. O. to have all future notices written in four languages.

to the rock, and of mill construction inside, giving it a bearing strength equal to its capacity. The rock on the foundations disclosed the fact that this corner is on the site of the old Church St. wharf, which was filled in many years ago when the Grand Trunk was put through. Some timbers unearthed in the excavation were as sound as when placed there six or eight decades ago. The new building will be situated at the extreme eastern point of the proposed new subway and will, therefore be opposite level tracks. Particular attention was given this point by Mr. Eckhardt on deciding to locate there.

Late Fruits Coming Into Prominence

Supplies on Increase—Dealers Commencing to Push Certain Lines for Preserving Purposes—Peaches and Plums Moving Freely—Early Pears are Scarce—Good Trade in Vegetables.

Late domestic fruits are fast coming into the limelight, occupying a prominent position on the stage of retail demand at most centres. Retailers are already beginning to push certain lines for preserving purposes and before long the fall preserving season will be in full swing.

Canadian peaches have continued to increase in supply but prices have not broken to any great extent. At first only clingstones were available but freestones are now on the market in fair supply, although they are not of the Crawford variety. Plums are now arriving quite freely but pears of the early variety appear rather scarce.

Lawton berries and blueberries are still to be had, while no little quantity of California fruit is being sold. As better quality late Canadian fruits appear they will overshadow the imported article.

Vegetables which no great while ago were in the luxury class are now down to a level within the smallest purse. Cucumbers, tomatoes, beans and similar lines have continued on the downward trend at most centres. There are still some new potatoes being imported from across the line but Canadian article is now an important factor.

A heavy demand for Canadian apples is predicted in a report received from the department of Trade and Commerce from Trade Commissioner Litgow, located at Glasgow, Scotland. Prospects of the apple crop in Great Britain are not good, and there will be a steady and healthy demand for Canadian apples, more particularly as price of apples for export is higher in U.S. than Canada.

MONTREAL.

GREEN FRUITS.—Fruit market is not so active as it has been during the past few weeks due to some extent to the drop in temperature. Lemons have not been in such heavy demand and prices are easy, the quality of some offered being by no means up to the mark. Oranges are also easier supplies at time of writing, though being none too large and it may be that the situation will be firm before long.

Canadian basket fruit is selling freely, plums, peaches and pears figuring well.

VEGETABLES.—The demand is still good and market presents general activity, all lines of Canadian vegetables selling well. New Egyptian onions are practically exhausted and Spanish onions in crates are now quoted. Spinach is very scarce while sweet potatoes can hardly be had. American potatoes are coming in freely and fetching good prices.

TORONTO.

GREEN FRUITS. — Late fall fruits are beginning to swing into prominence and local fruit market presents a busy appearance at present time. Peaches are now quite a feature, freestone varieties coming forward in increasing quantities. Peaches offered are of better quality than during past two weeks. Crawfords are not ready yet. Plums are coming in freely. "Bradshaw, a large blue variety is about only large kind that has a full crop," writes one shipper." Other varieties are more or less light. On this account, I would strongly urge dealers to place plum orders early." Pears of the early varieties are scarce.

Muskmelons are cheaper at 75 cents per basket. Raspberries are at an end. Lemons hold steady.

VEGETABLES. — Corn is meeting with quite ready sale at 15 cents per dozen. Tendency is of course downward as supplies increase. Cucumbers are lower in price and selling well. There is considerable variation in tomato prices according to quality. Heavy rains have proved bad for them in some districts. There are practically no green peas available now.

Potatoes continue to ease in price. Some dealers are handling Ontario stock exclusively and are finding enough to go around. They are selling at $1.65 to $1.75 per bag, but there have been some small ones which went at slaughter prices. There as still some U.S. stock coming along at $3 per barrel.

Dealers Planning for Fall Fish Trade

Showing Interest in Fall Prospects—Prices Will be Fairly Reasonable and Good Trade is Anticipated—More Activity in Another Month—Oyster Season About to Open.

Interest is already being directed towards the fall fish trade. For the past few months, weather has not been conducive to business while supplies have also hampered trade. The quantity and varieties of fresh fish will shortly be on the increase, smoked, dried and salt fish will soon be a factor and by another month greater activity should be noted. In addition the oyster season will now be opening up, offering another line which the fish department may handle to good advantage.

Compared with fresh meats and other foods, prices on fish appear to be fairly reasonable this year and there should be a big fall trade. Already many dealers are anticipating their wants.

QUEBEC.

MONTREAL.—Demand for fall lines is beginning to show up and wholesalers expect a lively trade as fish is cheaper than it was last year while all other lines of foodstuffs are dear in proportion. Haddock and cod are plentiful and prices are same as last week. Halibut continues scarce prices being firm. B. C. salmon is scarce while Gaspe salmon is also practically finished. Lake fish have been in poor supply. The Canadian season for live lobsters is closed, in fact lobster to-day is becoming a luxury, there being little or none on the Montreal market at time of writing. At Portland 27c were asked which means 35c in first hands at Montreal, bringing the price to retail at 38 cents. So that the consumer must pay an abnormally high price.

ONTARIO.

TORONTO.—Scarcity of halibut reported last week has been relieved to some extent, there being fair supplies of this line on market now. However, lake fish are rather scarce just now. Mackerel prices fluctuate considerably.

Dealers are beginning to look forward to season of greater activity in fish. For some time now both weather and supply has been adverse to business but next month will show an improvement in this regard.

CHANGE IN BISCUIT OWNERSHIP.

Stratford, Ont., Aug. 22.—The Mooney Biscuit and Candy Co., Stratford, and Winnipeg, Man., have taken over the plant and business of the Lang Manufacturing Co., Montreal, one of the oldest biscuit concerns in Canada. Earlier in the year the Mooney Co. absorbed the business of Smith & Sons, Vancouver. The aim of the Mooney Biscuit & Candy Co., as stated by the president, W. J. Mooney, is to secure a chain of factories across the continent at different centres in order to avoid troubles often accompanying long distance shipments.

A CREDIT LIMIT.

Merchants of Davenport, Iowa, have set a credit limit of thirty days beyond which no extensions will be made. The plan has the endorsement of the Davenport Retail Grocers' and Butchers' Association. The newspapers have published the news of the action, giving the consumers ample opportunity to prepare for the enforcement of the rule.

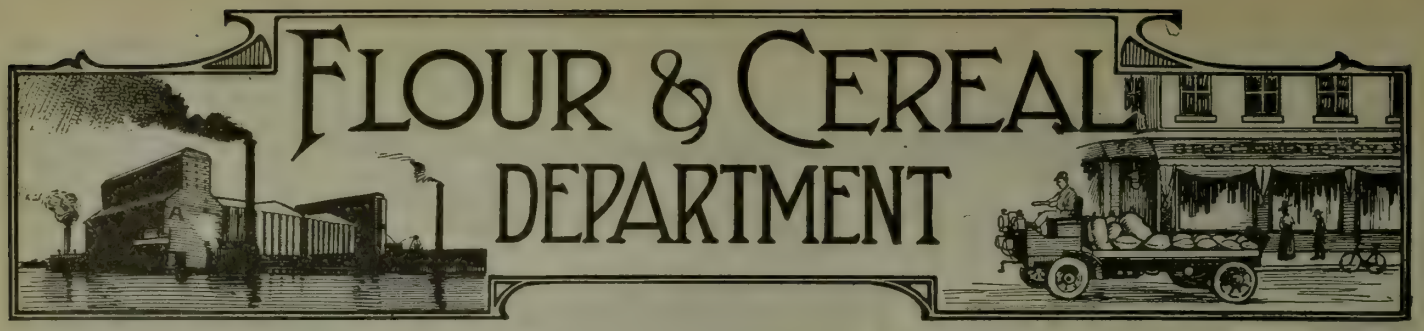
HE KEPT DRY HERRINGS.

It was getting pretty well on in the season, and there were still some smoked herrings on hand.

A small boy looked in the front door and enquired: "Have you any dry herrings?"

"Yes," replied the merchant, very pleased.

"Then why don't you give them a drink," came the reply. Then he dodged.



Decline in Rolled Oats is Probable

Impression Prevails that Prices Will Weaken in Near Future—New Crop Approaching—Raw Material Lower Than When Prices Were Last Set—Interest in New Crop—Western Prospects Good.

Retailers would do well to follow the rolled oats market closely as an early decline in prices seems probable. At least the impression seems to prevail that this commodity is booked for lower prices in near future. True, it is argued by some millers that old oats are not plentiful and that prices at moment are somewhat steadier, but on other hand, there has been considerable concession in raw material since present prices were set. Added to this new crop is fast approaching.

Trade in cereals, while it may be said to be fair for season, continues for immediate requirements only. This is also true of flour, for with new crop on the way, retailers naturally adopt a waiting policy until situation takes definite shape.

The eyes of the milling world are now directed towards the new crops. In western Canada things continue favorable for a bumper crop. If nothing occurs to mar situation in next few weeks, it is felt that an easier tendency in Manitoba flour can be looked for. However, it is by no means a sure bet yet but in meantime retailers are waiting to make sure.

Winter wheat is beginning to come forward to market, altough at some centres its movement has been rather tardy. It is the fact that new crop is now ready that has caused the easier feeling in winter wheat flour. At some centres concessions have already been made, while other markets are shortly expected to fall in line.

If any export business is to be done there must be a coming together of prices asked and bid, and it seems as if it must be prices asked that must show a concession for U.S. flour is being offered on foreign markets below Canadian values.

MONTREAL.

FLOUR.—Flour trade shows little activity but a moderate amount of business is passing for local account, the demand from the country not being as strong as during the past few weeks. Export business is practically nil shippers awaiting more definite news about the new crop.

CEREALS.— Rolled oats market at time of writing has not changed, though a drop is looked for at any time and dealers would do well to watch this market particularly closely. Cornmeal is also showing decline symptoms which are a natural result of the steady decline in the corn market. Hominy is selling well just now the demand being particularly from Quebec centres.

TORONTO.

FLOUR.—Flour market maintains a listless tone . There is a fair demand for season but for immediate wants only. Western crops are being followed closely and if present bright prospects continue, an easier tendency is likely, that is as soon as things have taken definite shape.

Following last week's lead, there is a continued easy feeling in winter wheat flour. There has been some reports of damage by rain but Ontario wheat is now nearly all in. Export bids on flour are out of line, U.S. flours, especially Kansas being a big competitor now on foreign markets. Wheat in Kansas is on an 80 cent level while 88 to 90 cents is being asked here just now. Deliveries have not been large but it would seem as if it would have to go lower if millers are to do business.

CEREALS.—"I am expecting a decline in rolled oats," said one cereal man this week. "There has been a considerable drop in raw material since present prices were set and I am looking for rolled oats prices to be adjusted." HALF HOLIDAY DURING SEPTEMBER.

London, Ont., Aug. 22—(Special). The question of a weekly half holiday the year round came up at the last regular meeting of the Retail Grocers Association. The proposal was discussed at length but finally turned down, although September was added to the months for half holiday.

Arrangements for the annual picnic, which will be held at the lakeside or at Springbank Park on August 28, are not yet complete, and to further matters Ed. J. Ryan was chosen convenor of a picnic committee which will rush preparations.

One of the latest triumphs of modern science is the dried egg. In fact, you can't beat it.

How Will Live Hog Prices Go This Fall?

A Question Which Dealers Are Asking—Feeling in Some Quarters That Offerings Will b Fairly Free Later on—Eggs Being Brought in From Across the Line—Butter Market Still Puzzling.

Dealers are beginning to show no little interest in live hogs and are wondering how prices are going to shape this fall. It will be remembered that market underwent some curious fluctuations last fall and there is great deal of uncertainty as to probable trend of prices this year.

Hogs at the present time are on a fairly high level when we begin to make comparisons. Toronto dealers are now quoting $8.25 at country points. On September 1 last they were quoting $7.70 which was the highest point for some time. Then the market took a rapid slump, a total decline of $1.80 per cwt. being registered before the end of October, due to heavy deliveries. With feed high dealers apparently wanted to get rid of their hogs.

Present arrivals of the porkers on most markets are only moderate. In fact at some centres farmers are sending forth too many light hogs and some buyers are taking off 50 cents for hogs weighing less than 160 pounds. There are no statistics available as to number of hogs in the country, but there is a feeling in some quarters that offerings later on will be quite liberal. The feed problem is quite an important factor in the situation.

It is difficult to say just how butter market stands this week, for while some centres report an easier tendency, others are inclined to steadiness. One thing is true and that is that prices are high and above normal for this season of the year.

According to a report to the Trade and Commerce Department at Ottawa from Trade Commissioner Ray of Birmingham. Eng., Canada's exports of butter are showing a huge decline, mainly, however, on account of larger home consumption.

Ten years ago Canada sent 13,000 tons of butter to England in one year. Last year she sent only 776 tons, scarcely enough to give it an official quotation on the London market. Practically the same conditions apply to the cheese trade in which Canada's exports are declining.

The country is increasing in population so rapidly that it cannot supply cheese for home consumption and keep up the export trade. "The statement made in Canada by those who know the cheese trade there," says the report, "that Canada may cease to export by 1916, may have some foundation."

There is a big demand for eggs at present time, probably due to high prices being asked for all kinds of meat. In fact, the consumption in Canada is forging ahead of production, and it has been found necessary at some centres to bring in supplies from across the line. There is a fair tone of steadiness likely to be maintained unless prices go lower in the United States.

MONTREAL.

PROVISIONS.—There is a marked improved demand for all cooked meats, retailers evidently counting on a further hot period. Prices are steady for the whole range. The demand for lard has dropped off a little and market is a little easier though no actual decline has as yet taken place. Supplies have been pretty regular, there being a strong call for bacon from English centres.

BUTTER.—A firmer feeling marks the butter market at present and slightly higher prices were registered in the country at end of last week. The demand from outside quarters is somewhat limited so that local market is none too active, although a fair volume of business is passing. Dairy butter to the extent of a few car loads has arrived from Manitoba but quality is not as high as expected with result that it sold pretty reasonably. The arrivals of butter on market are to date, 27,500 packages odd behind those of corresponding period of last year.

EGGS.—We have practically got to the stage where the demand is exceeding the supply as far as the selects are concerned and quantities of American eggs are coming along. The falling off in supplies at a number of points has naturally stiffened up prices and it is not at all unlikely that some further advances will be registered soon.

POULTRY.—Supplies are becoming smaller every week and prices show a steady advance. It is more than likely that a heavy demand from the West would put prices beyond reach but wholesalers seem to think that there will be only a normal demand from Western points until the fall season sets in. Turkeys are in good demand and prices show an advancing tendency. Chickens have jumped up lately, there being no more quoted as formerly, at 16c per lb. Ducks are not plentiful, while fowls are also dwindling.

TORONTO.

PROVISIONS.—There continues a fairly even and regular demand for pork products with prices showing little or no variation. Smoked meats are finding a seasonable demand while as it has been pointed out before, cooked meats are now becoming established as a staple line in the grocery store. Large hams are being quoted at 15 to 16 cents.

There appears to be some difference of opinion regarding lard values. While some are quoting in tubs at 13 cents, others hold at 13½c. Stocks are said to be fair at present, but brisk season will shortly be opening up.

Live hogs are steady at 10 cents higher. Many light hogs are being shipped in now. Some buyers are deducting 50 cents for hogs weighing less than 160 pounds.

BUTTER.—As far as immediate prices are concerned, there is no change in local butter situation. Some wholesalers note a little larger quantity offering, resulting in a softer tone to market. Prices are high, however, and have been above normal all summer and as considerable quantity has been stored and some is still disappearing by that route, it would seem to indicate that this article is going to be in the jewelry class next winter. Time will tell.

EGGS.—Meat prices in general are high, resulting in a big demand for eggs, being much larger than usual at this time.

"Are you getting enough to supply the demand?" one wholesaler was asked.

"Well, if we haven't enough, we can easily get them," was his reply. "There was a carload came in from across the line last week and there are some more on the way now. That ought to hold prices steady for a time."

CHEESE.—"You can get most any price you want for old cheese," said one wholesaler this week, "because there is little or none on the market to be had."

With production of new product showing up better of late there was an easier tone to market for a time, but a fair measure of steadiness appears to rule just now. In fact, one local firm would quote new cheese ¼ cent above quotations.

Facts That Will Aid in Selling Cheese

Comparison With Beef Shows That Two-Thirds of Pound is Equal in Food Value to Pound of Beef Steak—More of it Should be Sold—Displays and Window Trims Help.

There is one article in the grocery store to which more attention should be given by the majority of dealers. That is cheese.

Cheese is recognized by many eminent food authorities to be one of the best articles for food that can be procured. That is, so far as food value is concerned it ranks high.

Now that butter is so high, cheese can be used at least once a day as a substitute for the poorer families since it costs much less. New cheese can be purchased around 15 or 16 cents whereas butter is about double that price.

If, therefore, the dealer finds some of his customers complaining about high cost of living let him suggest among other things a more liberal use of cheese. There are many varieties of cheese and different wholesome dishes can be made from them.

Different Food Values.

An authority has prepared a list of foods showing the quantity of each that will take the place in food value of a pound of beefsteak. He says if only the proteins of the meat are considered, that 2½ quarts milk, 1½ pounds fresh, lean fish, ¾ pound dried fish, two-thirds pound ordinary cheese, somewhat less than a pound of mixed nut meats, 9 eggs, one-half pound shelled peanuts, or two-thirds pint dry beans, peas, cowpeas or lentils is equal to a pound of beef of average composition.

High Up in Fuel Value.

It will be seen that two-thirds of a pound of cheese contains as large an amount of what laymen call "the muscle forming" materials, as one pound of beef of average composition. According to abundant analyses, cheese compares even more favorably with meat if its fuel value instead of its percentage of protein is taken into consideration, for one-half of a pound of ordinary cheese yields as much energy as a pound of beef of average composition.

The dealer should, therefore, push cheese because of these facts. He has evidence to submit why cheese should be bought more frequently. He can display it to good advantage under glass and occasionally should give some space to it in the newspaper advertisement and window display.

AGAINST SIGN TAXATION.

Protest Entered by Retail Merchants Association—Unfair to Merchants.

Toronto, Aug. 22.—At a special meeting of the Toronto section Retail Merchants' Association on Monday night a protest was entered against the present system of sign taxation. Following resolution was passed:—"That the imposition of an inspection fee for examining electric signs is unfair on merchants, and we ask that this association appear before the Board of Control and ask the removal of the tax and place on record its opposition to the removal of projecting signs from the business streets of the city."

The city architect has proposed the removal of all overhanging signs, and the city imposes a special inspection tax on illuminated signs. These were the items protested against.

The grounds the association took in the latter regard were that builders had to pay no inspection tax on scaffolds, neither had owners of decadent buildings to pay for inspection as to the safety of their property. On these grounds the meeting argued that the tax was unfair. E. C. Matthews, grocer, Parliament street, presided.

Salmon

There is no longer any doubt but that you will have to pay high prices for all the well-known brands of salmon. The catch has been exceedingly poor, consequently prices are high.

A short time ago we threw our line out and raked in a block of half pound pinks which we have been selling at 50 cents per dozen.

Since then we have again thrown out another line and have pulled in a bigger block of one pound pinks, the quality of which is as good as the best that are packed. They are in flat tins and we look for a very ready sale, at one dollar per dozen.

Reasons for Bovril Success

The demand for Bovril is enormous and our arrangements to supply it correspond. The Bovril Estates in the Argentine comprise 438,082 acres, and in Australia 9,261,000 acres.

The reasons are the vitalizing power and appetizing flavor of Bovril—the advertising which has made this known, and the interest of the trade, for there is a good profit for the grocer.

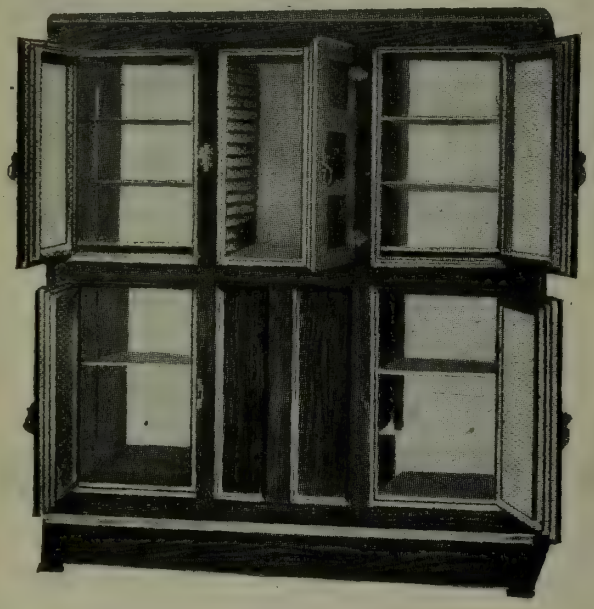
If your selection be the result of a careful and impartial investigation—the North Star Refrigerator will be your final Choice.



The highest excellence as a refrigerator, as selling force for any store is the North Star Refrigerator. It is built on the only proper principle—that of absolute dry air circulation. It is so dry that a match can be lighted on the interior walls of the ice chamber at any time.

It is attractively made and besides being useful as a refrigerator it is a selling force that makes good.

With the proper system of account keeping you can put an end to accounting worries and know the amount of accounts outstanding at a glance.

The ULLMAN Account Register

is the safest, simplest, quickest, surest to charge and most satisfactory of any system on the market. It satisfies the customer as well as the merchant. There is a decided advantage to the grocer who uses an Ullman Account Register. The customer knows, every time he makes a purchase, how much he owes, and naturally tries to keep it as low as possible. Put in an Ullman Account Register and stop the incessant night work and worry of retail book-keeping.

Send for illustrated booklet or ask for demonstration.

We want dealers to handle the Ullman Account Register in some localities.

No Dirt Can Lodge in the "All-Metal"

It Stands to Reason

that an all-metal washboard made in one piece will outwear the old-fashioned wooden kind many times. Then, if this is a fact, the all-metal washboard is the most economical. This feature alone is one that prompts the housewife to buy the MEAKINS' SANITARY WASHBOARD when she sees it in the store. There can be no doubt about the superiority of an all-metal board over the old-fashioned wooden kind. Its practicability and sanitary construction, and dirt-resisting qualities commend it at once to the buyer and to the dealer as the line to handle.

CREDIT customers make LESS trouble than anyone else, where are used. Reduce expenses, eliminate losses, prevent misunderstandings—paying for themselves many times over.

How They Work

A man wants credit. You think he is good. Give him a $10.00 Allison Coupon Book. Have him sign the receipt or note form in the front of the book, which you tear out and keep. Charge him with $10.00—no trouble. When he buys a dime's worth, tear off a ten cent coupon, and so on until the book is used up. Then he pays the $10.00 and gets another book. No pass books, no charging, no lost time, no errors, no disputes. Allison Coupon Books are recognized everywhere as the best. For sale by the jobbing trade everywhere.

No Flies in My Store

This is the boast of the up-to-date Grocer, and this happy condition of affairs is easily brought about.

HOW TO DO IT

Before closing on Wednesday afternoons pull your windowblinds down to within ten inches of the bottom, place Wilson's Fly Pads properly wetted on white plates close together along the whole window front, darken all the rest of the store as much as possible, so that all the flies will go to the strip of light where the Fly Pads are. On Thursday morning sweep up the dead flies and put the plates away until Saturday night, then repeat the operation over Sunday.

By following these directions exactly you will kill practically every fly in the store over Sunday and again on Wednesday afternoon.

DON'TS

Don't object to paying 60c per dozen for the necessary two to four dozen plates, they will last for years.

Don't be silly and expect two or three Pads to kill all the flies in your store. You must get the flies to the Pads, therefore use plenty of them.

The plan is simple. It is effectual.

It is cheap. It is very little trouble, and the resulting flyless store is worth hundreds of dollars to any live Grocery business.

A Natural Remedy

There is no simpler, safer, or more agreeable preparation than

ENO'S 'FRUIT SALT'

The approved remedy for driving out disease germs. Its action is quick and thorough. It clears the intestines, rouses the torpid liver to new life, stimulates the mucous membrane to a healthy action, and cleanses and invigorates the whole digestive tract.

For more than thirty-five years Eno's Fruit Salt has been before the public both at home and abroad.

Largely advertised and well established it is now in good demand and is therefore bound to carry with it enquiries for other lines.

Should consequently be stocked by all Chemists, Grocers and Stores.

If "Time Is Money"

Then Why Not Save It?

Lost—one golden moment, on the Road of Endeavor! Lost, because your brain cells worked overtime when you tried to persuade that customer to experiment with those nameless goods you bought, thinking more of the extra profit therein than the dependable quality thereof.

Lost, too, because her time and yours was idly spent. Lost again because of the misplaced confidence that must prevail hereafter 'twixt you and her. "Time is money," gentlemen—why not save it by selling, pushing or recommending only "quality goods"?

Highest Quality The absolute purity of Cox's Gelatine makes it a standard product of world-wide fame. Whether in powdered or shredded form, it is still as free from foreign substances as the clearest rock crystal from mother earth.

Cox's Gelatine

It has never disappointed, and never will, because folks get what they expect and want when they buy the peer of all—"Cox's." Highest quality to-day, to-morrow and all the to-morrows to come. A safe and certain asset for a grocer's stock-in-trade—always worth its face value of 100 cents on the dollar.

Codou's Macaroni, Vermicelli, Spaghetti, fancy letters and pastes, represent the top-notch of quality—the highest attainment of skill, experience and cleanliness in a model factory, said to be (by those who really know) one of the finest in the world.

Codou's Macaroni

A macaroni whose delicacy and whiteness bear witness to the caution used in selecting only finest wheat (from Taganrog) for the making. Tender as a macaroni can be, nutritious to the highest degree. Let the name on every package "Coudou" serve to assure you of highest quality when you buy.

THE REQUISITES ARE QUALITY

AND EFFICIENCY

It is important that you associate yourself with a source of supply that is unquestioned.

You understand that to compare a house treating oysters as a side line with a concern that makes it their only business, is a costly mistake to you.

There is one thing you cannot expect from a side line house, and that is that degree of efficiency and service that is characteristic only of houses treating the line as their only specialty.

The business of the "SEALSHIPT" Oyster System's Canadian Branch has been taken over by us. We can fill all orders promptly for "SEALSHIPT" Oysters or equipment.

The oyster business is a business of itself, employing a great many million of dollars, and it is unreasonable to expect the jobbers to effect this efficiency when they are treating this business as a side line. We devote our entire organization to oysters. Our "Coast Sealed" oysters stand for more with the Canadian trade than all other brands combined.

We solicit your enquiry as to prices, etc.

SUNNY MONDAY LAUNDRY SOAP has to be the best laundry soap a woman can buy, because the force of Fairbank advertising pushes it into homes where either hard water, soft water, cold water or hot water may be used for washing, and it works as well with one as another.

Grocers sell it everywhere because they find it gives their customers most satisfaction, and that means brings the grocers most sales.

How Would You Solve This Problem?

There are, say, half a dozen makes of electric coffee mills. They are of all types and sizes and of all prices. Your problem may be to select the one to suit your taste, and not what someone thinks your taste ought to be. How would you go about it?

Would you take somebody's recommendation and let it go at that, satisfied with your efforts?

Or would you find out for yourself which machine suited your taste, and then be satisfied to know that you were getting the best.

Wouldn't it be a good idea then to look into the COLES? It ranks with the best and meets your price.

HELP HER WITH THE BAKING

The majority of women take great pride in making fine cake, bread or pastry—they like to have them of even flavor, baked thoroughly but evenly, and, above all, tasty. Give them and you make baking success more certain. Poor salt means poor baking — everything goes "Flat" after hours of work over a hot stove, and that means disappointment. Help the housewife avoid that.

WINDSOR TABLE SALT

An interior view of the grocery department of the Vanwart store in St. John, New Brunswick. Note attractive shelf and counter arrangement.

Prestige Secured from Good Fixtures

St. John, New Brunswick, Store Where Much Attention is Given to Store Equipment—Helps Interior Appearance and Permits Greater Facility In Serving Customers—Cleanliness Predominating Feature in Fish and Meat Departments.

St. John, N.B., Aug. 29.—(Special.)—Some time ago it was conceded that the interior of the large grocery, meat and fish store of Vanwart Bros. on Charlotte Street, St. John, was about as tastefully arranged and equipped as could be desired; for it was decidedly attractive, cleanly and modern, but there is an old saying that "there is always room for improvement," and a glance over the interior to-day will readily convince the skeptic of that fact.

John W. Vanwart, who is the proprietor of the store has recently installed new bin fixtures, new showcases, new cash registers and new sections of tiling, and the whole appearance has been vastly improved upon and made more thoroughly up-to-date.

Values Highly the New Fixtures.

"We used to have pull drawers along the sides of the grocery store," said Mr. Vanwart the other day, "but since we have removed them and placed those newer ideas in commission, I tell you it has made a huge difference in more ways than one. Aside from their usefulness and practicability, consider the value of appearances, and when you compare the look of those nice new mirrored fixtures with the old-fashioned box or pull drawers you will not be long in forming a decision as to which is the more attractive, or which appeals more strongly to the notice of the customer."

The fixtures are decidedly elaborate and quite extensive, as they range the entire length of both sides of the grocery store and along the rear wall as well. Some of the receptacles for holding goods are encased, having the drop pull idea predominant, while the upper portion of the fixtures are open and afford a splendid opportunity for the display of such articles as bottled goods, pickles, jams, flavorings and the like, canned goods, package articles and other lines which can be openly shown without the necessity of cover. And this is one point which is a feature of the Vanwart store, the neatness and exactness with which goods are displayed on the shelves, which is quite apparent from a glance over their arrangement.

Permit of Better Service.

Another noticeable factor in the arrangement of the interior is the readiness with which goods can be procured, due to the various pieces of mechanism and contrivances of equipment such as sliding doors, moving staples, hinges, etc. For instance, at the rear of the store is a large counter behind which is a long row of barrels, the latter apparently being fixed beneath the top of the counter. But when the sugar, flour, or whatever the article is, is being placed beneath the counter, care is taken to see that the barrel is attached to a staple or pivot which allows its being swung freely into the open to permit of the goods being gotten out easily.

The two new cash registers lately installed are marvels in appearance and convenience, as well as practicability. Mr. Vanwart said their total cost was about $1,400, "but they're as good to me as additional office help" he added. They certainly add to the attractive interior, and when the lever is pressed which opens a drawer a ray of light is cast over the figures so that accuracy is assured, the incandescents being attached to the registers so that when a drawer is opened they light up. This is likewise a precaution against burglary, besides being very ornamental.

The new tiling which has been placed in the meat and fish department, the latter by the way being entirely separate, presents a cleanly view and also augments the sanitary aspect of both stores. Neat glass shelves along the walls of the meat store display canned meats and soups attractively while the same is done in the fish department, where canned fish, gravies, relish, etc., are presented in an appealing and tempting manner.

The improvements which have been made in the ways described in the foregoing are decidedly in line with the up-to-date policy of the management and should augur well for future prosperity and increased business; for a tidy, refreshing and fashionable interior is certainly a factor in getting the trade.

Proper System for Window Trimming

It is Essential That the Dresser of Displays Should Proceed Along Definite Lines—Have a Fixed Appropriation to Cover Expense—Yearly Schedules of Displays Are Advisable—File All Pictures of Window Displays—Have a Work Room at the Rear.

Ever stop to consider the importance of having a system to govern your window dressing operations? It is needed in that department just as much as in any other part or department of the store. A short talk along the line of window trimming system will be of interest, therefore. It is a subject which has not been given a great deal of attention.

First and foremost, there should be an appropriation to cover all expenses. This appropriation should be made a yearly one. The window trimmer will then be in a position to purchase what supplies he requires and will be more apt to plan new ideas and arrange effective trims. An ambitious window trimmer is a great asset to any business. At the same time, the setting of a definite appropriation will limit the expense of the windows to a certain figure. This is equally important with the advantage first pointed out. Ambition and initiative are most valuable in a window dresser when combined with financial prudence.

A Regular Schedule.

It is important that your system should cover the selection of the articles to be included in displays. All good, profitable lines of goods are entitled to their share of window publicity, and it will take considerable planning on the part of the window dresser to see that all lines are featured at the proper times.

This can be accomplished by following out a simple routine plan. Go over the list carefully and check out each article which should be used at some time during the year. Then draw up twelve lists, one for each month, putting down each article in the month when it could be displayed with best results. This schedule can be revised as occasion arises but it will provide a good working basis and will obviate the possibility of certain lines being lost sight of.

Keep Pictures on File.

The window trimmer should have a filing system of his own. His work calls for a continual succession of new ideas on the matter of arrangement of display. Even the most clever will some times run short of original ideas and the necessity then arises for something to fall back upon.

It is advisable to clip out and preserve every picture of a window display that comes to hand. There will be ideas in all of them. For instance, if all the pictures of window displays which have appeared in The Canadian Grocer were carefully clipped out and filed away, the possessor would have at his command a never-failing source of new ideas.

The filing should be done in a systematic way. To keep the pictures in good shape, it will be found advisable to paste them up in books.

Co-operate With Others.

In this connection it may be pointed out that the window dresser should not hesitate to consult the other members of the staff and to ask their assistance and advice on all possible occasions. It is an old saying that "two heads are better than one." Some of the clerks may be able to supply just the very idea that the trimmer has been cudgeling his brains to find without result. Co-operation should be carried out in this as in all other branches of the business.

Have Room Work.

Now as to the actual work. If you can find a room upstairs, where work can be done without interruption, or a place at the rear, appropriate a certain space to correspond with the dimensions of the window. In this space you will be able to plan out displays and arrange details before ever going into the window. This is really a very important phase of successful window trimming. With a "dummy" window to work in, the trimmer can arrange more original and complete displays than would be the case if he waited until the window were cleared for action. It is impossible to go into a window and arrange a trim, knowing absolutely how it is going to come out. It is more than likely that difficulties will be encountered and, as time will be limited, the display will have to be left imperfect.

The false window space is especially important in planning displays on an extraordinary scale. Where elaborate effects are desired, it is necessary to give unusual attention to measurements and details.

Preparing "Effects."

This false space can be used also for the preparation of panels and backgrounds. Place your background boards on boxes or kegs and finish them off with a covering of soft-finished cloth or some other suitable material. Then place and attach the articles, having care to arrange them in the form of a design. Use a ruler frequently to make sure that the designs are attached equidistant from the edge. The slightest irregularity will be noticed from the outside when the panels are in place. By preparing the background and panels in this way, absolute accuracy can be obtained, which is impossible if all the work is done in the window.

Keeping Fixtures.

The corner thus appropriated for the use of the window trimmer will serve for the storage of fixtures. To secure best results, a certain number of fixtures are absolutely essential. Pyramids, pedestials and steps are of great assistance in preventing monotony and in bringing about original effects. They can be constructed with little or no expense. Rough lumber or pieces of packing cases will serve the purpose. As they are always covered, the crudity of construction and roughness of the material will not show.

The complaint is often heard:—"I would arrange better displays but I haven't the material to work with. That's all I have—just the empty space in the window." A clerk who once voiced that complaint in the hearing of the writer had not been doing anything for a solid half hour. It was a morning in midsummer and customers were few and far between. If he had utilized the spare time on his hands, he could have knocked together a few suitable fixtures. If he had cared to employ his spare time for a few days in that way, he would soon have had a complete equipment at his disposal.

SUMMED UP.

Have a settled appropriation for displays.

Draw up schedule of goods to be displayed each month.

File away all pictures of window displays in trade journals.

Seek co-operation of other members of the staff.

Have false window space at rear or upstairs in which to plan and work out each display before starting in the window.

Prepare background and panels before placing them in the windows.

Never discard material. It will come in handy again.

Middlesex Dealers Form an Organization

Merchants Get Together From Deleaware, Lambeth, Komoka, Christina, Mt. Brydges and Muncey — London Grocers Auto to Delaware and Several Addressed the Meeting—Good Work of Two Gladstone and Mossley Merchants—Officers Elected.

London, Ont.—(Special). — At a very largely attended meeting held at Delaware on Wednesday evening, August 21st, the merchants from Delaware, Lambeth, Komoka, Chistina, Mt. Brydges and Muncey, decided to form an organization for the betterment of trade, and will meet once a month at the different villages and discuss such matters as early closing, selling goods at cost and other matters of interest.

H. J. Scott, of Gladstone, and W. J. Coates, of Mossley, were largely instrumental in bringing the merchants together. A large delegation of London grocers were present and helped to enliven the meeting with songs and speeches. W. J. Coates, of Mossley was elected to preside and C. W. Vollick of Dorchester, acted as secretary. After a number of speeches it was decided to elect officers for a term of one year and assess each member one dollar per year. The following officers were elected:—

President.—J. A. Kelley, Lambeth.

Vice-Pres.—D. J. Matheson, Komoka.

Secretary and Treasurer.—M. J. Bodkin, Delaware.

Addresses From London Grocers.

It was decided that the next meeting should be held at Mt. Brydges at the call of the president. During the evening speeches were delivered by W. J. Coates, H. C. Johnston, J. A. Kelley, G. A. Carley, D. J Matheson, W J. Lang, A Hodder, H. J. Scott, G. D. Brinkley, E J. Ryan, Thos Shaw, Adam Palmer, J. A. McFarlane, G. B. Drake and Thos. Ranahan. The singing was a feature of the evening, those taking part were Messrs. Baker, Ranahan, Carter, Adams, and Ryan. The London delegation had quite a time going out to Delaware and returning owing to breakdowns to the motor car. An hour was spent at Lambeth effecting repairs going, and two were lost on the road coming back.

The Merchants in Attendance.

Those present were, J. A. Kelley, G. A. Carley and Wm. Earle, Lambeth; H. C. Johnston, M. N. Bodkin and D. R. Owen, Delaware; D J. Matheson and A. O. Graham, Komoka; Byron Adams and H. J. Snellgrove, Mt. Brydges; E, Ryckman, Christina; W. J. Lang, Muncey; W. J. Coates Mossley; G. B. Binkley, Avon; A. Hodder and C. W. Vollick, Dorchester; H. J. Scott, Gladstone, and from London there were: Thos. Shaw, J. A. McFarlane, G. B. Drake, Adam Palmer, Tom Ranahan, Dan Carter, Jas. McKenzie, I. X. L. Baker, and E. J. Ryan. The meeting closed with the singing of the National Anthem and three cheers for the new president and secretary.

W. J. Coates urged all present to read The Canadian Grocer, giving many instances where his clerk, Mr. Longfield, had carried out many schemes outlined in The Grocer with good results.

H. Gilbert Nobbs, manager Holbrooks, Limited, with head office at Toronto, is expected home from the Old Country on Sept. 12.

SHORT WEIGHT NOT RETAILERS' FAULT.

Winnipeg Grocers Hold Meeting of Protest—Samples of Short Weight Exhibited.

Winnipeg, Aug. 26.—Winnipeg retail grocers are entering a protest against the action of the civic authorities in bringing them into court on short weight charges recently made against them. At a recent meeting this protest was vigorously voiced. Among those present were J. Paterson, M. Buchanan, of Hardy & Buchanan, J. A. McKerchar and A. White of W. H. Stone Co.

A number of grocers had been fined $5 in police court on short weight charges. The retailers claim these short weights were in containers, packages, etc., which they had purchased in good faith from wholesalers and therefore did not think they should be held responsible.

J. Paterson stated he could not find the quantity specified in certain jars and cans and brought samples, half gallon tins of maple syrup, five pound tins of jam, a bag of rolled oats, which was short the weight mentioned on the bag by several ounces, and packages of raisins and dates. He claimed that the charge of short weight should be levelled at the wholesale dealers.

It was finally agreed to leave the matter over till the next session of the committee and in the meantime consider what could be done to remove the hardships imposed by the by-law on the retail man who was not responsible for the shortness of weight. The matter of butter was one of those discussed at length and there appeared to be an impression that such articles should not be sold underweight. Exceptions might be made in the case of other goods sold in packages.

LARGE CROP OF BEANS.

From returns received from farmers by the Ontario Bureau of Industries (Ontario Government), the bean crop of the province is estimated at 1,203,420 bushels from 69,703 acres, or 17.3 bushels to the acre. In 1911 the yield was 898,212 bushels from 51,508 acres, or 17.4 bushels to the acre. An average crop is placed at 17.2 bushels.

VALUE OF MARITIME CONVENTION.

Such conventions as the Maritime Board of Trade holds every year, are bound to do a large amount of good. The ideas of men are responsible for actions, and at this conference business men from different centres of the Maritime provinces get together on national Maritime problems, and their visions on these problems are naturally widened.

What is done therefore by the Maritime Board of Trade will have its effect sooner or later on the destiny of the provinces. Men's views of things become broader; they go back to their home cities and towns with a much wider experience, and their influence is sure to be felt among their fellow business men.

A full report of this year's convention at Truro, N. S., is given elsewhere in this issue. It comes from our own representative and shows what are the live questions from a national standpoint in those fertile provinces down by the sea . It will be seen that Maritime men are greatly interested in railway transportation, in telegraphic communication with Prince Edward Island, in commercial education, agriculture, shipping, immigration, etc.

The report is one which should be read by anyone at all interested. It gives a broader view of things.

SYSTEM IN WINDOW TRIMMING.

Window trimming has become such an important phase of retail merchandising that more attention is being paid to it than ever before. In the average store, however, interest in the subject has not yet reached the pitch where a definite system is worked out to govern the displays. Nevertheless system is needed if best results are aimed at.

Some suggestions are given in an article in this issue which are worthy of consideration. It is not our intention to comment here on the various points made, but we desire to place particular stress on the suggestion that the window trimmer needs assistance. No matter how fertile the imagination or how resourceful the mind, there will be times when the most skilful will be lacking in ideas. It is always possible to learn from others. No better plan could be devised than the careful filing of all pictures in trade papers and magazines. Every picture will have a suggestion or contain a hint which may some day be utilized. Some men pride themselves on their originality and scorn to avail themselves of any assistance. Their viewpoint is narrow and they are not as likely to develop and improve in their work as are those who learn from what others are doing.

DECLINE OF CANADA'S DAIRY EXPORTS.

Canada's butter and cheese exports to Great Britain have sadly dropped away during the past ten years.

Ten years ago 13,000 tons of butter went from Canada to England; twelve months ago it fell to 776 tons. There was not sufficient Canadian butter on the London market to secure an official quotation. The situation is attributed to increasing home consumption.

The same reason explains the falling off in cheese exports. In face of the fact that we have a natural agricultural and dairy country this should not be. The trouble is that production is not going ahead as rapidly as it should. The Great West is filling up, but mixed farming is slow to move forward there. The East, therefore, has to supply it with butter and cheese that used to cross to the Motherland.

This condition of affairs has greatly aided New Zealand. British imports of cheese from that country have increased to extent of 22,000 tons, while imports from Canada have fallen off 15,000 tons.

Will Canada cease to export cheese at all by 1916?

THE GROCER ABSENT ON VACATION.

In last week's issue an article appeared in our news columns telling of something original by way of taking holidays. For two weeks in August a Toronto dealer closed his store entirely, tacked on an absentee sign, gave his clerks and drivers a fortnight's discharge and with his wife and family departed for wild game sanctuaries in the north.

Not many retail dealers can, of course, fall in with this suggestion. At any rate the majority who insist on a breathing spell annually, have already spent their appropriation for vacation, and they will not have any opportunity this year at least to give a trial to this innovation. Supposing next year more should decide to adopt such a course, would it not be advisable to consult him on possible difficulties in connection with the holidays?

Before hitting the trail for the watering place, it will be remembered customers were advised to lay in a heavy larder—one that would last the two weeks. In hot weather, we are told, certain well known staple articles do not hold on to their original quality for any great length of time; so the question naturally arises how fresh would a fresh egg become in two weeks time, that was two weeks old when sold.

Without being considered impertinent, one, too, might well inquire into the standing of a loaf of bread, aged two weeks, or a roll of butter that has lain on the cellar shelf for the same length of time. If these things could all be purchased green, like a bunch of bananas, for instance, the problem would be solved. But although we have dried eggs, frozen, fresh, select, new-laid and canned eggs, none of them have evolved from a state of greenness. So there lies the difficulty.

The sign which appeared on the door of this store announcing the absence is reminiscent of the one the preacher used long ago on a similar occasion. It ran thus:

Preacher is absent on vacation.
Church is closed until his return.

It mattered little whether there were any souls to save or whether any poor wandering sinner had trudged along the dusty road in search of comfort, only to find the church door closed against him, whether soul hungry or not. He must wait the good man's return.

Nevertheless here is a grocer that has sprung something new on the public and he must be given credit for it even if the rest of us cannot follow in his foosteps. The world loves originality, and admires the man who does something out of the ordinary.

HANDLING TEA IN OLD LONDON.

In 1911 about 350,000,000 pounds of tea passed through the London, England, market.

When the tea arrives by steamship from the East it is delivered to the warehouses and weighed by customs officials and inspected by agents of the merchants who own the tea to determine whether any damage has been done or not. If the merchant who owns the shipment is desirous of selling immediately on arrival he selects a broker and gives him instructions to "print" the teas for sale in public auction. This is the customary method, although in some cases the tea does not pass through the salesrooms, but is sold by private contract. The owner sometimes holds for higher markets.

The selling broker notifies wholesale buyers that certain teas are on sale through catalogues. These catalogues contain date and condition of sale, the garden where grown, the quantity, style and description of each grade and such as Pekoe, Broken Orange Pekoe, Pekoe Souchong, Pekoe Fannings or Dust.

Representative samples of each package are put on display by the warehouse keeper to give prospective buyers an opportunity to test the teas. This is carried out by the wholesale houses, who hold the permit of the Port of London Authority, sending samples to the various warehouses named in the catalogues.

The samplers present their authority to draw the teas, but that no loss of tea may accrue to the owner, returns of an equal measure and quality to the samples taken away, are left at the warehouse by the samplers.

The tea auctions are rapidly conducted, bidding being exceedingly fast if teas are low priced. As many as 300 lots are sold in an hour. Each item is not separately announced, but just as soon as one parcel is sold, the next one is immediately bid for. It takes a fast following brain and a clear head to follow the transactions at a London tea auction sale.

FRUIT CROP OUTLOOK.

At present time the crop of apples in Canada appears to be a fairly good one.

From nearly every quarter the growth is reported to be excellent, and in many cases larger than usual. At the same time all apples are likely to be smaller than usual and the average in parts of the St. Lawrence valley districts is less than half a crop, and in some instances total failures are reported.

The conditions of the markets, so far as Canadian apples are concerned, are fairly reassuring. The apple crop in Europe is universally short and this shortage has a direct influence upon the export price of Canadian apples. Germany imports an average of 3,000,000 barrels of apples from the surrounding continental countries annually, and there seems no reason why there should not be a splendid opening this year in Germany and probably other countries on the continent. The prospect for improved transportations from Canada direct to Germany is good. France may be expected to take fairly large quantities of the late winter varieties of apples and the British markets, where there is undoubtedly a general shortage of fruit, offer more than ordinary attractions this year.

Grapes will likely be an excellent crop, as reported previously in these columns. The same, however, cannot be said of pears, with possible exception of inland valleys of British Columbia. The plum crop, with exception of Nova Scotia and parts of British Columbia, will not be extra good either.

THE RESULTS OF PREJUDICE.

Prejudice has ruined many a man.

Because someone's father and grandfather shuffled along in an ancient looking store and eked out an existence, is no reason why the son and grandson should do the same. We see to-day in every centre of industry a few merchants in every class gradually rising above their competitors. If we take the trouble to make a thorough investigation of the cause, we shall likely find it lies in difference in methods, store equipment and store appearance. There are some exceptions but they are mighty few.

It is all very well to respect the opinions of our departed ancestors, but it was never intended that in business matters their example should be followed. We live in a progressive age when people want wholesome foods from sanitary stores and in as attractive conditions as possible. They want good service. They are susceptible to advice from only those dealers in whom they have confidence, and the way to gain this confidence is to operate a business suggestive of modern times.

It is time the old excuse, "my father got along without advertising, or without this register or this or that equipment," was forgotten. Our ancestors lived in a different age. Imagine the twentieth century farmer cutting his fields of grain with the sickle because his grandfather did. Times have changed and the people want service and advice they can depend on.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

And now we enter upon the first of the autumn months.

With September most dealers turn their thoughts to fish and oysters.

* * *

The oyster is something like a colt in one respect. To be much good either should be four years old.

* * *

It is a good sign to see merchants getting together. This undoubtedly spells progress.

To hear of the doings of the Hamilton grocers' "Hump," makes one feel he has missed a lot of this life's fun.

* * *

The constant rains that have been visiting us have been hard on cut and standing grains. Considerable damage to Ontario crops are reported.

If every dealer weighed or measured everything purchased he would have little trouble with short weight—and he would save a lot of money.

Annual Convention at Truro, N.S., of Boards of Trade of Provinces Down by the Sea—Questions affecting the Transportation Facilities of the Maritimes Among the Most Prominent—Cable Service to Prince Edward Island—Change Wanted in Militia Act Respecting Strikes—The Immigration Problem.

Special Staff Correspondence.

Truro, N.S., Aug. 27.—Fine weather greeted the nineteenth annual meeting of the Maritime Board of Trade which met in the Municipal buildings at Truro, Aug. 21-22. There was a decided rejuvenation of life in the Board in evidence. New delegates were present from various parts of the Provinces and the discussions were notable and interesting from a National as well as Maritime standpoint.

Dr. Dunbar, president, called the meeting to order at 11 o'clock, and reports from committees were heard first. He delivered a short address in which he regretted the absence of Mayor Stewart who was attending a Municipal convention at Antigonish. He referred to the beauties of the town, its attractions which would be seen by a drive about the place and surroundings. Industries were being attracted and Truro was going ahead. He again thanked the Board for the honor conferred upon him and officially welcomed the delegates to Truro.

The roll call showed a splendid representation of delegates.

The president then suggested that a committee should be appointed to arrange the order of subjects. Regrets were read from a number of prominent politicians and members of parliament, including Premier Fleming, of New Brunswick; also Premier Murray, of Nova Scotia. In all the letters, kind wishes were expressed for the meeting and comment made upon the many interesting subjects on the list.

British Manufacturers Visit.

A letter was read from W. Leonard Palmer of the Financial News of London and Paris who recently toured Canada with a party of British manufacturers in which he enclosed excerpts from most flattering opinions of the Maritime Provinces sent him by the manufacturers who had returned to the Old Land.

Mr. Palmer's letter was a follows:

Chairman, Maritime Board of Trade,
Truro, N.S.

Dear Sir:—

I am enclosing you some brief opinions upon the Maritime Provinces which I obtained from some of the members of the above party. Possibly you have already seen these as I forwarded same to the leading newspapers in N.S., and N.B., but they are of particular interest: inasmuch as they bear out and endorse all that I have personally said about the Maritime Provinces. I had hoped to have been able to visit Truro whilst your meeting was on, but regret to say it is not possible I trust however, that your convention will have the best possible results, and that from your discussions will emanate a plan or plans by which to bring the Maritime Provinces into that prominence which their great natural wealth, their infinite variety, their well established order of social, educational and other conditions warrant. I am not, as no doubt you know, one of those who believe that the comparative slow progress of the Maritime Provinces is due to a backwardness on the part of the people. Before forming such a hasty and harsh judgment as that people should become acquainted with the manifold causes which for some years past have been allied and determined to draw valuable human material away from and past Nova Scotia and New Brunswick.

Movement to Western Canada.

Previous to the opening up of the Great West, Canada was practically unknown to the outside world. It attracted few settlers and could invite little capital, and ever since the West was opened the movement there has been so pronounced that Eastern Canada has received no publicity whatever, and in addition to this, the lure of the West has been a serious drag upon your own progress and a drain upon your population. Notwithstanding this, however, the people of the Maritime provinces have more than held their own, whilst they have also contributed great sums of money towards the upbuilding of the West, to the railways, the cities and other public and private works. They have also contributed many of Canada's leading men to the Dominion, and in every part of the country, they are now to be found at the head of affairs. With so much of their energy, capital and human material expended in all and any directions but their own provinces, it is a great wonder that the Maritime Provinces should now be in so sound and satisfactory a state as they are. Considering all the difficulties you have had to face, and considering the killing apathy and pessimism which at times seems to have pervaded the whole provinces, the people of N.S., N.B., and P.E.I. are certainly to be congratulated upon their position to-day.

Awakening Day at Hand.

I earnestly believe that the day of awakening to the true value and opportunities of the Maritime Provinces of Canada is close at hand. All that is required is a more energetic movement on the part of those provinces to acquaint the outside world with what they have down there. In Great Britain the Maritime Provinces are practically unknown and unheard of, and the fault of that, mind you, does not rest with us. If our people were informed of the true state of affairs in N.S. and N.B., I am convinced that you could obtain all the settlers you want ,and with the settlers would come the capital, or at any rate it would follow. In addition to taking adequate steps toward acquainting the people of Great Britain and other countries as to the opportunities existing in the Maritime Provinces it seems to me that a certain amount of reform will have to come from within. For instance it's no good inviting people to come and settle in the country if your own people are leaving it. Steps should be taken to keep your own population satisfied. Then you can hardly expect to interest outside capital in your country while you are yourselves sending your money out West instead of investing it and using it to build up your own provinces. Money attracts money, and every cent that leaves your provincial borders makes it harder to bring in money from outside.

Splendid Natural Resources.

The position of the Maritime Provinces is so unique. You have such ready access to all the great centres of civilization. You have such stores of natural wealth, such ports, such industrial opportunities, and so good a climate that were these things made known, nothing could prevent your rapid rise into a great and prosperous country. Already there seems to be an impression growing abroad that the Maritime Provinces will very shortly come into their own. I believe that this is so, and therefore it rests with such men as are gathered together at your conference to hasten the awakening. It is after all, upon the commercial men of the country that the burden of progress rests and must rest, for at no time in the history of the world did any great progressive work or movement emanate from the agricultural classes. It is for you gentlemen therefore who represent the business men of the Provinces to point out and lead the way to that great awakening of industrial commercial and agricultural progress which must inevitably be seen in the Maritime Provinces of Canada. In this you have my most sincere good wishes.

W. LEONARD PALMER.

REPORT OF THE SECRETARY.

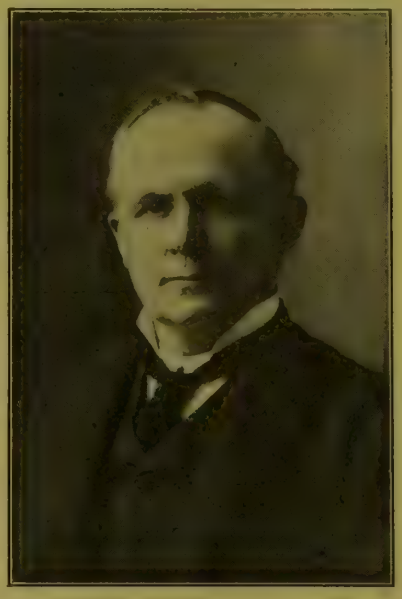
While the committee on subjects was out, the secretary's report was read as follows:—

To the President and Members of the Maritime Board of Trade:—

The annual meeting held at Moncton, August 16th and 17th, 1911, despite rather unfavorable weather conditions, was a successful gathering, with fifty-five delegates in attendance. After three interesting sessions the delegates were taken by the members of the Moncton Board to the gas and oil wells at McLatchey's, Albert Co., where a demonstration of the force and quantity of gas developed was given.

On the return of the party the members were entertained at a luncheon given on the grunds of Matthew Lodge, Esq., by the Moncton Board which proved to be a very agreeable and pleasing function.

A committee to memorialize the local governments of the Maritime Provinces on the matter of Maritime Union was instructed to be appointed and it was anticipated that the delegates from each province would meet and name their representation on this committee but this was found to be impracticable, and nominations were made after correspondence as follows:



MATTHEW LODGE, Moncton, N.B., Elected President Maritime Board of Trade at annual meeting.

NOVA SCOTIA.—R. V. Harris, Halifax; H. J. Logan, Amherst; A. M. Bell, Halifax; C. E. Bentley, Truro.

NEW BRUNSWICK.—J. M. B. Barker, St. John; R. W. Hewson, Moncton; C. W. Ketchum, Woodstock; W. B. Snowball, Chatham.

PRINCE EDWARD ISLAND.—Jas. Paton and J. P. Gordon, Charlottetown; Capt. Read, Summerside; G. A. Thompson, Montague.

To Influence Legislation.

Committees were appointed to watch legislation in the several Local Houses and Dominion Parliament on matters with respect to Immigration and other subjects which had been discussed by this Board, as under:

NOVA SCOTIA.—Local House—A. M. Bell, Halifax; E. K. Spinney, Yarmouth; H. J. Logan, Amherst. Dominion Parliament—G. E. Faulkner, Halifax.

NEW BRUNSWICK.—Local House—Geo. Watt, Chatham; W. F. Humphrey, Montcalm; E. A. McCurdy, Newcastle. Dominion Parliament—J. E. Masters, Moncton.

PRINCE EDWARD ISLAND.—Local House—W. Stewart, Summerside; E. T. Higgs, Charlottetown; G. A. Thompson, Montague. Dominion Parliament—Horace Haszard, Charlottetown.

On the 12th December last a circular was sent to all the Boards calling attention to a notice given by E. N. Rhodes, M. P. for Cumberland Co., N. S., on Immigration, along the lines of the resolution passed by this Board on that subject, and asking that the several Boards pass resolutions in support of Mr. Rhodes' motion, and send copies of same to him in order to strengthen his hands in the good work.

Canadian Grocer Copies Distributed.

Five hundred copies of The Canadian Grocer containing a full account of the Annual Meeting were distributed to the Boards in the month of September. This Board is under a debt of obligation to the McLean Publishing Co. for its very full report yearly of its proceedings.

Un-affiliated Boards.

Invitations to become affiliated with this board have been given the Sydney, New Glasgow, Sussex and Fredericton Boards of Trade, but without response.

Finances.

A number of the Boards failed to remit their per capita rate, and are still in arrears for the year 1910-1911 with the result that there is an empty treasury. They have been twice written to but without result.

Present Meeting.

On the suggestion of Mr. Saunders, secretary of the Halifax Board, I wrote Richard Grigg, Commissioner of Commerce, inviting him to attend and address the members on the new statistical branch of the Dept. of Trade and Commerce which it is proposed to establish to deal with Inter-province Trade as well as Foreign, and for which he desires to enlist the assistance of the Local Boards of Trade.

He regrets that pressure of work at Ottawa prevents his being present at this meeting.

I also wrote M. D. Coolen, secretary of Trades and Labor Council, Halifax, inviting that body to send a delegate to this Board to take part in the discussion of the subject—Workman's Compensation Act—suggested by the Halifax Board; and have received a reply stating they will endeavor to send a representative.

Invitations to Members of Parliament and of Houses of Assembly.

In accordance with the resolution passed at the last meeting invitations have been sent to the Dominion members and the members of each of the Legislative Assemblies to be present at this meeting and assist at its deliberations.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

Yours truly,

T. WILLIAMS, Secretary.

Moved by Wm. Yould and seconded by C. E. Bentley. In seconding the resolution, Mr. Bentley wished that a vote should be included, thanking Mr. Williams for his most exhaustive and interesting report. (Carried.)

Mr. Williams in thanking the Board told them how many discouragments had been met and referred especially to one thriving city not far away.

Instead of the President giving his address then, it was decided to adjourn until 2 p. m.

Prior to adjourning the committee reported a revision of the subjects and it was moved by Captain Read, seconded by Mr. McKenzie, that it be adopted. (Carried.)

WEDNESDAY AFTERNOON SESSION

Address of the President.

Promptly at 2 P.M., the meeting reassembled and was opened by the annual address of the president D. Dunbar. He spoke as follows:—

Members of the Maritime Board of Trade,

Gentlemen:

"On behalf of the town of Truro, and the Truro Board of Trade, I extend to you our heartiest welcome, and hope that your brief visit here will be of pleasure to you individually and productive of future prosperity for the business interests of the various towns which you have the honor to represent.

"The programme tells you the object of a meeting here together, on the 18th anniversary of the Maritime Board of Trade. The subjects for discussion are of the utmost importance to the welfare of the Maritime Provinces.

Good Results Achieved.

"Last year's discussion of the various matters affecting these Provinces resulted in much good, and with your permission, I will review them:

"1. INSPETION OF FARM PRODUCTS:—The inspection of fruits for export trade is becoming more thorough. the Dominion Government is disposed to punish parties who attempt to evade the provisions of the Act; but the inspection of articles for local consumption is a matter for the Provincial authorities, and they do not appear to be willing to incur the expenditure incident to such inspection.

"2. GOOD ROADS:—The several provincial Governments claim to be doing all that is possible with the funds at their disposal; it is a matter of regret that the bill brought down during the last session of the Federal House by the Government for the improvement of our highways was defeated, as the construction and maintenance of a few first class leading roads through the provinces would not only relieve the Provincial Government of that expenditure and thus provide more funds for the by-roads; but they would prove such object lessons, to the farmer and others of the advantages of good roads, as must lead to a willingness to submit to the taxation necessary for the same. I feel this is a question that should receive your most favorable consideration. The advantages of good roads are many and need not be enumerated here.

"The Maritime Provinces would stand to gain far more than the cost of a national highway through increase of tourist travel as well as being an incentive for the making of other roads. Until we get a little of the Western spirit of enthusiasm and confidence in the future of our provinces, it need not surprise us if immigrants pass us by, and our sons and our daughters turn their backs to the old homesteads and seek their fortunes in the land of the setting sun.

E. T. HIGGS, Charlottetown, P.E.I.,
Elected to the position of First Vice-President.

Trade with West Indies.

"3. BETTER TRADE RELATIONS WITH CUBA AND THE WEST INDIA ISLANDS: — The negotiations of the Honorable Minister of Trade and Commerce of Canada with the leading British West India Islands and the adoption of preferential duties is being followed by negotiations with the Canadian Pacific Railway with respect to an improved steamship service with the West Indies. If these negotiations are called to a successful issue, a service similar to that of the Canadian Pacific Railway Company's service elsewhere may be looked for and the business both passenger and freight popularized.

"4. MARITIME UNION:—A committee was appointed in accordance with last year's resolutions, but little has been done. It is doubtful if it is advisable to move just at the present time, but the committee should be continued, so as to take advantage of the auspicious moment, when public opinion will be aroused in the Maritime Provinces, on the introduction of a new redistribution Act in the Dominion house with the loss of influence at Ottawa which must ensue from the loss of some five or six seats to the lower provinces; and the necessity of Maritime Union is thus emphasized:—

Getting More Desirable Settlers.

"5. ADVERTISING THE MARITIME PROVINCES:—During the past year there has been a closer co-operation between the immigration departments of the Dominion and the Lower Provinces. A more determined effort has been made to induce desirable settlers to remain in these Provinces, and the effort has met with greater success than formerly. There is room for more practical work along these lines. The question is a live one, and I trust we may see even greater results during the coming year. The visit of the body of capitalists from Great Britain arranged by the Financial News of London, England, has enlisted the interests of a large body of people on the other side, in these Provinces. How best to co-operate with Mr. Palmer and his associates in reaping the benefit that should accrue from such a visit is a matter that should exercise the minds of the several boards.

"6. FOREST PROTECTION: — The Provinces of Nova Scotia and New Brunswick appear to be alive to the necessity of the perservation of our timber resources and both have a system of fire protection which if carried out would diminish to a great extent the annual loss from fire. That step is good, but so far we have taken no steps to conserve our forests. Fire and indiscriminate cutting by the lumbermen are fast depleting our forests. We should be looking to the future and making some effort to preserve this part of our natural resources. In Germany they have legislation to conserve the forests and no one can ruthlessly cut down trees without replanting a certain percentage. By this their future supply is assured.

Need of Commercial Education.

"7. EDUCATION:—It has been said, I think, truly, that the bulwark of a nation is not its army or its dreadnaughts, but its commerce. It therefore behooves us to insure the education of future generations along commercial lines. To do this, it seems to me, that a change in our educational system is necessary. The present system meets the requirements for a professional education, but falls short when tried by the square of commercial efficiency. It would be justifiable to supersede some of the branches taught in our schools by a more thorough training which would enable the young man to enter upon the activities of a business career without a handicap. By a business career, I mean, farming, mining, and any other occupation whereby a man must make his way in competition with the world.

"8. LOCAL BOARDS:—I would like to urge upon you the necessity of the local boards keeping alive during the year and would ask you to assist the officers of the Maritime Board in so far as to have your subjects for discussion sent to the secretary early, thus enabling him at an early date to map out the programme for the ensuing Maritime meeting.

Where Maritime People Lead.

"Gentlemen, I feel that we as a Maritime people have a wonderful heritage, I would take you for a moment back to ancient history, when that wise ruler Solomon traded with that Maritime nation the Phoenicians, he brought back the gold of Ophir.

"The first Colonizers were Maritime people. The first masters of the seas were Maritime, as is likewise the mistress of the seas to-day, and when you read of progressive people you will note that they were men who went down to the sea in ships and beheld the mysteries of the Creator in the deep. I feel I am not extravagant when I say that considering our geographical situation we should one day rule the commercial world. Our three provinces are a Trinity a (three in one) with a multiplicity of resources which should easily enable us to lead all Canada in the industrial race. We have coal in Nova Scotia, petroleum in New Brunswick, and in the fertile garden of the Gulf of P.E.I. enough food stuffs could be raised to feed all three, and which when the car ferry is established will be more than ever closely linked with her sister provinces.

"I feel that we can well afford to be optimistic about the future. Our destiny is in our own keeping. God has bountifully endowed us with everything wherewith to achieve commercial greatness. Our harbors are the finest in the world and are so situated that the ocean's path from here, and there, to everywhere, is via the Maritime Provinces. We, as the Maritime people, have a record for stability and honesty; let us make use of the good things, Providence has placed within our grasp and achieve the distinction of being progressive, as well.

"In conclusion gentlemen, I would thank you for electing me to this honorable position, and again express the wish that our deliberations here, may be productive of measures that will advance the interests of our fair provinces."

Great applause greeted the president and the report was adopted on motion of E. A. Saunders, seconded by A. M. Bell.

Heated Cars Wanted.

Mr. Fawcett took up the question embodied in the Sackville, N.B., subject, namely, that the railways should furnish heated cars when required, for the protection from frost of potatoes and other perishable freight. He pointed out that the I.C.R. should employ heated cars. He had lost a great deal in potato shipping last winter. He had tried his best with the railway authorities at Moncton, and had received lots of promises, but no tangible thing had been done. Many successful trips of perishable goods on the C.P.R. and other railways were detailed. He felt that if the Maritime Board would help, a change could be accomplished.

DR. DUNBAR, Truro, N.S.,
The Retiring President of the Board.

An Absence of M.P.'s.

Captain Read, in seconding the resolution, spoke of his potato shipping experience. He believed that properly heated cars would benefit everyone in commercial occupations. There was some excuse for the I.C.R. not having these cars, as they were a new idea. Last year potatoes were shipped in car loads to Cobalt, and in some cases were delivered there at a temperature of thirty degrees below zero. He regretted that so few members of parliament were present. Surely the Federal members should see the need of being at these meetings. They would do better to listen to these deliberations than to be sitting around the Russell House in Ottawa.

K. J. Mackenzie suggested that some of these men interested should be chosen a committee to call upon the Government, which would force this resolution into active life.

The resolution was put and carried unanimously.

A Question of Standards.

The Moncton resolution as follows was taken up by M. Lodge:—

"Whereas the Eastern terminus of the Transcontinental Railway is at Moncton, N. B., and

"Whereas the present route of the Transcontinental Railway between Moncton and the Atlantic Seaboard prevents the securing of the standard grades of the said National Transcontinental Railway, and

"Whereas it is necessary in order to secure a truly Transcontinental Railway that such standard grades should be provided,

"THEREFORE RESOLVED, that this Maritime Board of Trade call upon the Government of Canada to complete, with the least possible delay, a double track of the Intercolonial Railway between Moncton and the Atlantic Seaboard, and, it is necesary in order to secure the said standard grades that the second line be built through territory not now traversed by the present track of the Intercolonial Railway."

Mr. Lodge continued: "In presenting the foregoing resolution, I wish to state that I approach the subject with a great deal of diffidence. It is my opinion that the question of Railways and their extensions in the Maritime Provinces should have been brought to the attention of this Board and discussed by a railroad engineer or some practical railway man. Therefore, you must bear with me if I, in my remarks, do not keep very closely to engineering facts. It is my purpose to frankly place the matter before you on the broader basis of railway extension and development of the Maritime Provinces.

"When our Board of Trade decided that this subject was to be handled by me, I immediately sought the best information possible on the different routes. I found an article contributed in April of this year with a sketch plan of the route from Moncton to Halifax Harbor independent of the main line of the I. C. R. We find on this plan a line drawn from Moncton to Pugwash Junction. Then the Short Line of the I. C. R. is used from Pugwash Junction to Scotsburn, and then a direct line across country from Scotsburn to Glengary, from Glengary to Deans, from Deans to Dartmouth.

From Moncton to Dartmouth.

"So far as I can learn, there has never been any survey made of this route, and the information I have is very general. Whether it is possible to obtain a 4-10 grade going east and a 6-10 grade west is at the present time unknown to anybody.

"The distance from Moncton to Dartmouth by this route it is stated, is 10 to 20 miles longer than the present I. C. R. route. I find this statement in the article above mentioned, but said article is so full of generalities that I think the distance of '10 to 20 miles longer' must be accepted as an approximation. The writer of this article states the gradients will be about one per cent. For a few miles out of Dartmouth the line is rough, but when the Musquodoboit is reached the gradients are exceedingly easy.

"In fact, the same general statement is made in regard to the whole line from Dartmouth to Painsec Junction.

"We must ever keep before us the fact that a one per cent. grade is no longer of any use in the extension of the great Transcontinental roads to the sea; so future railway building in the Maritime Provinces must be discussed along the line of a 4-10 grade going east and 6-10 west, and no difference what projects or routes promoters may have in mind, it behooves the Maritime Board of Trade to interdict any route which does not come up to the standard. So far, it has not been shown that this proposed route is any better having regard to grades than the present Intercolonial. The distance is greater, and another objection I fear is that it does not at any point touch the towns of Dorchester, Sackville, Amherst, Springhill, Oxford, Truro, Pictou or New Glasgow. Still, possibly that would not in any way interfere with this route being carried through, provided it were the only route upon which a 4-10 grade could be secured from Moncton to Halifax.

The Plan Originally Suggested.

"When this route was first projected some years ago by the late Hon. B. F. Pearson and others, we believe it was their idea to carry it through to County Harbor, and if that were the port sought and not Halifax, then the greater reason for having the survey made immediately. This may not sound good to our Halifax friends, but there are people who believe that County Harbor may some day become one of the great Atlantic ports. However, I am not here to advocate any particular port or route, only to try and show you in my feeble way why we should have better railway facilities than the present to connect with the Atlantic Seaboard.

"I am indebted to James Taylor, C.E., for a map showing the grades of the Intercolonial Railway from Moncton to Halifax, and for all information regarding grades, etc. For your information I may say that from Oxford Junction to Debert you have a full one per cent. grade both ways, and much more at some points. One engineer says that the line can be double tracked from Moncton to Halifax giving practically a 4-10 grade going east and 6-10 west with only ten miles, where they would have to use a pusher over the Cobequid Mountains, and I have the highest respect for this engineer's judgment. But a ten mile pusher is a great obstacle, and would not make the double tracking of the I. C. R. from Debert to Oxford Junction feasable, in my opinion.

"Another engineer informs me that instead of ten miles there would be nearer thirty miles where they would require a pusher. Certainly a glance at this map from Athol Station to Belmont shows that the whole line must be reduced and practically rebuilt to get any way near the grade required for the great Transcontinental roads.

Another Route Necessary.

"From Dorchester to Sackville the present grade can be avoided by building a loop which will make the road

T. WILLIAMS, Moncton, N.B.,.
The Permanent Secretary, who presented an exhaustive report.

three miles longer between these two points. So the fact still stares us in the face that we must needs have some way of reaching the Atlantic Seaboard from Moncton other than the present Intercolonial Railway, and the Resolution suggests another route.

"If you will look at the map I will point out to you a survey that has already been completed under the direction of Jas. Taylor and other engineers, and this route will give a 4-10 grade going east to Truro and a 6-10 west, utilizing the present Intercolonial Railway as far as Amherst or Athol Station, a portion of the Cumberland Coal & Railway Company's road from Newville near Halfway River Lake, to a point a few miles outside of Parrsboro, where the road strikes east for Five Islands, and thence to Truro. The one fly in our ointment in regard to this route is the Garrish Mountain between Five Islands and Lower Economy. At this point there will have to be a tunnel of one mile, which is not a serious objection when compared to even ten miles of a pusher grade. This tunnel may be avoided by a diversion around the shore. Engineers say it is possible, but the survey is not yet made.

"I find two surveys from Amherst to Newville, one, as we said before, takes the I. C. R. as far as Athol, and the other goes from Amherst direct across Amherst Point, crossing the Nappan River at what is known as 'The Point,' thence to River Herbert traversing up the River Herbert to Newville where it touches the Cumberland Railway & Coal Co.'s line.

The Bridge Objection.

"An objection to this latter proposal is the big bridge over the Nappan River. Competent engineers have estimated that this bridge would cost about $400,000. This, however, is not a serious objection, where a large Transcontinental Road is being built.

"I cannot do better at this moment than to read you an article contributed by Jas. Taylor, C. E., to the Halifax Herald on May 1st of this year.

(Read article.)

"You will note that Mr. Taylor states that the distance from Amherst to Truro would be lengthened only thirteen miles.

"We note that the Halifax Board of Trade had this question under discussion on April 14th, 1908, with the Parrsboro Board of Trade, and the Truro Board of Trade on April 22nd of the same year. So, the route we are now considering has been well discussed by Boards of Trade and by many far-seeing men in Nova Scotia. I find on April 30th, 1908, and May 1st of the same year respectively, two excellent letters on the subject by Edw. Fulton of Bass River.

What C. P. R. Would Like.

"Sir Thomas Shaughnessy in an interview at Halifax on April 20th, 1908, stated that the C. P. R. was anxious to have conections with Halifax, as they were running into every other business centre in Canada. Naturally we would land our passengers at the nearest Port where we have rail connections. We have been trying to get satisfactory running rights over the I. C. R. to St. John for some time but so far have not succeeded.

"Since that date, the C. P. R. we believe have taken over the D. A. R. and its branches in Nova Scotia. No one can doubt that they are deeply interested in a through rail connection to Halifax Harbor. The question before us to-day is, Can we assist in the furtherance of this much desired end? We want the C. P. R., the Grand Trunk Pacific and the Canadian Northern to seek on outlet on the Atlantic Seaboard through Nova Scotia at the earliest possible moment, and we should be up and doing and urge the Government to have the most feas-able route outlined and the contracts let for the building of a road or roads to take care of the traffic of these great Transcontinental lines from Moncton through the eastern portion of New Brunswick and thence through Nova Scotia to some Atlantic Port.

A Fine Country Traversed.

"The first route mentioned in the motion before this meeting may or may not be practicable; the surveyors alone will determine. There is no question but it passes through an excellent country and will open up new districts in both New Brunswick and Nova Scotia.

"The present route of the I. C. R. seems only to be a question of whether the engineers can double track the present route and operate more profitably than they can by building a separate route from Moncton or Amherst."

"Gradients are everything. At a banquet tendered to the foreign delegates of the International Railway Congress at Montreal, on May 24th 1905, the Hon. H. R. Emmerson, then Minister of Railways and Canals, said in part:—When I tell you that the gradients of the I. C. R., are in many places more than one per cent., you will realize the benefits that can be secured to the transportation facilities of Canada by the construction of this new transcontinental line with its magnificent gradients and curves. To realize what this result means to Canada it is only necessary to make a few comparisons from the operating standpoint between the Continental and the Transcontinental Railway.

Greater Haul Could be Made.

"The same power which now hauls 660 tons on the Inter-colonial Railway will, over the new line haul 1,260 tons eastbound and 990 tons west bound—that means in its relation to the cost of operating, that while it costs the Intercolonial 73c. per ton between the Quebec Bridge and Moncton, it will cost the Grand Trunk Pacific only 43c. per ton.

"Carrying the comparison a step further, it will be seen that ten loaded trains travelling daily in both directions over the new railway between the Quebec Bridge and Moncton, will be run at an annual saving of $2,157,544.00, as against the costs between these same points over the Intercolonial Railway.

"This saving to which I have referred if capitalized at 4 per cent. gives the large sum of $53,938,623.00. In other words, ten trains loaded at their maximum capacity on the Transcontinental Railway will accomplish what it now requires 34 trains to do on the Intercolonial Railway."

From Grand Trunk Official.

"Upon the same occasion the late Chas. M. Hayes stated:—We will cross this continent with a gradient not exceeding 21 feet to the mile in the direction of traffic. We will have a short line to the far West, Japan and China. This line will be the only Transcontinental line owning and operating its own terminals on both the Atlantic and Pacific oceans."

"Jas. J. Taylor in his report states that in his opinion "if the transportation benefits of the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway are to be extended to Nova Scotia and the Port of Halifax, I have to say that the route between Amherst and Truro, upon which I am now reporting is the only one offering the grade standard of 21 feet per mile and probably less."

"This line, Mr. Taylor says, will serve a population of over 20,000 people between Amherst and Truro and an ever-growing manufacturing and mining district.

H. J. LOGAN, Amherst, N.S.,
A debater on many of the Convention subjects.

Has Reached A Period.

"The Trancontinental has come to a full stop at present at Moncton. The C. P. R. is looking longingly for another outlet on the Atlantic Seaboard other than St. John, particularly for its passenger traffic. We are aware of the great objections made to the building of the Grand Trunk Pacific to Moncton. The members of Parliament from Nova Scotia and New Brunswick practically forced the government to build the road from Quebec to Moncton. Are the commercial forces of this province and New Brunswick going to allow that great highway to stop at that point?"

"We must now agitate for the road to be built on some one of the projected routes so as to bring not only the Transcontinental but any other of the great systems that may wish to find a port shores of the Minas Basin which I knew on the Atlantic Coast.

"This Board of Trade is not here to advocate the interests of promoters or speculators in railway franchises. We believe that the Federal Government having gone so far should now complete this end of the great Transcontinental system. There is much of course to be said in favor of Government ownership of railways, but if government ownership stands in the way of progress in these Maritime Provinces, then it must be swept aside. I may be permitted to say just here that my opinion has changed in the last few years in regard to the supposed great advantage the Intercolonial Railway (as the only railway) has been to the Maritime Provinces. Is it not possible that if the C. P. R. had been built through to Halifax years ago that they would have been the means of developing these eastern provinces as they have the west?

Request for Quick Action.

"We must get back to the resolution. I trust that this Maritime Board will now take immediate steps to bring to the notice of the Federal Government the fact that they should proceed at once to construct a railway from Moncton to Halifax by some route that will give to us a transcontinental road such as now has its terminus in Moncton. This work should be started immediately. Let us have the road and that quickly.

"The trade of the country demands it, the products of the west must be moved to the seaboard and the winter ports. The growing passenger traffic from the Continent of Europe coming through our Eastern ports must be moved westward over the great Transcontinental systems which must have their terminus on the Atlantic seaboard.

"The route from Amherst or Athol via Parrsboro, or what I should term the Minas Basin route, appeals to me very strongly, because it will more effectually open up the Cumberland coal fields and the magnificent marshes of Minudie and the River Hebert. It will in passing from Parrsboro to Truro traverse one of the most beautiful sections of country in the whole province of Nova Scotia, which is not only rich agriculturally, but has great possibilities for fishing and game. The scenery along the Minas Basin is magnificent. Five Islands, Economy and Parrsboro should become the tourists Mecca if proper railway facilities were furnished.

"It is not my province to direct the attention of this Board particularly to any one route. I am sure you will pardon my leaning towards the latter one mentioned when you know it passes through a part of the County of Cumberland in which I was born, and along the shores of the Minas Basin, which I knew as a boy. No doubt there are many places more beautiful and more picturesque in the world, but while I have been for many years a resident of another province, I always come back to dear old Nova Scotia feeling that it is the grandest and best of them all."

Mr. Lodge was fortified by good maps which he placed on the wall, and illumined his speech by frequent references to them, and certainly he was received with great appreciative applause.

During the address he quoted articles from various daily papers contributed by a capable engineer, and dealing with the claims he was making for his resolution.

Hance Logan, in seconding the resolution, paid a compliment to Mr. Lodge's ability and care in his address, and he wished to say that the pith of the resolution was by all means one of the most important subjects before the Board. It was more; it was vital to the city of Amherst, to the city of Halifax, in fact to the Dominion of Canada. The construction of the G, T, P. from Quebec to Moncton was forced through. Its work was private history. He hoped it would be written some day. Maritime members of Parliament allowed the stop at Moncton under a compromise.

If the Maritime members insisted as the western men did, the G. T. P. would be now in the course of construction from Moncton to Halifax. If the western men wanted anything they demanded it or forced the Government out. They did not say "please" nor did they stand back as the Maritime men did. The four-tenths grade should be in existence from Prince Rupert to the Atlantic Seaboard. The Government was not building the road for the G. T. P.—it was for the people of Canada, and all railways. The Government bill provided that this N. T. Ry. should give running rights to all railways. That was a part of the bill. Excellent surveys had been made and the railway must be built as it was the best link in the whole railway.

He had dined recently with Premier McBride of British Columbia, who stated that in that Province alone he was spending this year over eight million dollars on the highways. Surely the expenditure of money would not stop the completion of the N. T. R. from Moncton to Halifax.

He referred to the two pulling forces of politics which drove the old railway up on top of the Cobequid Mountains. No new road would be wisely built if it paralleled the old road.

"Do it now," was the great slogan to keep before the Government, and the double track would be built from Moncton to Halifax. It would be "blossoming like the rose" for the entire east, and would show the world that the Maritime Provinces were even greater than was ever told or prophesied. (Applause.)

General Running Rights.

A. M. Bell spoke on the subject and referred to other grades than those noted on the resolution. He pointed out that as he understood the agreement of the government, it allowed running rights of all railways.

Nova Scotians should demand their rights, should claim their rights to connection with a transcontinental railway. He thought Nova Scotians should stand together and see that the connection from Moncton to the seaboard should be modern in every way.

Captain Read referred to a port in P. E. I. which would be a fine terminus for the N. T. Ry., namely, Georgetown. The harbor was perfect, and as a connection it would be fifty miles nearer Moncton than Halifax, and would be 150 miles nearer the docks of Liverpool. This place, with modern car ferry over the Northumberland Straits, would make a perfect port. There was no fog in Georgetown. However, he would not oppose the resolution as it was proper and reasonable. (Applause.)

A. M. BELL, Halifax, N.S.,
A prominent debater of the Convention for many years.

Mr. Youll said the double tracking idea appealed to him. The port need not be discussed, as the company building the railway would choose the port. Away back in 1876 the C. P. R. was bitterly opposed in the Maritime Provinces. It was very well to say "get busy," "do it now," etc., but he knew this Board had passed fine resolutions before and nothing had come of them. How were they going to go about it? Perhaps each individual Board of Trade might take up the subject and bring it before the various members of Parliament and thus forward the resolutions into real action.

Mr. Lodge spoke again and pointed out that something practical must be done. Committees must be appointed at once if any force would attach to these ideas. The Government must be seen and strongly appealed to. The chief engineer of the Government had very unjustly said that it would be a crime to build N. T. R. from Moncton to Halifax. Individual effort must be made. He was going after their local member of Parliament and he hoped others would do similarly.

Captain Elderkin stated it was plain that if the Government did not build this road the traffic would go elsewhere and possibly not in Canada. We should appoint a committee to deal with all railway questions with the Government. Cost of money was not to be considered any deterrent.

Frank A. McEcken asked what were the duties of the Council of the Maritime Board, as these resolutions being carried out depended upon it.

The secretary read the by-laws re this section of the body. In doing so, he said the whole trouble was that the local Boards did not take themselves seriously.

James Stairs, of New Glasgow, considered this question most important. They had heard the reason why the Board was not more effective and he would suggest that every delegate present who was interested in this resolution should meet after the gathering and name a date for a future meeting of these said delegates. Then, they would decide upon how to meet the Government.

Courtesies From the M. P.'s

Hance Logan, as a member of Parliament for 12 years, said it was no use to go home and see your member. A cordial letter was merely their response.

A committee should be chosen from men who had something at stake. These men should go to Ottawa and know what they were after and say so and they would get it. He told them just how to do that. "Who's going to pay the bill? We should find men who loved their Province enough to spend money and time on such vital interests," he added.

The question was put and carried unanimously.

Alarmed Over Railway Project.

The following resolution was moved by Hon. C. W. Robinson on behalf of the Moncton Board:

"Resolved, that the Maritime Board of Trade views with much alarm the action of the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway in obtaining charters and existing Railways in the New England States for the purpose of diverting traffic from the Canadian North-west to Boston, Providence and other United States ports; also the recent declaration of the President of the Grand Trunk Railway to the effect that the completion of the Transcontinental road between Winnipeg and Cochrane Junction is being hurried so as to establish a connection with Eastern Canada and the United States via Cochrane Junction and the Parry Sound Railway.

"That this Board is of the opinion that it is most important for Canadian interests that the G. T. P. Railway from Cochrane Junction to Moncton, now approaching, should be finished simultaneously with the mileage from Cochrane Junction to Winnipeg, and that the docks, elevators and car ferry at Quebec and the terminal facilities at St. John and Halifax should be built without delay, so that these cities, as well as Montreal, may be equipped to handle the trade of the Northwest as soon as the Railway is completed, and thus leave no excuse for its diversion to Providence, Boston, Portland and other United States ports;

"That this great public work which will shorten the distance between Winnipeg and the Atlantic by over two hundred miles, was undertaken with the pledge and expectation that its traffic was to be handled at Canadian ports; and without which, the Eastern Provinces would never have consented to the enormous expenditures involved thereby.

The Maritime Board of Trade would thereby respectfully urge upon the Right Honorable R. L. Borden, Prime Minister, the necessity of the earliest possible completion of the Transcontinental Railway from Winnipeg to Moncton, simultaneously with the train ferry at Quebec and the terminal facilities at Maritime Province Ports so that the latter may be in a position to handle the winter export traffic of the Grand Trunk Pacific when that railway is completed."

Of Vital Importance to East.

Mr. Robinson dwelt upon the interests of the East. He told how the East was gradually losing force and representation. And it was owing to their easiness of temperament which allowed this.

The resolution was seconded by J. Harris of Moncton.

Mr. Youll agreed with the resolution. It would be a crying shame to allow traffic from the West, on a railway like the N. T. Ry., to be diverted to U. S. ports. It was vital to attend to this now.

No Occasion for Worry.

Mr. Logan did not like the first part of the resolution which voiced alarm over the purchase of railways in New England. There was no alarm. Secondly, the paragraph re what the president of the G. T. R. said about the construction of the railway between Winnipeg and Cochrane Junction so as to connect with United States. He was sure the president of the G. T. R. had been misreported as it was unreasonable. Resolution should be redrafted.

Hon. Mr. Robinson said the main principle of the resolution was the important point, and he was sure that the pith of the resolution could be maintained without causing any challenge.

J. T. Hawke said he had declined to second the resolution because it did not go far enough in one way, and went too far in another. He believed we should condemn both railways if we condemned any railway. He was in favor of the spirit of the resolution but he thought it should be changed so that all offending railways would be included. He dwelt upon the importance of grades in railways and illustrated how these grades must compete with water routes.

No party politics should enter into this. All the parallels of latitude helped the Maritime Provinces. He proved that, by showing that Maritime Provinces were the base of the triangle which lead across the ocean to the mother country, when traffic with New HON. C. W. ROBINSON, Moncton, N.B., Mainland representative on Telegraphic Service Committee.

York and Toronto and the West were in consideration. He illustrated by a map. It was important that by legislation or by improving avenues of traffic that the traffic born in the N. W. Territories should be diverted through Canadian channels. (Applause.)

Mr. McEcken said the Panama as a factor had not been discussed, and it was one that surely would be interesting.

Hon. Mr. Robinson thought it would be well to adopt suggestion of the secretary which would eliminate first and third clauses, leaving the resolution with second and fourth clauses as complete.

Mr. Lodge, as president of the Moncton Board, was quite willing to allow these changes.

This was done, and the resolution placed before the meeting. It was carried.

Mr. McEcken brought forward the resolution referring to the changing of the Militia Act. He read the following resolution passed by the Inverness, C.B., Board of Trade:—

"Whereas by Section 89 and 90 of Chapter 41 of the Revised Statutes of Canada, 1906—The Militia Act,—the pay, allowance and transport of the Active Militia, when employed in aid of the civil power, are recoverable from the municipality in which they are called upon to act;

"And whereas in 1909, the Active Militia were so called into several of the industrial centres of the province of Nova Scotia, at a cost of many thousands of dollars;

"And whereas the aid thus rendered was for the administration of justice and to conserve the means of livelihood of a large proportion of the population, as well as to conserve a very large part of the revenue of the province of Nova Scotia;

"And whereas the municipalities where this unfortunate condition existed in 1909 suffered severe loss directly thereby, and are now being pressed by the Federal authorities for direct payment of many thousands of dollars, owing to the presence of the militia within their confines at that time;

"And whereas the same condition may arise any day, not only in Nova Scotia, but in the other Maritime Provinces, and in fact, in any of the industrial centres of Canada;

"And whereas this Board deems the compelling of a direct payment by a county or town municipality, that already has suffered loss directly owing to cessation of labor, very inequitable, unfair and unjust, and that the same should be borne by the Provincial or Federal authorities, or both together;

"Resolved, that the Federal Government is hereby asked to amend the Militia Act in this respect, with a view to relieving the town and county municipalities of this burden;

"Further resolved, that the Local Government of Nova Scotia be asked to assist in procuring relief for the municipalities in Nova Scotia, that are now being pressed for payment of this very heavy militia tax;

"Further resolved, that copies of this resolution be sent to the Governor-in-council at Ottawa, and to the Lieutenant Governor-in-council of the different provinces of the Dominion."

Costs in Connection With the Strikes.

He pointed to the strike troubles and the assistance sent by the Militia Dept. The bill of $7,000 for the cost of sending troops for the protection of lines and property. He cited Glace Bay, Spring Hill and other mining points where strikes and militia had entailed cost. He felt the Militia Act should be revised and it was for this reason he spoke in favor of the resolution. The soldiery were called out by the mayor of the town, and it seemed unfair to have to pay for soldiers who were already under payment from the Government. A strike or labor unrest might occur anywhere and there was a community of interest in this unsatisfactory Militia Act. (Applause.)

H. Logan seconded the resolution, and spoke from personal experience. In 1906 he had the honor to take part in getting the Militia Act changed, by moving a resolution in Parliament. He referred to the Spring Hill strike of 15 months duration, when militia were called out. The town of Spring Hill was called upon to pay a debt of $12,000. The only word in favor of the Act was a guard against calling out the Militia as when a mayor knows the cost he would be in no hurry to act. He thought it was an iniquity to force small, impoverished, little towns to pay militia bills. Why should not the Government of Canada pay it? He made a strong plea for the remission of the Act. The general lawfulness of the country was at issue and no one town should be burdened with such an Act. He hoped this resolution would be carried to Ottawa.

Captain Read said there were two sides to the question. The chief reason for the law was, that if tax payers should violate the law such act would recoil upon their own heads. That was sound reason why the Dominion Government should not pay it. The Nova Scotia Government should pay these bills as they received six or seven hundred thousand dollars a year of coal royalties. If any Government body should pay, then Nova Scotia Province was the one. He thought the Board should ask the Nova Scotia Government to pay these bills. He sympathized with small towns in their unhappy condition.
